Trouble with a capital 'T'

By Kevin C. Kennedy
News Editor

NEWTON — The MBTA is an apparently unwilling partner in a deadly dance that is becoming increasingly popular among local youths.

They hide behind the billboards at the Woodland "T" stop, waiting for a train heading into town from the Riverside terminal, the end of the Green Line. The train stops, and the paying passengers get on. When it pulls out again, the young lunatics, hell-bent on kicks, jump on the tail end of the last car and hang on for dear life as the Light Rail Vehicle hurtles down bumpy, swerving tracks at close to 50 miles per hour.

One misstep means catastrophe, but the young demons taunt each other to more and more outrageous extremes. They climb all over the car as it bucks and sways its way to the next stop — up on the roof, near the high voltage wires that power the train; along the sides, where a train coming in the other direction or a stray branch threatens to pluck them off; into the car through the vacant, rear driver's compartment, where they regale passengers with tales of other maniacal, death-defying feats.

"You'll never get to see 15," a passenger tells one panting urchin who has crawled into the rear of the speeding train.

"I already seen 15. But I might never see 18," he says, an insane grin pasted cockeyed on his still-hairless face.

"T" spokesmen pointed out that kids have been jumping on the outside of trollies ever since there were trollies. A sergeant in the Newton Police Department mentioned that he used to do it as a kid. They all agreed that the sheer speed of the new LRVs has seriously escalated the dangers of the activity.

"Six or eight months ago," MBTA spokesman Peter Dimond said, "a young man was almost killed" riding the outside of the cars on the Green Line.

Unidentified thrillseekers, above and below, risk their lives for kicks on the Green Line.

According to Detective John Aylward of the MBTA Police, it is difficult to assess the number of injuries that could afflict the young warriors who indulge in what appears to be some sort of tribal initiation ritual. Since the practice is against the law and punishable in the courts, there is an understandable reluctance to report injuries, Aylward said.

Both Aylward and Dimond admitted, though, that the laws being broken, in this instance, do not carry penalties stiff enough to discourage the

Fire pact funded

By Les Orsini
Staff Writer

NEWTON - Aldermen have approved a firefighters' contract calling for an average of $3,500 in back pay, a 23 percent raise over four years and drug testing language somewhat different from that approved by police in April.

The Board of Aldermen voted unanimously Monday night to appropriate $731,390 for the pact. Firefighters have been without a contract since July 1984.

The 240-member Newton Firefighters Association (NFA) must ratify the agreement, hammered out after eight hours of negotiation between the city and NFA bargaining teams last week.

Richard Ciccone, head of the NFA team, said the contract will probably be posted at fire stations tomorrow and the membership will vote no sooner than next Tuesday. Union bylaws require the pact to be posted seven days before the rank and file cast their ballot.

Ciccone said he expects the membership to favor the agreement. "The guys are happy," he said. "They knew before the last two sessions what the hangup was."

The hangup was drug testing or, more precisely, the union's insistence that the city rehabilitate rather than discipline first-time offenders.

According to Ciccone, the city agreed to rehabilitate a first-time offender if the drug abuse did not take place during work.

"The city will do whatever it can to help this person," said Ciccone. "If it happens on the job, the drug language we've got doesn't cover him."

The contract police approved in April does not make this distinction, he said. In other respects, firefighters' drug language is similar to the version accepted by officers, Ciccone explained.

Richard Kelliher, the city's chief administrative officer, confirmed the contract provides rehabilitation for a firefighter whose first offense does not take place on the job. But his explanation differed slightly from Ciccone's.

"It it's off the job and doesn't impair performance or the ability to perform, then on a first instance the individual would be referred to the city

Youth dies in N.H. crash

LACONIA, N.H. — One Newton man died and two others were injured last weekend as the 1985 Honda Civic they were riding in swerved off a road and hit a tree in the early morning hours, according to Laconia Police Sgt. Timothy Cavanaugh.

Charles Sakakini, 19, was pronounced dead on the scene by Laconia police after being thrown through the windshield by the impact "about 30 feet across the road" from the car, Cavanaugh said. Richard Claflin, 19, and Fran Yerardi, 18, both of Newton, were taken to Lakes Regional General Hospital, where they are listed in stable condition.

Cavanaugh said Claflin suffered facial lacerations and a serious eye injury while Yerardi suffered a compression fracture of the spine.

"They were traveling eastbound on Rte. 11B," Cavanaugh said. "The driver could not negotiate a turn and the car went off the road, hit the shoulder and a few trees and went back on the road."

Cavanaugh said he could not yet determine how fast the car, registered to a Sandra Baines of Hooksett, N.H., was going, adding the accident is still under investigation.

"There was alcohol involved in the accident," he said.

Cavanaugh said Baines, Claflin and Yerardi were pulled from the car by Laconia and Gilford, New

Home prices 'levelling off'

By Les Orsini
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Real estate prices, which have been soaring to record heights the last two years, have begun to level off, according to two area realtors.

The increase over the next twelve months may be half the average of the last two years, they have predicted.

"The period we've had of astounding increases in prices, we've come to the end of that," said Roy Mennell, owner of Gallery Realty.

Statistics compiled by Mennell show the price of Newton homes rose an average of 33 percent in 1984 and 31 percent in 1985. "We may well see market price growth slow to around 15 percent this year and maybe even less the next," he said in his June newsletter.

In recent interviews, Mennell and Deborah Stein of Ellen Biren Associates in Chestnut Hill stressed the area's housing-price boom is not turning to a bust. Prices are simply climbing less rapidly now and the local real estate market is starting to resemble the national picture, Stein said.

At the same time, it appears the number of residents wishing to sell their homes has increased. A recent Boston Globe real estate section contained 12 columns of Newton residences up for sale, including 29 homes or condominiums being advertised for the first time.

The Sunday Globe for July 7, 1985 - 51 weeks ago - had just 6 1/2

Residents want action on fatal intersection

By Maureen Azzato
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Newton Highlands residents who decided to do something about the dangerous intersection of Woodcliff Road and Route 9, after a fatal accident occurred there several weeks ago, are already seeing some results.

Representative Susan Schur (D-Newton) said the state has agreed to increase police patrols at the hazardous crossing. "There is a need to respond to a long existing problem at this dangerous intersection," she said. "The heart of the problem is the fact that cars travelling on Route 9 speed through the light after it turns red. Some motorists claim there is insufficient warning. Most are moving too quickly to stop."

The short term solution is for the state to patrol regularly the intersection and ticket vehicles that run the light and exceed the 45 m.p.h. speed limit, she said. Possible long-term solutions such as lowering the speed limit, posting more warning signs, installing overhead traffic lights and having a delayed green light for cars on Woodcliff Road will be explored by the Department of Public Works (DPW), according to Schur.

Jonathan Shubow

Area residents are circulating a petition in the neighborhood demanding that the city take some action to make the intersection safer. Oakdale Road Resident Jonathan Shubow said the city must make a "more comprehensive" study of the Route 9 problem because the hazard far exceeds the Woodcliff Road intersection.

"Schur's solutions are exactly what we had in mind, but the whole Route 9 stretch through Newton has to be evaluated," he said. "Nothing has changed, as far as I know, since 1932."

The problem, he said, is the "buck-passing" between the

Real recognition for Highlands Jazz

By Lauren McFalls
Assistant News Editor

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — Last Thursday, at 10:30 in the morning, the mayor of this city put aside all other pressing matters, plunked himself behind a piano and sang.

The occasion was in celebration of Highlands Jazz receiving a $10,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Arts. Mayor Theodore D. Mann, Rep. Susan Schur (D—Newton), and other Highlands Jazz supporters sang-out their cheer for jazz concert sponsor Mario Boccabella at a reception held at the Congregational Church of Newton Highlands.

Later in a speech, Mann said the city would build a music shell in Newton Centre out of earnings from the tricentennial celebration.

"I can see it now," he joked, swooping an arm up then down in a huge arch, "the Mario Boccabella Memorial Shell."

Reflecting back, Boccabella said the company began with "a little dream" 3½ years ago. During the past season, Highlands Jazz, a nonprofit organization which brings

He wants to do something that will 'make a difference'

By Maureen Azzato
Staff Writer

NEWTON - He does not fit the yuppie sterotype of the 80s. His dreams do not include money or power and he has no intention of climbing a corporate ladder. What's left you ask?

Crop dusting.

He comes from a city where there is no demand for agricultural majors, yet this is Heath Brightman's aspiration.

"Agriculture is the most important asset in our country and apathy has placed farmers in a desperate position," Newton North graduate Brightman says. "The biggest problem is that few people are going into agriculture and it will become a dying field. Most of the food we eat is grown in this country. People can't ignore the financial squeeze that is forcing long-time farmers out of business."

The "apathetic" yuppie generation, he says, is too short-sighted to see the problems this country will face. Avarice has taken the place of common sense.

"Most kids are going to school with big business ambitions of making loads of money. To me, it's the wrong attitude," he says. "Most of them are going straight to college without any work experience. You just can't teach someone common sense."

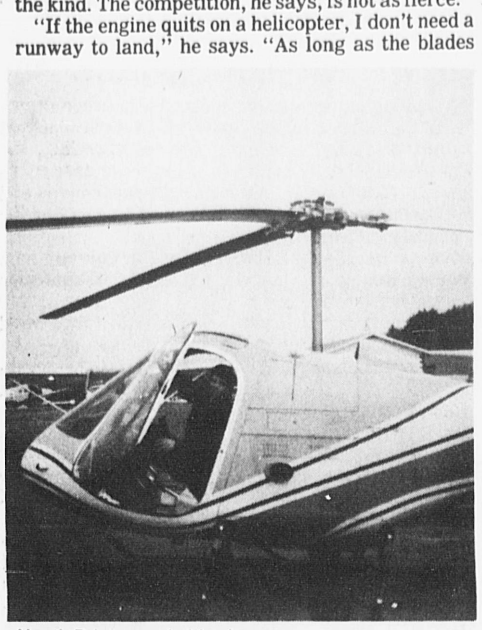
He wants to do something "that will make a difference." It is more important for him to enjoy what he's doing rather than making big bucks.

His tastes are simple.

"The money won't be great, but that's not a big thing for me," he says. "All I want is to be comfortable with a wife and kids and a small place of my own out in the country."

Brightman has chosen to get a helicopter rather than an airplane pilot's license because helicopters are more versatile and there are few good pilots of the kind. The competition, he says, is not as fierce.

"If the engine quits on a helicopter, I don't need a runway to land," he says. "As long as the blades are going I can land almost anywhere."



Heath Brightman in his chopper

> 'Most kids are going to school with big business ambitions of making loads of money. To me, it's the wrong attitude.'
> Heath Brightman

Brightman refers to a helicopter as a "work horse" that will make him a better pilot because it's much more complicated to fly and requires "intense concentration."

According to his flying instructor, Lorin Johnson, the market for helicopter pilots is growing. Brightman has taken about 80 hours of flying lessons. While the Federal Aviation Administration only requires a pilot to have 40 hours, Johnson says the "real life figure is considerably higher."

Helicopters are not inherently stable like airplanes, he says. Flying them is "mentally exhausting because they need to be steered all the time." There is no such thing as automatic pilot in a helicopter, he added.

Brightman plans to go to the University of Massachusetts at Amherst in September to major in agricultural economics in the school of food and natural resources.

"I'm a little nervous about studying agriculture in the east," he says. "It might be so much different in the midwest, where I would be looking for a job."

He eventually hopes to own an agricultural aviation service, but he is afraid reality might shatter the dream and he might be forced into the corporate world.

"Helicopters will be used much more in the future for corporate security," Johnson said. "You can go from building to building and land on the roofs rather than using an airport. The job market will grow, but so will pilot's requirments."

If he goes into the lucrative corporate piloting business or "rig hopping" for oil companies, Brightman says it would change his life plan. "Rig hopping is very dangerous because they fly rain, sleet or snow to various oil rigs in the ocean, and the odds are against you," he says. "If that's what I'm forced to do, I'd have to think twice about having a family."

Brightman also applied to the armed forces, but was rejected because he does not have perfect vision. But he is enrolled in the R.O.T.C. program at U.M.A. and will graduate an officer.

"I'm not real big on flying in combat, but I feel a sense of duty to my country because my country has done a lot for me," he says. "I'm also trying to keep all my options open."

Building ban backer 'disappointed'

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The leader of the push for a moratorium says the controversial building ban has had no effect since being enacted in March.

In addition, moratorium lobbyist Thomas Paulini says he will seek an injunction against the city's contention that the ban is a zone change, allowing developers who filed perimeter plans — which protect the zoning class of a parcel of land for three years — to continue building without aldermanic approval.

"This whole thing is a farce. The real reasons for the moratorium have been lost in the shuffle," Paulini says. "We are very disappointed in the way things have gone."

The blame, according to Paulini, lies with the city and the Board of Aldermen, who he says "watered down" the ordinance.

"There has been a real effort to take the teeth out of this thing," he says. "The real reason we asked for this is that we were not happy with the job the board was doing, especially the Land Use Committee. We thought the moratorium would take some of the process away from them, but now it seems as if they are in even more control over the makeup of different neighborhoods."

Paulini says he will challenge in court the Law Department's ruling that the moratorium is a zone change. Under that ruling, any developer filing a perimeter plan before March is not affected by the moratorium. As a result, he says "between 30 and 40" perimeter plans were filed prior to the enactment of the ban, which he says actually increased development.

Instead, Paulini says the moratorium is a dimensional control — designed to limit the amount of as-of-right development by forcing builders to seek permision from the board through special permits and site plan approvals.

"The Law Department, which is alligned with a city that has been against the moratorium all along, has no business ruling on this. This is something that will have to be decided in court. I am fully confident that the city's position will be overturned and that any building permits granted will have to be pulled."

Paulini also says he will challenge every permit at the Zoning Board of Appeals. While he is not confident that will make any difference, he says it will allow him to appeal those decisions to a higher court.

For the long run, Paulini says he is gearing up for a signature drive to place a binding referendum question on the 1987 ballot "to make sure that we have something the citizens want that will have enough teeth to deter building in this city."

The moratorium was approved by voters in November on a non-binding ballot question and signed into law in March. The original intent was to halt as-of-right development temporarily until the city's zoning laws are changed.

practice. Trespassing, "interfering with public transportation" and "fare evasion" are the only crime categories applicable to this deadly diversion. Maximum fines are $25.

"It's a misdemeanor violation," Alyward said. "It's relatively minor and there are not a lot of consequences going into court. It's not looked on as a very serious issue."

Given that the legal system is virtually void of an effective deterrent, the MBTA has taken another approach. "Prevention through education" is the company's official stance, according to Aylward. Inform the kids of the dangers of the game and they will stay away from it, is the company's logic.

Both Aylward and Dimond mentioned a recent assembly of 1,000 Brookline High students at which the MBTA spent more than an hour explaining why riding on the outside of "T" cars was an ill-advised practice. The presentation was aimed at making car hopping "an unattractive activity," according to Aylward.

Dimond said the company is "looking to expand our educational program," bringing it to more schools and trying to reach younger students before peer pressure from older kids convinces them to take the leap.

Besides educating kids, the company has some other plans that might defuse the dilettante daredevils. New cars are on the way that are designed without most of the footholds and handholds now readily available.

Also, Aylward said the company has a policing maneuver it can put into place at any time. The plan would put one MBTA police officer, possibly in plain clothes, near a "T" stop to inspect the outside of passing trains. If he sees unwanted, piggyback passengers, he would radio to two colleagues further down the line who would apprehend the culprits when the train stopped.

Aylward could not say if or when such a plan would be put in place; and he admitted the main problem with it would lie in the youths' fleetness of foot and the advantage that would give them over the average MBTA police officer.

Dimond pinned responsiblity for the kids' behavior on their parents and virtually absolved the "T" of any complicity in the matter. "To a large extent, it's the responsibility of the parents to supervise their children," he said. "By and large, there are people in society that will do things not in their best interests, and that's hard to prevent.

"People do irresponsible things all the time," he added. "You'd hope the kids would be taught properly by their parents."

Police chief gets hollow point bullets

NEWTON — The shootout is over and the dust has cleared. Police Chief William Quinn, after months of debate and lobbying, will finally get his hollow point ammunition.

The Board of Aldermen, by a 10-9 margin, Monday night voted to uphold a previous decision allowing Quinn to purchase 10,000 rounds of the hollow point, .357 magnum semi-jacketed ammunition for the Civil Disorder Unit (CDU).

The vote, to deny a motion to reconsider the June 16 board vote supporting Quinn, was the last of two parliamentary curve balls thrown by Alderman Rodney Barker.

Had his request not been approved, Quinn had said he would not have the money to purchase any ammunition to train and equip the special 18-man unit, designed to handle hostage and terrorist situations. Last night's meeting was the last of the fiscal year and Quinn said he would have to come back to the board for the appropriation if his request was denied.

Much of the rhetoric throughout the debate centered on the stopping power of the ammunition and whether or not the use of hollow point bullets is excessive. Last night, hollow point proponents cited a recent hostage situation in Beverly Hills, CA, as further justification for deploying Quinn's ammo.

"Two weeks ago," Alderman Paul Coletti, a staunch hollow point proponent said, "in Beverly Hills, on Rodeo Drive, five hostages were taken at gunpoint at a jewlery store.

"The police there were not equipped or trained to handle the situation. People say this can't happen here, but it did happen in another All-American city and it can happen here. We have to be ready."

Cop's assault trial delayed until Sept. 16

CAMBRIDGE — The trial of a Newton police officer charged with assault and battery on a Waltham man was rescheduled recently until Sept. 16 in Cambridge District Court.

The trial of officer Brian Henderson, was delayed based upon an agreement by the defense and prosecution. According to Asst. Middlesex County District Attorney Caldwell Harrop, the trial was delayed when it appeared that there might not be a judge available to preside over the trial.

Henderson is charged with assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, a police nightstick, on Michael P. Colarusso, of 20 Derby St., Waltham. The alleged assault occurred after Henderson responded to a complaint of an altercation outside of 81 West St., Newton, about midnight on Sept. 27, 1985.

Colarusso, who had been charged with being a disorderly person in connection with a complaint lodged by Henderson, was acquitted of that charge by a six-man jury last May 27.

Bid too high for work on intersections

NEWTON — A traffic improvement project at two intersections will have to wait because the sole bid was much higher than city officials expected.

The only bidder, Gi Gi Construction, offered to do the work for $233,000, "at least 30 to 40 percent higher than we would expect," said James L. Hickey, Department of Public Works (DPW) commissioner.

"I've already recommended to the Purchasing Agent (Blair Kanbar) that it be rejected," said Hickey.

He hopes the next bid can occur in two or three weeks so the work timetable for the two intersections will not be upset. "It's our intent to have them done this construction season," Hickey said.

The city wants to upgrade the junctions of Nahanton Street and Wells Avenue in Newton Highlands and of Rumford Avenue, River Street and Lexington Street in Auburndale.

At the Highlands intersection, the city wants to install a small island to direct traffic and a vehicle-actuated signal to replace the flashing light there now, Hickey said.

A vehicle-activated signal changes only when a driver approaches the intersection. This would prevent Nahanton Street traffic from being stalled unnecessarily.

Plans call for the rounded curbing at the Auburndale intersection to be expanded so it more closely resembles a "T," Hickey said. A vehicle-actuated traffic light will also be installed to replace the existing signal there.

Neither intersection is a hazard now, but the DPW expects traffic increases at both, said Hickey.

Elderly housing and the Grossman Center are expected to bring more vehicles to the Nahanton Street/Wells Avenue intersection, said Hickey. "So the area has been developed," he observed.

The same situation exists at Rumford Avenue, Hickey added. "The necessity of traffic signal improvements have greatly increased," he said.

Phone line set up for drug information

NEWTON - The newly established Police Department Drug Investigation Unit (DIU) has installed a special confidential telephone line so the public can alert detectives of any information they might have concerning drug dealings in the city.

"Dial-a-Tip" is predominantly concerned with drug-related information, but Chief William F. Quinn said it can be used for any crime-related information citizens have.

"I'm very pleased with the work our DIU has done in the past three months, but we need the help of the public who undoubtedly has information to share with us," he said. "If we had a little more cooperation from the public, who could in turn pass the information on to us, we could do the community justice. We're especially concerned with our youth."

A 24-hour answering machine will take messages and tips from people. Callers can either leave their names on the machine or leave an anonymous tip, he said. All calls will be confidential.

"We want as much information as people can give us so we can control and stamp out drugs in Newton," Quinn said. "Although we will investigate anonymous tips, it helps if people would identify themselves so we are sure they are not crank callers giving invalid information."

Citizens with information are urged to call the 24-hour "Dial-a-Tip" line at 552-7282. "All tips will be followed up no matter how small.

Firm misses deadline on traffic project

NEWTON - A state official has confirmed that a Stoughton company has recently made little if any progress to complete a Newton Corner traffic and safety improvement project.

And Wes Macleod-Ball, District 4 liaison for the state Department of Public Works (DPW), said Baker and Company of Stoughton now faces a $300 a day fine.

The company began work 15 months ago and was supposed to have finished the project Monday. City officials have complained about the Baker's performance, saying they've noticed no work being done the past few weeks.

"It's been a negligible amount," Macleod-Ball said of recent progress. "Anytime a project goes beyond the time it was expected to take, it's a concern - especially in a project that impacts so many different interests."

Shoppers, commuters, area employees and vehicles traveling to Boston, Watertown and other areas glut the intersection, he said.

Local officials say it is one of the city's most congested and dangerous. Several streets and Exit 17 of the Massachusetts Turnpike feed traffic into the area.

The state DPW has not decided whether it will levy the $300 a day fines, Macleod-Ball said. Such decisions are usually made after a contractor completes a project, he explained.

The commonwealth can remove a contractor who does not meet construction deadlines. But the DPW has not determined if Baker's performance merits such action, he stressed.

"The quickest way to get this job done is to get Baker to finish it," said Macleod-Ball. "The alternative is to get somebody else and that would take time. Even if that were warranted, that would take time."

Last week, another state official said Baker has actually completed its work, but the company has had problems getting subcontractors to meet deadlines. William Wisenberger, Baker equipment superintendent, said bad weather slowed down subcontractors this spring. He estimated the project would be done by July 15.

Macleod-Ball declined to name the subcontractors, saying the state's contractual relationship is only with the Stoughton company.

The city has been planning the Newton Corner project for over a decade. A few years ago, the federal government granted $1.2 million under its Urban Systems Program for the work. City officials have stressed the state is overseeing the project and they can do little more than complain.

Construction extends along Washington Street from Park to Channing Streets. Work on the synchronized traffic signals - necessary to move vehicles through the intersection smoothly - remains to be done, Macleod-Ball explained.

In addition, a portion of the roadway still must be dug up and an asphalt surface has to be placed over a larger section of Washington Street, said Macleod-Ball. Once that is done, traffic lines must be painted on the street, he said.

Baker was supposed to have the job completed last autumn, but the state granted an extension to June 30. Difficulties with construction design, delays by Boston Edison and Boston Gas in installing utility lines, and conflicts with a private construction project nearby led to the extension, the DPW spokesman said.

The state has so far decided not to grant Baker another extension, and the firm has not requested one, Macleod-Ball said.

Local teacher wins Crocker fellowship

BOSTON — A Newton teacher was among 15 statewide who won fellowships recently enacted by the Legislature to offer incentives for improving the profession.

Karen E. DeRusha of Newton was chosen after screenings and interviews from a field of 84 statewide contenders and 26 finalists.

The 15 fellowships are named for 19th century Boston education reformer Lucretia Crocker, and were announced by the state Board of Education.

Jewels & Gems
BY CAROL
THE GOLD LADY
HYPHENATED GOLD
"Solid gold" does not necessarily mean pure, 24-karat gold. It means only that the item is 10 karats or finer and that it does not have a hollow center. The terms "gold-filled" and "gold-plated" refer to a type of "faux" gold in which a film of gold has been bonded onto some ordinary base metal. In the gold-filling process, the layer of gold must total at least one-twentieth of the total weight of metal in the piece. In gold-plating, the quantity of gold may fall below that amount. The term "vermiel" also indicates a bonding process. However, with vermeil, the metal under the gold is nothing less than sterling silver.
For "pure" beauty in jewelry come see the creative displays at CAROL "THE GOLD LADY". We have what you want in fine gold pieces in chains, rings, earrings and bracelets. Many people are remounting their wedding and engagement rings and we can design the perfect setting for you. Two local men arrested on drug charges

NEWTON — Two Newton men were arrested for drug possession with intent to distribute when police detectives raided an Elliot Terrace home with a search warrant Friday night.

Edward H. Griffin, 23, and Robert G. Lituri, 29, were arrested at the scene after detectives said they allegedly found bags of a white, powdery substance believed to be cocaine and several bags of marijuana. Numerous firearms, drug paraphernalia and records "indicating extensive drug dealings" were also confiscated, Detective Sgt. Arthur Fryar said.

Griffin and Lituri pleaded not guilty to all charges in district court Monday, according to court records. They were both released on personal recognizance by Judge Monte G. Basbas. Their cases were continued to July 10.

Griffin is charged with illegal possession of marijuana, illegal possession of cocaine with intent to distribute and conspiracy to violate controlled substance laws.

Lituri faces charges of illegal possession of marijuana with intent to distribute and conspiracy to violate controlled substance laws.

According to Fryar, neighbors reported suspicious activity at the Elliot Terrace home that directly resulted in the arrests.

Detectives executed the warrant at 6:45 p.m. Friday, and during the search the telephone rang and Detective Edward Aucoin answered the phone. A male voice at the other end of the line identified himself as Robert Lituri and said, "I have a couple of bags with very few seeds and I can be over soon," said police.

Aucoin, not identifying himself as a police officer, told the caller he would be around if he stopped by, and within 10 minutes the suspect arrived at the scene allegedly in possession of marijuana to sell to Griffin, police said.

The suspect entered the Elliot Terrace home and detectives said he identified himself as being the caller. Lituri was searched and detectives said they found two bags "containing brown-green substance believed to be marijuana," in the left front pocket of his slacks.

Lituri told detectives he planned to sell Griffin two bags of marijuana for $35 a piece, police said. Detectives confiscated $117 in cash from Lituri and tagged it as evidence, according to Aucoin.

Fryar said the police department plans to also seek complaints against three other residents who live at the same address, but were not arrested Friday night.

Reuse board wants to lease Bigelow

NEWTON - The aldermanic Real Property Reuse Committee has voted to recommend leasing the Bigelow Junior High School under the stipulation that the eventual tenant make no major alterations to the building.

The committee also decided last week not to release the issue to the full Board of Aldermen until September. This will give any would-be tenants time to put together a proposal to manage the building.

The final decision on whether the city will lease or sell the Bigelow rests with the full board, but the committee's unanimous decision should please the School Committee, local arts groups and Newton Corner residents.

The School Committee voted to close the building in March 1985 because Newton's decreasing number of secondary students no longer justifies keeping open three junior high schools.

The School Department has also projected an increase in the birth rate that could soon crowd the city's elementary schools. To ease possible overcrowding, the department could decide to move grade six to the junior highs and would then need to reclaim the Bigelow as a school.

The School Committee, with that in mind, has asked aldermen not to sell the building or permit major alterations that could preclude its reuse as a school.

Last night, local arts groups gave aldermen other compelling reasons not to sell the Bigelow.

They want to lease the building as a center for their activities and have formed the Bigelow Arts Consortium to achieve that end.

Anne Sullivan, president of the Newton Country Players, said many area artists' organizations need affordable space. Some require offices, others storage room, still others meeting or performing space, she said. Some simply need a mailing address or a spot for a telephone.

Man dies after car crashes into condo

NEWTON — John J. Cullen Jr. officially began his retirement exactly one month ago after 26 years with the Coca Cola Co. in Waltham, where he was a district sales manager. Saturday night he died from injuries incurred when his car crashed into a condominium in the Nahanton Woods complex. Cullen was 55 years old and had lived in Newton Highlands for the last 14 years.

Cullen's wife of 14 years, Elaine, said Monday that he had begun working several months ago as a security guard at the condo complex in order to earn extra money and fill some of his time.

Around 7:15 p.m. Saturday Cullen was making his rounds through the complex. His wife said he was driving through a circle surrounding a fountain near the entrance when his foot apparently slipped off the brake pedal and onto the accelerator. His 1978 Pontiac Catalina crashed into one of the condominiums just off the circle.

Mrs. Cullen said her husband was conscious at the scene of the accident and in the emergency room of Newton-Wellesley Hospital. He died of multiple internal injuries about three hour later.

Stress 'responsible' in bid selection

The arguments over who should be given the next contract for ambulance service in the City of Newton remind us of something Astronaut John Glenn said a while ago.

This was before the tragedy of the shuttle Challenger, before even a hint of the confusion within the ranks of NASA. Glenn was asked by a reporter just what he was thinking as he sat on top of a missle that would propel him into outer space. The first American to orbit in space responded that, while he was strapped in waiting for someone to push the button, he was thinking of what it might mean to him that he was pinning his life on a machine that was constructed by "the lowest responsible bidder."

The city has been assured that its ambulance service will continue for another six months. When the contract is up for consideration again, we hope city officials will remember that, in any situation where the balance between life and death is at stake, we have to stress the word "responsible" in the phrase "lowest responsible bidder."

Miss Liberty rekindles patriotism

Not for a long time has there been a Fourth of July observance as special as that which is about to unfold, and a number of Garden City residents are partially responsible.

Americans have become more complacent than inspired by Independence Day, fixed on backyard barbecues or trips to vacation retreats than on the old home town patriotic hoopla of less sophisticated generations. Notable exceptions can be found where parades, fireworks and oratory still take place, but it is family rather than community togetherness that is uppermost nearly everywhere.

A grand old dame's 100th birthday is what makes 1986 so different, Miss Liberty in New York Harbor getting all the attention she deserves. A four-day celebration starting July 3 will cap a $70 million restoration of the venerable Statue, virtually dismantled for the three-year project which drew extraordinary support from Americans. Because of the electronics marvel that is television, they will be able to live virtually every minute of the extravagent rededication.

Newton residents, young and old, seniors and schoolchildren, all of whom pitched in with time, energy and money to aid the restoration project can feel justifiably proud that they responded to the call.

Dimensions of the extravaganza defy the upcoming imagination. It is no exaggeration to say our nation is on the wave of a rebirth in pariotism. Long gone is the cynicism and divisiveness of the Vietnam years. Americans appear to be more nostalgic, more anxious to look toward what has happened to make their country great, more sentimental about the institutions that are enduring. A President Reagan who so eloquently preaches the gospel of God, appple pie and the American flag has done much to bring this about.

These are prosperous times for the majority of our citizens. The U.S. is fighting no wars. International strife always causes worries, yet each crisis seems to get neutralized or resolved. Government continues to find new ways to give succor to those in need. It is a time when Americans can pause to relish their freedom.

In such an environment, the Statue of Liberty more than ever becomes the symbol of faith in a political system and way of life unmatched anywhere in the world. The torch held aloft is just as much a thrilling sight today, beautifully enhanced by rehabilitation, as it was for those millions of immigrants who shouted with joy on reaching the land of opportunity.

It wasn't difficult to raise the huge sum of money required for restoration. Preserving a national treasure had the greatest possible appeal. Far different is the story of the launching of the construction project in the prior century. While America's great ally, France, was raising funds for the purpose and the creator, Auguste Bartholdi, was pursuing his dream, the effort to obtain voluntary contributions in the U.S. lagged badly. Even Congress resisted, refusing to vote $100,000 for the pedestal in 1883. Gradually, however, our government and its people developed enthusiasm chiefly due to impetus given by a Hungarian immigrant publisher named Joseph Pulitzer.

Help came from a wealthy young Jewish woman named Emma Lazarus, an accomplished writer and advocate for the cause of Jewish refugees. It was she who wrote the poem, "The New Colossus," that contained the immortal lines "Give me your tired, your poor, your huddled masses yearning to breathe free."

Words to revere as a resplendant Miss Liberty proclaims our birthright to the world.

GOPs furiously treading water in an ocean of ink

By Loring Swaim

GOP elders have apparently decided to take matters into their own hands, whatever their "nominees" for top constitutional office do with their flawed "campaigns."

Last Friday, after some hasty consultations and before the state ballot commission ruled on gubernatorial nominee Greg Hyatt's fraudulent petitions, party chairman Andrew Natsios announced the formation of a 35-member search commission for a replacement. Former Gov. John Volpe and current state Sen. David Locke of the Reagan-Bush Committee will chair.

One wonders why this didn't happen six months ago, before the snafu.

Natsios was clearly angered that admitted forged signatures on Hyatt's nomination papers have sullied the rest of the GOP ticket. That ticket includes Natsios himself (doubing as a candidate for state auditor.) With some solid figures in the lower half of the Republican ticket, the GOP's chances in November were theoretically as good as they've been for some time.

Then came Royall Switzler's confession of having embroidered his military record. He withdrew from the gubernatorial race. Then came Democratic challenges of Hyatt's signatures. Then Hyatt's attorney admitted that 1100 appeared forged. And then the commission ruled the challenge of Hyatt was not timely so his name stays on the ballot. Fraudulent papers in such cases are usually turned over to the attorney general.

(In the new Switzler spirit of confession in the party, could one not speculate that Hyatt's forgers might develop ulcers sufficient to compel them to come forward and identify themselves–and take their medicine?)

Meanwhile, Natsios is huffing and puffing partisanly about Gov. Dukakis' knowledge of the Westfield State College difficulties six months ago and failure to sense the gravity of the situation and act decisively.

The same can be said about Natsios and his colleagues; why didn't Republicans sense the difficulties their Switzler and Hyatt candidacies would encounter and move to head them off at the pass?

Something happens to some people when, for whatever reason, they suddenly find themselves the center of media attention.

Part of it is a kind of heady intoxication at the awesome power suddenly accessible among influential organs of information, almost at one's beck and call while it lasts. It's flattering to be called regularly by the NY Times or whomever.

One leaps overnight from obscurity to celebrity. Splashy headlines are only a phone call away. It takes maturity to handle the notoriety–often at the time when maturity might have avoided the crisis in the first place.

Another part is the temptation to use access to the media to make oneself look good–or at least not unfavorable–by putting a little body English on the unfolding story. One can even retaliate for past grievances.

By the same token, our process of imparting information to the public is by no means perfect.

As often as not, a complicated and sensitive story will start unfolding because one, single isolated and incidental incident chances to come to light.

For many of us amateur crime-busters trained by escapist TV, only a few clues need be dropped before we coolly extrapolate the entire scenario, identify the bad guys and wrap up the case.

Standing alone, taken out of context and embellished by vivid imagination, a few bits of information in our newspapers can similarly easily take on a coloration of their own–or reinforce preexisting prejudices. Given brisk competition in today's media, bits and pieces of puzzling information are routed through to the public whether or not they are pivotal or a coverup.

Sometimes the truth never catches up with the illusion.

Imperfect as it is however, it's the best we can come up with–short of state censorship.

'Las Vegas nights' warrant scrutiny

By George B. Merry

Casino gambling pushers are a persistent lot.

Their hopes of transforming Massachusetts into the Nevada of the east or the Atlantic City of New England, have not faded, despite little encouragement from state and local officials.

But they are hardly marking time awaiting a more favorable political climate. Instead they are using a backdoor approach to their potentially very profitable gambling operations. And on the surface, at least, it is all in the name of charity.

The keys to their increasing success are so-called Las Vegas nights or parties at which blackjack, poker and craps tables are the centers of attraction. These gambling activities are allowed to limited extent under state law. For instance, only nonprofit organizations can legally run Las Vegas nights.

All the profits from such gaming operations are supposed to be used to help support the sponsoring organization. That this may not always be the case is underscored by recent suits, filed by state Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti, against two firms that rent casino equipment.

The complaint alleges that one of these enterprises ran a number of Las Vegas nights on the South Shore in which there was either no charitable sponsor or the advertised charitable sponsor was paid for the use of its name. Such instances are not only illegal but are in blatant defiance of the public's best interest.

It raises serious questions as to the fitness of the charitable organizations involved to be connected with any type of legalized gambling.

The 15-year-old statute, under which Las Vegas or Monte Carlo nights are permitted, specifically forbids the suppliers of the gambling equipment from providing dealers or operators. Members of the sponsoring veterans, fraternal or religious organizations are supposed to be in full charge, with no outside help.

The attorney general's complaint cites several of these gambling programs in which representatives from the equipment supplier were blackjack dealers and craps-table operators. Such violations, no matter how isolated they may be, suggest better policing of these gaming activites is needed.

Attorney General Bellotti, who is definitely not a gambling enthusiast, has been increasingly concerned about the encroachment of professionals into such operations, intended to help nonprofit organizations make money to support themselves.

He warns that the Bay State cannot afford to let what he calls "de facto legalized casinos" enter the commonwealth through the back door of charitable Las Vegas nights.

Massachusettts certainly does not need those who either defy or twist the law to their advantage. Obviously the intent of the law is not to put any organziation in the casino business. This is why each is limited to three such gambling programs a year.

But, despite this restriction, there is no shortage of Las Vegas programs. There have been more than 2,000 of them at various Bay State locations since early 1984 and more than 900 last year.

Contributing to the expansion of this type of gambling was 1979 legislation that increased from $5 to $25 the top payoff for each card game or roulette-wheel spin.

Although attendance at these casino-like functions varies from a few dozen to well over a hundred, this is big business and not penny ante. And lest there be any doubt of this, it should be noted that those running Las Vegas nights last year reported combined gross proceeds of $3.9 million. And the actual take could have been even greater. The state has to depend on what the sponsors of various casino-type programs say they took in.

Unlike beano, which is supervised by the state Lottery Commission, Las Vegas nights are under the authority of a variety of state and municipal agencies. Clearly a better arrangement would be to have such operations overseen by a single agency with unquestioned power to shut down instantly those that violate the law.

The Lottery Commission, since it is already involved in overseeing beano, might be the logical watchdog for other types of legalized gaming. In this way that agency could make sure the state gets every penny due in tax proceeds from casino-type functions. Such operations netted the commonwealth just under $200,000 in 1985. That was five percent of reported gross receipts.

If Las Vegas nights or even a facsimile thereof, are to be allowed to continue in Massachusetts, tougher statutes surely are needed to ensure that all such functions are run by legitimate charitable organziations and not supposedly nonprofit groups that exist in little more than name only.

Stiffer penalties for those who violate the law might also be in order and the sooner the better.

Weeks is no housing project

To the editor:

A recent article in the Newton Graphic referred to the John W. Weeks House in Newton Centre as a "housing project." Several residents of the Weeks House, some of whom pay close to $900 a month in rent, were offended by the improper use of this term and asked me to write the Graphic and request a correction.

Please be advised that the John W. Weeks House is a private apartment complex, about equally divided between market-rate and below-market-rate apartments. "Housing projects," on the other hand, are typically owned and operated by Public Housing Authorities and contain 100 percent low-income tenants.

She liked 'As You Like It'

To the editor:

If you want to have a wonderful time on a summer night, and you'd be peculiar if you didn't want to do that, go see the New Rep production of "As You Like It" at the Newton Arts Center.

So many things went well during the performance I saw, on Sunday last, it would be hard to get me to shut up if I got started. Margaret Ulmer has provided fascinating music, the stage set (Steve O'Donnell) is spare, and the diction was so clear throughout, I could understand most of the puns, a rare event in my experience.

Kathryn Lubar is a beautiful and convincing Rosalind and Jay Chiumento's Orlando was as good a match for her as for the gigantic wrestler. So many good tricks--actors doubling as singers, guitarists, wrestlers, acrobats--all with all so much expertise I felt wealthy and fortunate to be part of so lucky an audience.

What keeps us away from Shakespearean productions is "Fear of Bard Butchery." No need to worry, with the New Rep, Steve McConnell seemed to be having a fine time as Touchstone, for instance, and his Audrey with him; and Derek Campell lifted Jacques' "Seven Ages of Man" speech up to where it belongs, among the stars. Every member of the cast kept that standard.

My program tells me where all this talent comes from--not far at all--but not how Larry Lane, the New Rep's guiding light and director, keeps so much comfortable excellence going and keeps it going. It's a great pleasure to think I can see "As You Like It" again weekends through July 5. My thanks to an engaging company for a delightful evening.

'T' sanctions 'triple dipping'

To the Editor:

A recent news item, regarding the manner in which taxpayers dollars are "spent" in Massachusetts, should be cause for serious concern on the part of Watertown citizens.

I am referring to the recent ruling wich allows six MBTA employees, convicted of stealing money from the T fare counting room, to receive full state pensions. This may be the first case of "triple dipping" actually supported by Massachusetts law.

First, the six were public employees. No one, myself included, should have any problem with this. However, the second "dip" took place in the counting room, where the MBTA employees were eventually caught stealing fare receipts. In their subsequent trial all six were convicted. Yet, in spite of their recognized violation of the public trust, the six requested - and received - full public pensions. Thus, the six received not one but three incomes, courtesy of the state treasury. In effect, the commission of a serious crime appears to have no bearing on the manner in which government treats these men.

One does not need to be a professor of government to realize that the message which these pension awards send is a familiar and tired one: business as usual. If we can not swiftly and adequately punish those public employees convicted of a criminal act, why should we be surprised when the taxpaying public continues to view both Beacon Hill and our current criminal justice system with skepticism? What kind of lesson does this send to others who might be contemplating a similar transgression? Finally, who far have we really come in dealing with public corruption since the Ward Commission investigation of a few years back?

Perhaps all of us would secretly like to have a boss as generous and forgiving as the MBTA. But if there is any silver lining in this otherwise cloudy story it is this: if it meant ripping off the taxpayers of Massachusetts and laughing all the way to the bank, 99 percent of us would walk away without hestitation.

E.T. program unfairly panned

To the editor:

The Newton Graphic recently published a column by conservative Loring Swaim which took shots at the results of Massachusetts' Employment and Training Choices program for welfare recipients.

E.T. has placed over 25,000 welfare recipients into unsubsidized full and part-time jobs since October 1983. The average full-time salary obtained through E.T. is $10,600 per year--more than twice the average yearly welfare grant.

Nearly 86 percent of the people who have gone off welfare through E.T. are still off welfare one year later. Since E.T. began, the number of families on welfare has decreased four percent while at the same time caseloads in the nation's 12 largest welfare states increased an average of three percent. This year, E.T. is expected to save taxpayers $107 million in welfare benefits, food stamps and Medicaaid in addition to increased revenue from state and federal taxes.

Mr. Swaim claims in his column that Massachusetts Reresentative Michael Ruane (D-Salem) believes the department is "cooking its books," I have stated the E.T. record. I stand by it. Nowhere in his column does Mr. Swaim dispute these facts.

Mr. Swaim writes that Representative Ruane believes the administration was making an effort to "make it look good by June 30." E.T. already looks good; 25,000 job placements in less than three years is an accomplishment that the citizens of this state can be proud of . Representatives from every state in the country have either visited Massachusetts or written us to learn about E.T.; and six states are now running welfare employment programs modelled after E.T.

I would to corect a number of statements in Mr. Swaim's column.

• The E.T. Springs Forward campaign is an effort to keep improving the quality of E.T. by raising wages. This will make job placements harder to achieve and will not serve to "get the numbers up.." as Mr. Swaim charges. In fact, it will have the opposite effect. July 1 marked the start of the next fiscal year and our goal is to increase the full-time wage obtained through E.T. to $15,000 per year. This is an ambitious goal and the E.T. Springs Forward campaign marks its start.

• It is true that E.T. participants who get full-time jobs through DES are eligible for a transition payment of $100, which helps to pay for clothing, lunches and transportation to and from work. It is a minor investment which yields major savings. For every person placed into a full-time job, the department saves AFDC, Medicaid and food stamp benefits averaging over $7,000 per year. For anyone who is concerned with the bottom line, $100 to help someone make the transition from welfare to work is a worthwhile investment.

• We have no evidence that E.T. participants are "causing monetary problems" at state or community colleges. Approximately 17 percent of E.T. participants choose to take college courses. None of these are tuition free unless a college chooses to waive a tuition requirement. That is up to the college--not the welfare department.

Finally, Representative Ruane--through Mr. Swaim--disputes the validity of the 25,00 job placements. The department provided a compterized list of E.T. job placements to Representative Ruane on June 19.

Truths more self evident than rights

By Diane Morley

Two hundred and ten years ago, we won the War of Independence, and with that victory we gained a good many rights. Now, as individuals in a democratic society, we tend to be very much aware of our rights. We have a lot of them, and they protect us in all sorts of difficult situations.

Often, though, even with all our rights, there are some circumstances beyond our immediate control. As we strive for balance, the fear, frustration, and sense of helplessness we feel as victims fuels an acute awareness of our rights — and conversely, having had a sense of autonomy and power at times increases, through contrast, the pain of feeling victimized.

The two roles — strong individual and helpless victim — can and often do combine to produce a monstrous hybrid: a mindset that perceives our own rights, not others'; one that perceives others' responsibilities, not our own. Sometimes this leads to confusion between rights and rightness.

We read the newspapers to keep track of who's not running the country well, who's wasting our taxes, and who's committing crimes. Our own names appear nowhere on the list, except as implied generic victims. When we notice that something needs doing, our first thought is of the others who should be doing it, not of ourselves.

On trash-collection days in my neighborhood, the sidewalks become an obstacle course of filled upright cans, spilled trash, and emptied cans lying across the walk, dotted here and there with lids. Recently, a well-manicured couple shook their heads as they took giant steps around their own emptied cans to get into their car, obvjously disdainful of the collectors' carelessness and unaware that they also had a share of the responsibility.

Along similar lines, an empty take-out ice cream container lay on a lawn for a week. Here, even more individuals were not responsible. The consumer, finished eating and holding a sticky styrafoam cup, might have glanced around to see if there was a trash can nearby, but then tossed it, feeling no responsibility beyond that.

The person on whose lawn it landed or blew left it there, perhaps as a testament to others' carelessness. If the joggers or pedestrians noticed the container, it was probably only to wonder why the houseowner didn't seem to care about the trash in an otherwise impeccable yard. It sat close to the edge of the walk, where any one of us might simply have stooped over and picked it up. Multiply the incident many times for a look at the major littering problem in our cities.

For years, I gave the rights of individuals (my own and others') the same protective nurturing that I would give flowers. Like flowers, rights are easily trampled. But just as we wouldn't allow flowers to spread without limit or neglect the root systems needed to support showy growth, we shouldn't allow individual rights to grow wild, unlimited by societal needs.

With no limitation on rights, even criminal acts can easily be justified. But all this sounds terribly objective and impersonal. Let's get to personal responsibility.

Should looking out for one's rights preclude concern for others?

The word responsibility means the ability to respond, yet as the scales fall from my eyes, I notice how often we define what is not our responsibility rather than what is.

Housemates sometimes define roles by setting limits rather than by expressing willingness to assume tasks. Home after work, one opens the refrigerator door and calls out, "Hey, I love the lush green growth on the fried rice! What kind of fertilizer do you use?"

The other replies, "So I forgot the fried rice. Large item. I'm not in charge of the refrigerator."

"Neither am I," shoots back the first, "and if your rice attacks my salad, prepare to die, slime!"

Job descriptions, once seen as a protection for both employer and employee, increasingly are valued as a means of limiting responsibilities rather than of defining them.

A notice of new property ownership sent to the city treasurer received a return notice directing me to contact the Board of Assessors. The assessors are down the hall from the treasurer. But never mind keeping one's own records up-to-date, cooperation between city agencies, or wasted time and postage — it was not the treasurer's responsibility.

When numerous telephone messages left at a local school did not produce a return call, I asked the switchboard receptionist when might be a better time to call to reach the teacher. "Sorry," she chanted,

"All I can do
Is take your number
And leave a message."

An answering machine can handle that much responsbility!

Should looking out for one's rights preclude concern for others? Is it a sign of weakness or foolishness to go a little beyond the minimum requirements of one's employment to assist other individuals or simply for job integrity?

Our friends laughed when they heard that we had actually called our city transportation agency for travel information. It seemed a logical approach at the time. But we're learning the ropes now. For six months my husband's commute time was doubled because of a clerk's incorrect answer to a specific question. Upon learning this, I didn't call the agency to let them know that the train does indeed stop at Back Bay, because I could imagine the response:

"Yeah, well, look lady, I didn't talk to your husband and I don't know who did. I'm not responsible for all the people who work around here. Yeah, I can leave a message for the supervisor. No, I don't know when she'll be back. I'm not responsible for her hours either, lady."

I'm afraid I would slam the phone down and break the receiver — for which New England Telephone is no longer responsible.

A report of some months back was a real hair-raiser: when an attempt was made to demonstrate the NORAD hotline, the line was dead. I imagine someone discovered the problem earlier but did not consider it his or her responsibiltity. After thinking about that, my fears escalated. If someone who's responsible for reading radar trackings mistakes a blip for a bleep, who's really responsible for what happens next?

Our preference for blaming others rather than assuming responsibility, possibly tolerated better within democratic societies but certainly not limited to them, is reflected on governmental levels too, with consequences of a far greater magnitude. At Geneva, negotiators from the superpowers sat at the table playing Hot Potato with laser and nuclear-weapons-systems proposals, neither side willing to admit the responsibility that belongs to both for our present predicament.

If it's true that this is the Age of Communication, just who whould we talk to, anyway?

columns of Garden City real estate ads.

What was once a sellers market is now more balanced, said Mennell. Many buyers are willing to look at homes in less-affluent communities farther from Boston rather than pay Garden City prices, Mennell said.

A strong local economy, low unemployment and reduced mortgage rates have raised housing prices to new heights, said Mennell. But he added: "We're experiencing no new reasons why prices should go up (more)."

Many Newton residents wishing to sell their homes have yet to adjust to the new conditions, according to Stein. They are asking more than buyers are willing to pay, she observed.

A year ago, the Boston Globe reported the price of metropolitan area homes was rising three times faster than in most cities, Stein said.

"The major reason this wasn't a lively spring is people were expecting those kind of rises," she said. "I see houses still appreciating, but not at the frenzied rate of the past couple of years."

Some owners have had to lower their expectations as homes stayed on the market longer and buyers refused to bite, Stein observed.

As an example, Stein cited one 10-room Chestnut Hill colonial whose owner was seeking $549,000 in April. The price was changed in June to $469,000, she said.

The asking price on an 11-room home in Oak Hill recently dropped from $489,000 to $459,000, said Stein. Similarly, the price for a nine-room Victorian in South Newton was lowered from $575,000 to $515,000, she said. Neither home was sold as of June 13, she pointed out.

"I just had one (home) that was reduced $175,000," Stein said. "The market is not bearing a lot of these prices or you wouldn't have these reductions."

Stein said sellers should seek brokers advice before setting a price for their homes. "Oftentimes, an owner has an idea of what a house is worth, and the broker is afraid to disagree," Stein said.

Newton realtor Millicent Marshall agreed, but said agents should be paid for assessing the value of a home. Some realty chains offer quick estimates that are not accurate, she said. A true appraisal takes hours of work, said Marshall.

One aspect of appraising a home is determining what buyers are willing to pay.

Marshall said the high price of homes - particularly in Newton - has changed the habits of buyers, who shop more carefully than they used to.

"They look at all the houses," she said. "It isn't like when they walked into the foyer and said, 'I love it.'"

In her view, the market is not leveling off. Local owners are simply asking too much and prices must adjust to what buyers can afford, she said. "Every house sinks to its own level," she observed.

And banks are complicating home sales by taking too long to process mortgage applications or insisting on too much for a down payment, she said.

Banks seem more interested in helping homeowners refinance mortgages than in servicing buyers, she said. "The banks are not taking care of the buyer," she said. "The investor isn't getting any attention at all."

In Newton, the size and assessed value of some homes makes them difficult to sell.

Most home seekers cannot afford the high local property taxes - as much as $10,000 annually - and the cost of maintaining some of the Garden City's biggest homes, let alone the sale price, she said.

Scattered throughout prestigious sections of South Newton and Auburndale are "large castles" more suitable for conversion to condominiums than direct sale, Marshall said.

By "today's standards the size is overbearing for a buyer," Marshall pointed out. "A direct buyer can't possibly use the area."

physician's office," Kelliher said.

He declined to elaborate, saying he has agreed with the union not to discuss drug testing in detail before the NFA vote.

The fire chief will have the option to order discipline and/or treatment if the offense takes place during work, Kelliher said.

Since the issue was raised this spring, Ciccone and NFA president Kevin McArdle have said drug testing is an invasion of privacy and an erosion of firefighters' civil liberties.

But they also said the NFA would go along to ensure a drug-free Fire Department - if language that is fair to the union and the city could be ironed out.

"What we're saying is we're willing to sacrifice our rights in a sense because we're in the spotlight," he said.

But firefighters as well as the public have an interest in making sure there are no drug abusers among their number, he said.

"We have enough hazards," he said. "We don't want to be working with someone who has a drug problem."

At the height of the drug testing controversy the NFA threatened to take its case to aldermen, who could not have forced the city to settle but could have pressured it to offer terms they believed to be fair.

Alderman Arthur Reilly, chairman of the Public Safety and Transportation Committee, said he was pleased the NFA did not have to involve the board.

"I never felt we should be involved," he said after the board's vote Monday night. "I always maintained it would be better to have the matter discussed in the correct form rather than at the board where the best firefighters would have got was a resolution."

The contract offers firefighters a 5 percent retroactive raise and a 1 percent bonus for fiscal 1985 and another 5 percent hike in back pay for fiscal 1986. As of today, firefighters would receive an additional 5 percent raise to be followed by a 1 percent increase on Jan. 1, 1987. The contract adds another 5 percent pay hike on July 1, 1987 and a two percent increase on Jan. 1, 1988.

Kelliher and Stephen Cirillo, the city's chief budget officer, estimated an average firefighter would receive around $3,500 in back pay for fiscal 1985 and 1986.

In other news, the city has agreed to a two year contract with its 75 traffic supervisors. The pact grants each 5 percent raises for fiscal 1987 and for fiscal 1988, as well as a $100 signing bonus.

Aldermen voted $29,852 to pay for the agreement. It contains no drug testing provision, Kelliher said.

Residents push for action at fatal intersection

state and the city. The city petitioned the state approximately a year ago to improve the safety of the intersection, but nothing has been done so far, he said.

"The major focus of our outrage is the denial of any accountability or responsibility by state and city officials," he said. "No one is denying there is a problem at the intersection, but getting someone to act on it has been impossible."

Shubow said he thinks local politicians are hoping the heat will subside, but he said residents will keep the pressure on this time until something concrete is done.

"We intend to turn up the flames under their posteriors until we get some action," he said.

Alderman Rodney Barker, a Woodcliff Road resident, said Schur's proposals are far from long-term solutions. "I don't think lowering the speed limit will have any effect at all because no one pays attention to the signs anyway," he said. "I think the ultimate solution is to seriously consider closing the median on Route 9 at that intersection."

Barker said the city would have to petition the DPW to close the median because the city does not have the authority to do it. On July 15 at 9 p.m. the Newton Traffic Commission, at Barker's request, will discuss the issue.

"Whenever this proposal was brought up in the past, residents on the south side of Route 9 lobbied against it because of the traffic inconvenience," Barker said. "We'll bring it up on the 16th to see what people's reaction to it is now."

According to state DPW Systems Control Manager Louis Gilmartin, his department recommended closing the median up to 10 years ago, but the city has remained "noncommittal."

Gilmartin said he disagreed with almost all of Schur's traffic solutions because they are "impractical." He said advanced warning signs could be feasible, but changing the speed limit would be "unreasonable."

"Regardless of what speed we put up there, people will drive at a speed that is comfortable to them," he said. "To put the speed at lower than 40 m.p.h. would be unrealistic."

Shubow said closing the median is "extreme overkill" at this point. He said the problem will not be solved because cars on Woodcliff Road will still have access to Route 9 and it does not protect them making right and left turns onto the throughway.

"It would still be Russian roulette. It wouldn't change anything," he said. "Unfortunately, the state's focus is to move as much traffic as quickly as possible, and not on citizens safety and concerns."

Local students on dean's list

NEWTON — Joanne Ryan, 4 Weir St., of Newton, a junior majoring in English and Maria Pulsone, 48 Derby St., of West Newton, a junior majoring in art were named to the dean's list at Emmanuel College at the end of the second semester. Each student has achieved at least a 3.4 grade point average on a 4.0 grading system.

Emmanuel College, the first catholic college founded for women in New England offers a four-year liberal arts education with career preparation including internships available in such fields as medicine, business, media and the arts. The college is located in the heart of Boston.

Highlands Jazz has big plans for grant money

Boston-area jazz bands to Newton, sold out three of six performances. Now with the grant, the group will be able to expand its year-round series, pay musicians higher wages and use more sophisticated staging techniques.

In addition, $4,000 of the money will be used to pay a wage to Nancy Alimansky, co-director of the jazz series and the one in charge of organizing the concerts.

The first Highlands Jazz concerts were performed in the backyard of the Bread and Chocolate Bakery, which Boccabella owns along with Cantin Abruzzi restaurant and Abruzzi Pasta. No admission was charged, requiring this Italian entrepreneur to foot the summer's $3,000 bill himself.

Now, free concerts are still offered behind the bakery. But during the fall, winter and spring months, the jazz series is held indoors at St. Paul's Episcopal Church or at the Congregational Church, at a nominal fee.

This year's free, summer concerts will feature many lesser-known jazz musicians, including Mike Metheny, Carol Akerson and Jeff Stout and his Red Hot Five.

On July 20, the series will present an All Day Jazz Festival on the Mt. Ida College campus headlining Rebecca Parris, Stan Stickland and Gray Sargent.

Returning in the fall will be pianist Nakoto Ozone, who was invited to play with Gary Burton and other national jazz greats following his Newton appearance several years ago.

That show and Rebecca Parris' first solo performance, on another occasion, were sell-out crowds and "put us on the map a little bit," said Alimansky.

Also helping build audiences is the organization's novel approach to concerts. During one performance, organizers distributed 200 little cups containing coffee beans, enabling the audience to play along with the band's percussions.

"The audience had a crazy time," Alimansky recalled, "and even the musicians got into it."

Actually, the Highlands Jazz co-director prefers to call these concerts "events" because she and Boccabella offer more than just a band for entertainment. For example, in October, the organization will be offering a program combining art, jazz and lunch. And in spring, singer and Dean of Harvard School of Design Larry Watson, will present a program on the history of jazz.

"We have to make (the concerts) special enough so people will give up other things," like attending other concerts in the area, going to movies, or taking in other Saturday night entertainments.

Certainly Thursday's reception at the Congregational Church was a musical event, of sorts. On piano, playing jazz tunes, was Alex Elin, a regular performer with the jazz series. A spread of croissants — fresh from Boccabella's bakery across the street — graced a table in the back of the room.

And the mayor proved, perhaps for the first time in public, that he can sing.

Commuter center proposed

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — City officials are looking into the possibility of a "multi-modal" transportation center in Newton Corner.

While a center combining trolley, bus and commuter rail service is "just in the formative stages," according to Mayor Theodore Mann, city officials say they would like to find an alternative to the congestion in Newton Corner resulting from a hodgepodge of different modes of transportation coming together near the Massachusetts Turnpike.

"If there is any development along the Pike," Mann says, "there will be a need for some kind of transportation plan in this city for the future. If that happens, we hope that there will be a combined transportation center."

Before that could happen, the city must determine if it is finacially feasible. In addition, Planning Director Barry Canner says the city would have to gauge the affect a transportation center would have on surrounding neighborhoods.

"Conceivably, we would like to have something that would include a bus terminal to get the buses off the street," Canner says. "We would also consider a commuter parking facility and a reconnection of the north and south sides of the turnpike for pedestrian access. This is all hypothetical, though. The costs are unknown, and the physical impact on the area is unknown."

Canner says the Village Study is looking at the capacity of street systems throughout the city.

"We already have two major modes of mass transportation here," he says of bus stops and a commuter rail station on Washington Street. "There is no parking right now, and one of the things the Village Study will look at is how we can deal with the parking for the transportation systems we have now."

Ideally, Canner says any transportation center would combine parking over the turnpike with a commuter rail, bus and trolley station. He says the city "would be open to a trolley line running to Newton Corner, if proper safety precautions for passengers could be met."

Local clergymen reach out to Austrian Jews

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Before Adolf Hitler's Nazi armies "invaded" Austria in 1938, there were more than 200,000 Jews living in the country. Today, some 40 years later, there are fewer than 7,000.

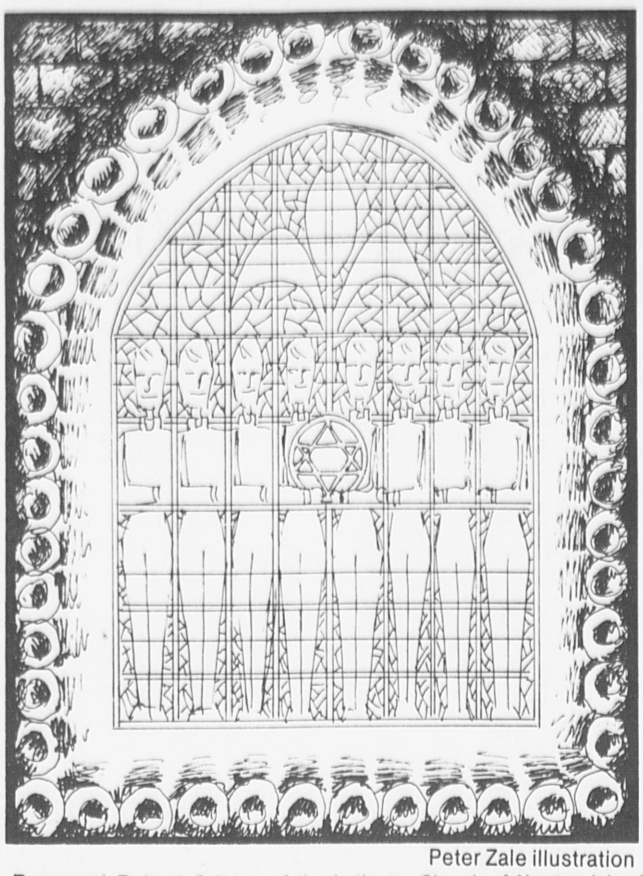
With the recent election of Kurt Waldheim, the former United Nations Secretary General and alleged Nazi, to the ceremonial position of president, memories of the extermination of the Jews were played out on the streets of Vienna.

In part because of pressure from outside the country to oust Waldheim, Austria's Jewish community once again became the target of abuse. To show solidarity and offer support, a group of eight Christian clergymen left the United States last month and headed to Austria. Among them was Reverend Robert Griesse of the Lutheran Church of Newton.

"One of my most important reasons for going," Griesse said, "was to witness a gift of courage and hope to the Jewish community. When they received us to their Shavuot service, Friday, June 13, that was affirmation that I really appreciated. The rabbi built his whole sermon on the response to the eight Christian clegry who affirmed that Christians in the rest of the world do not always react like Austrian Christians do to the Austrian Jewish community."

Despite what Griesse said is a "lack of charisma on the part of Waldheim," many Austrians identified with him.

"Most of the Austrian people identified with Waldheim because they fought in the same war and were members of the same Nazi party," he said. "When he lied about his war record, the Austrian people reacted the way they would if they were put into a corner. That, however, is no justification. It just goes to show how rampant the incidents of anti-semitism are."



Peter Zale illustration

Reverend Robert Griesse of the Lutheran Church of Newton joined other area clergy to show solidarity with troubled Austrian Jews.

Griesse said as recently as 1984, an Austrian town in the Alps held an anti-semitic parade and pageant.

"It was a story from the Middle Ages that a Jewish community killed a Christian baby and made matzo out of its blood," he said. "There was a town in the Alps where this was celebrated with a procession by the church and the community believed it. Finally, in 1984, the Roman Catholic bishop in that region called it a lie, made them wall up the remains of what they thought was the baby, and destroyed their flags and processional equipment. The bishop stood all alone, and was abused for his action."

The latest incidents of anti-semitism, Griesse said, reflect an age-old problem in Austria. "The problem with the Austrian people that I met is that at one time they tell you they were victims of the Nazi anschluss," Griesse said. "Other times, they said they enjoyed the role. They affirmed many of the things for which Hitler stood.

"Three-quarters of the commandants at concentration camps were Austrian," Griesse added. "Adolf Eichmann and Hitler were both Austrian. Most of Eichmann's staff, whose job it was to exterminate the Jews, were Austrian. The guilt involved was never recognized or admitted. That issue disturbs me most. I have every reason to believe anti-semitism shaped Hitler. From Brunau, where he was born, to Lintz, they gave us names of people who shaped his life. Hitler was instructed in anti-semitism the same way you learn how to eat and drink. It was part of the entire culture."

Despite the history of Austria, Griesse said he was heartened by the reaction of the Jews and some Christian clergy he and his party visited.

"We met a group of people called 'Aktion gegen dem antisemitismus — Action against anti-semitism' — led by a Lutheran professor, Ulrich Trinks, of the University of Vienna and Hedwig Wahle, a Catholic sister from the Order of Zion. These two people work against anti-semitism in a tireless fashion and full-time obsession," Griesse said.

The committee, he said, consists of Catholics, Protestant and Jews, "who spent three days filling us in on the background and complexities of the situation in Vienna."

While the trip was not intended to show displeasure with the Austrian people, "We do not know all the answers, we do not claim to know the sole of the Austrian people," Griesse said it was important for the clergy to take a stand.

"It is always good when that happens," he said. "In South Africa, two years ago, the clergy began to take a stand against apartheid. Now, we see what a struggle those people are going through. I applaud it when people take the time to stop and think. Success is not always whether you accomplished something. I am not sure success is measured in the fact that twenty people changed their mind as much as one person stood up and spoke his mind."

While he was not totally optimistic that there will be an immediate let-up in Austrian anti-semitism, Griesse said Jews there "were happy to know that there are people who feel anti-semitism is not the Christian thing to do.

"We were working to give hope to 6,000 people who were once 200,000 that not all Christians are anti-semitic," he said. "We wanted to let them know that we share a common heritage and a God who is one. We were a group with a diverse perspective and we witnessed our faith together.

"I was sensitive to the fact that we were only people who were helping ourselves to understand who we are," he added. "We have no right to tell the Austrians what they should do. We can't change them, they have to change themselves. I am not optimistic that change will happen."

Dede Theodore returns to do backstopping

Lion softballers count on battery

By Roy LeBlanc
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Every coach would like his club to be a consistent winner. The theory is, if a team is competitive every season, it will get its share of championship and tournament berths.

Newton South coach Larry Caranfa seems to have his team positioned to begin just that kind of trend.

The Lions were disappointed at missing the tournament by one game this year, and lose eight seniors, but there's enough coming back so that the coach feels his club will contend again.

Certainly, the entire team felt it could have played in the tournament. It needed only one of the last two games, but lost both to Boston Latin, a team which finished below South in the Dual County League standings. As a result, the Lions settled for a 11-9 mark.

"It was still a winning record," said Caranfa. "Outside of Bedford (which only lost one) and Acton-Boxboro, we were the only other team in the league with a winning record."

In addition, six of the South losses came to those two teams.

For eight players, that was the last chance at a tournament berth. Katrina Antonellis, Sandy Bonazoli, Jessica Olansky, Maria Crovo, Laura Baumberg, Joanne Chao, Tammy Barone and Michelle Meyers all graduate. Most of those players saw significant playing time, though Meyers was out most of the year with injuries.

Included in that group were two .400 hitters, Crovo and Antonellis. In addition, Antonellis was a four-year starter who anchored the defense from her shortstop post.

But Caranfa can honestly look at his returning talent and know that 1986 wasn't a one-year run at a tournament berth. With any luck, his Lions will be right back in the fight, thanks to some impressive building blocks coming back.

The cornerstones form the battery. Starting pitcher Julie Blankstein and catcher Dede Theodore will be back at their positions, a year older and that much more experienced.

Blankstein improved "100 percent," on the mound this year, according to the coach. The sophomore came on strong, striking out 18 batters in her last five games. In addition, her control got better as the year went along, though it's something she still needs to work on for next season.

"We want to cut back on our walks," said Caranfa. "If she walks under five batters a game we'll be in good shape."

Blankstein is a good fielding pitcher, and showed promise with the bat, hitting .400 this season, though not batting in every game.

Backing her up will be southpaw Robin Jaeger, coming up from the junior varsity.

"She should be an excellent relief pitcher," Caranfa said.

Elaine Theodore is also available to fill in on the mound if need be.

Elaine's older sister Dede is back for another turn behind the plate. She led the team in hitting for the second straight year with a .542 average. Her 39 hits also let the team. The captain-elect has got plenty of power as well, hitting in the cleanup spot.

Defensively, Theodore did "a tremendous job," said Caranfa. "She threw out 14 runners, she controlled the bunts. She was quicker and stronger this year."

The rest of the defense will need some shuffling, but should be adequate when all is said and done.

Jen Lerman takes on the unenviable task of replacing Antonellis at short. The junior will be a co-captain next year, as she moves over from third. Her arm and glove should enable her to make the transition with little difficulty.

Lerman also showed a lot of improvement with the bat this year and will hit first or second as a senior. This year she finished at .375.

Joining her on the double-play combination will be Anna Otero, who worked herself into a starting job. She hit .387 in part-time action and should be ready for a full-time role as a senior.

"I feel comfortable with her there," Caranfa said.

That strength down the middle is why the Lions will be talking about tournaments when next spring rolls around. But there are still holes to be filled.

Elaine Theodore will likely move across the diamond from first to take Lerman's spot at third. Only a freshman this year, she hit .293 and showed a variety of skills, which should only get better.

Caryn O'Toole has the inside track at first, based on her performance with the junior varsity. The junior can also play third if the need should arise.

Though the infield poses a minimum of problems, the situation is much different in the outfield, as Caranfa will be virtually starting from scratch.

Ellen Hackel should be a strong candidate for center, though the sophomore only one of a group of jayvees seeking playing time. Jenifer Spinelli and Amy Monahan are a couple of junior infielders who may move to the outfield to earn jobs. Rebecca Shea is another good all-around player who will get a chance.

"We have the right people to work around," said Caranfa of next year's fortunes. "It's a luxury to build around pitching and catching. That will be a nice change."

Stan Musial League

Bercury's slam lifts Post 440

NEWTON — Chris Bercury's grand slam capped a six-run sixth inning that gave Newton Post 440 an 18-12 decision over Framingham and a split of the doubleheader in Bay State Stan Musial action on Sunday at Newton South.

Early on, it looked as though this would be a laugher for the home club, which scored five times in the first. But it was not to be, and by the time the bottom of the sixth rolled around, it was 12-12.

Joe King's third hit of the game lit the fuse. Colin Ryan was hit by a pitch and Andy Ayres walked to load the bases. Steve Caliguri then tapped one back to the mound, but King came in hard at home to break up any attempt at a play and untie the score.

Ed Murray drew a free pass for an insurance run before Bercury nailed down the coffin lid with a blast to center field.

It's only fitting that a grand slam decided the second game, because a pair of them did in Post 440 in the opener, 10-6. Paul Savoy accounted for eight of Framingham's runs with bases-loaded clouts in the fifth and seventh.

Saturday, Post 440 dropped a doubleheader to the Warriors at Newton South, 7-1 and 5-4.

In the opener, Don Kelly twirled a six-hitter for the visitors.

Mike Bernulac got him all the runs he would need with a three-run homer in the first inning.

The Warriors also scored a trio in the seventh, with Bernulac igniting it with a triple.

Chris Pachus accounted for the Newton run with a homer in the second.

In the nightcap, the Warriors again scored three in the first and never trailed. Two doubles and a triple did most of the damage in that rally.

King slammed a two-run homer for Newton in the fourth, while Joe Noone pounded a solo shot in the first. Pachus went 2-for-2.

Lose donneybrook

Perhaps it's a good thing that there weren't many fans at Wednesday's game at Newton South between Four Seasons Sports and Newton Post 440. Because if there were, most would probably be basketball fans by now.

Although it was an aficionado's nightmare, it had everything the casual fan could want: hits, runs, errors, and enough circling outfielders to keep This Week in Baseball supplied for months.

When the carnage was complete, Four Seasons was left standing with a 13-11 victory over the host Newton club. Waltham had to come from behind twice to do it, but with some help from the sun, wind, and Post 440 defense, nothing seemed impossible.

In all, those who were in attendance saw 24 runs, 26 hits (seven for extra bases), five errors (not counting the plays that weren't made) and 266 pitches off eight pitchers in six innings.

All of the Waltham scoring came in two innings: the fourth and fifth, when Four Seasons sent a total of 21 men to the plate.

Up to that point, Newton starter Ray Gladu was breezing along with a 4-0 lead. He didn't allow a hit through two innings, then pitched out of a minor jam in the third.

But in the fourth, both defenses started treating the baseballs as if they were made out of radioactive waste.

Hamill winner

Newton Catholic High School baseball standout Jeff Sherman (3rd left) was the recipient of the 17th Annual Billy Hamill Award at the Newton Holiday Inn Wednesday. The award is given each year to the outstanding high school baseball player in Newton. Participating in the presentation were: Russ Halloran, Recreation commissioner; Mayor Ted Mann and Robert Tennant, Kiwanis Club president.

Ryan triple saves Boys' Club

NEWTON — Colin Ryan's two-out triple in the bottom of the seventh inning led to the winning run as the Boys' Club took a 6-5 National League victory over the Knights of Columbus at Ferguson Field on Thursday.

The teams were locked up in a 5-5 duel in the frame. When losing pitcher Josh Lerman set down the first two men in order, in looked like extra innings, but Ryan smoked a shot to right-center and wound up on third. Moments later, Lerman uncorked a wild pitch and the game was over. Ironically, it was the only extra-base hit of the day for the Boys' Club.

It didn't look like the Clubbies would be in that position when they rattled Lerman for three runs in the first. Singles by Joe Proia (three hits) and Alex DeNucci, along with a fielder's choice, left the bases full. Mitch Nash lofted a sacrifice fly for one run, before Mark Cadman stroked a two-run single to make it 3-1.

The Knights would go ahead with one in the third and three in the fourth. The latter rally was keyed by Lerman's two-run double.

The Boys' Club comeback made a winner out of lefty Sam Lookner, who allowed seven hits.

The Boys' Club is now 5-1.

Our Lady's triumphs

Our Lady's erased a 4-1 deficit with a four-run third inning and never looked back in a 10-5 victory over St. Bernard's under the lights at Burke Field.

Eric Goolst started the outburst with one of his two hits. After an out, singles by Frank Battista, Britt Ryan (RBI), Greg Larson (RBI) and Chris Bercury (RBI) tied the game. The ball was bobbled in the outfield on Bercury's hit and Larson raced home with the go-ahead run.

The winners added a couple of pad runs in the fifth, as Larson singled, Bercury walked, and, after a wild pitch, Paul Kearney singled both home.

Aldo Calcagni contributed a two-run double in the sixth as Our Lady's scored three more times.

St. Bernard's got off to a fast start in the game with three runs in the first. Dave Boule, Tom McGary and Andy White had RBI singles in the frame.

Anthony Calcagni held on after that rocky start to go the distance. He allowed seven hits, struck out three and walked four.

Celebrity tourney at Brae Burn

NEEDHAM — The lush green fairways and stately club house of Newton's famed Brae Burn Country Club will be the site on Monday, Sept. 29 of the Fourth Annual Celebrity Golf Tournament of the Greater Boston Division of the American Heart Association.

An impressive list of sports and media personalities have already signed on as participants in the September event and include Dave Maynard, Bob Lobel, John Bucyk, Frank Malzone, Bob Cousy, Joe Concannon, Dave O'Brine and Jack Chase.

Individual entry fee for the tournament is $150 which goes in part to benefit the Greater Boston Division of the American Heart Association. Each competing golf foursome will include one of the many celebrities this annual golf event attracts.

I addition to a full 18 hole round of Brae Burn's tailored greens, participating players will also be treated ti a noon luncheon; liquid refreshment, and hors d'oeuvres following the competition with awards being presented by some of the participating celebrities.

Another feature of the Heart Association Classic are special awards under corporate sponsorship for: Hole-in-One — $1,000; Eagle — $500, and Birdie — $250.

Participation in the Heart Association Celebrity Golf Classic is open to the public, and if you like to spend the afternoon in the company of one of your favorite media or sports personalities, tis is that opportunity.

For information and more details you may write or call the Greater Boston Division of the American Heart Association, 33 Fourth Ave., Needham, MA 02194. Tel. 449-5931.

Tigers may peak in lacrosse

By Roy LeBlanc
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Rick Clark is used to success. The Newton North coach has built one of the strongest lacrosse programs in the state. So he had a tough time of it this season, when he never could know what to expect of his club on a given day.

That's not to say the Tigers were a bad club. Far from it. They finished 11-8, made the tournament, and boasted one of the best defenses in the state. But that doesn't change the fact that they were inconsistent from the first game of the season to the last, particularly offensively. Some days they'd come out with guns blazing; other times it looked like they had all joined Greenpeace.

"It was a strange season," admitted Clark. "I think we should have had three other games," citing the Needham, Billerica and Lexington contests.

Though wins in those games would have improved North's final record, it's unlikely that it would have changed anything come tournament time. Weymouth North defeated the Tigers three times, with the most convincing decision coming in the tourney, so it's safe to say that the Maroons were the better team.

Most of North's problems were in the offense, which created troubles on the back line when the defensemen tried to do too much.

If this was a transition year, next spring might be Newton's chance to go all the way. The Tigers lose seven seniors, but have no less than 22 varsity players back.

Most of the people moving on contributed significantly. They include three of North's five reliable scorers: John Flynn, Josh Carpenter and Otto Mariano, who were second, third and fifth on the list.

At the other end, goalie Matt Keegan and defensemen Scott Lanciloti and David Redmond leave large holes. Lanciloti in particular anchored that outstanding back line.

Tim Troiano didn't see as much playing time as the others, but provided a spark coming off the bench.

Losses or no losses, though, at this early stage, the Tigers don't appear to have a real weakness. They're hip-deep in midfielders, with 12 coming back. Five attackmen return, along with four defensemen.

Even the goalie has some varsity experience.

Brian Vona has already spent two years with the varsity, and saw a lot of time in the net this year, as Keegan has some consistency problems. "He's going to be a good one," said Clark. "He's very quick in the net and has a good outlet pass. ... He does things well outside the cage. He has to work on his confidence."

Defensively, the Tigers will be led by David St. Germain, whom the coach feels could be "the best defenseman in the state."

A captain this year, St. Germain was a second-team All-Scholastic as a junior and has an excellent stick.

Doug Proia was a semi-regular with this year's team, and will get every chance to start next year. He's got impressive physical tools, but Clark is hoping that another year of maturity will help his concentration.

Josh Field also saw quite a bit of work off the bench. The sophomore has good stick skills, but needs to work on his speed and intensity.

Rounding out the returning defensemen is Edsel Lin. His quickness is excellent, to the point where he overplays people too much on occasion. Bringing his game under control could thrust him into a starting job.

"That's a real good base to start off with," Clark said.

The midfield also gets to build around a potential All-Scholastic.

Junior Mark Adams was fourth on the club in scoring with 29 points. Speed is his weapon, though he also proved very tough on faceoffs. If he gets a little better with the stick, he could be nearly unstoppable.

Joining Adams on the first line will be Dave Bresher and Brian Claflin. Bresher didn't do much scoring, but Clark predicts "he'll be a good one. He loves the game."

Claflin, another junior, was a bit of a disappointment this season. The coach wants him to "work on his overview of the game, seeing the whole game."

Physically, Claflin has tremendous potential, with both size and speed.

Juniors Kevin Devereaux, Nick Mariano and Andy Soucie have second-line potential. Devereaux needs a little more speed, while the others will benefit from simply playing more, whether on their own or at a camp.

Juniors Steve Bourland and Zofar Kahn are both in the picture as well. Bourland's speed makes him a threat, while Kahn is an outstanding defensive player.

Sophomores Al Clark and Dave O'Connor will push everybody. They're already good defensive players, and little more skill with the stick could make them offensive threats. Tim Connors is another soph who could see time.

The coach is also looking for big things from freshman Doug Quinn, whom he expects to contribute as soon as next spring.

Like the other two positions, attack has the one cornerstone to build on. Dave Robinson led the club in scoring with 55 points, and was called, "probably the best inside player in the league," by Clark. Robinson has few weaknesses, though he could use more work with his left hand. In addition, the coaches are hoping he'll learn to dump the ball off quicker when he attracts a crowd, which he invariably does.

Rusty Greif started several games as a sophomore this year and is line for a full-time job next season. He sees the game well, and should serve as a good complement to Robinson.

Another soph, Steve Plotkin, may force his way into the lineup with his speed. He could use a few pointers from Greif concerning seeing the game.

Junior Joe DeRubeis also saw some time and improved quite a bit. He'll be in the group fighting for a job.

Aaron Heesch is the type of player who could wind up wherever he's needed. He can play attack or defense. If he can develop a quick first few steps, Clark feels he could turn into a good crease attack.

There's a large group of junior varsity players ready to help out, particularly on defense, where David Cosley, Dave Pappas and Mike Luchette, among others, could make the jump. Dennis Rohanna leads a small group of midfielders who will be fighting for jobs, and Ron Pang will likely move in to back up Vona.

"We could be as good as anybody," the coach said. "It all comes down to one thing: attitude. The only problem with success is that it's disguised as hard work. Anything can be theirs."

Unlike this year, when Weymouth was clearly the class of the field, next season should see a dogfight. Weymouth should come back to the pack, with Lincoln-Sudbury bouncing back. Clark feels both Framingham teams will be improved, while both Winchester and Concord-Carlisle return a lot of talent

Saturday, July 12, at Newton South/Brown Field — Demonstration-coaching session, noon. Two 30-minute games with under 13½ and under 12½ district teams, 2 p.m. Under 16½ and 14½ district teams play 50-minute game, 4:30 p.m. Demonstration game: Mass. State under 19½ vs. Racing Jets, 6:30 p.m.

Tuesday, July 15, at Boston College Stadium — Team training, noon. Open youth clinic for all boys and girls for all ages, run by Belgium team, 4 p.m. Belgium game: Racing Jets vs. Metro Team, 6 p.m.

Champions

Beaver Country Day School Bulldogs of Chestnut Hill finished as champions of the Eastern League for the fifth straight year. Area players were: (L-R) John Fields (Newton), David Karofsky (Weston), Coach John Papas (Watertown), Adam Avratin (Newton), Rob Tuck (Waban) and Kurt Newmann (Newton).

Proia letters in hockey at Bentley

WALTHAM — Jim Proia of Newton has been awarded a varsity letter for his participation on the 1985-86 Bentley College varsity hockey team, Coach Tom Aprille announced today.

Bentley, in its first season under Aprille, improved its record from 5-15 a year ago to 8-13 (8-9 in ECAC North-South games). The Falcons finished strong, winning six of their final nine conference encounters, with the victims including the eventual ECAC North-South champion, Curry College.

A freshman forward, Proia appeared in 16 games, recording four goals amd four assists. In addition to playing hockey, he is also a starting first baseman on the Bentley baseball team.

A 1985 graduate of Newton North High School, Proia is majoring in accountancy. He is the son of Dominic and Catherine Proia of 17 Peabody St., Newton.

Troubadour nips Albemarle

NEWTON — Troubadour erased a 6-1 Albemarle Club lead by scoring five times in the fourth inning and went on to an 8-7 International League victory at Lincoln Park on Saturday.

Albemarle started strong by scoring three runs in each of the first two innings. Troubadour answered with one in each of the first three and the explosion in the fourth.

Down, 6-3, going into the bottom of the fourth, Troubadour went to work.

Joe Russillo started things with a walk. After he stole second, Sam Gottlieb singled him home. Another stolen base set the stage for Jeff Abrams' RBI single. A Dan Gwirtzman double, a Judd Levine grounder and a couple of passed balls later, Troubadour was in control, 8-6.

The winners, now 5-2, got a good relief performance from Khari Brown, who pitched the last two innings. He didn't allow a hit, walking one and striking out three.

Troubadour is now 5-2.

Post 440 triumphs

Two errors gave Post 440 the tie-breaking run in the bottom of the fifth, and they went on to a 6-3 decision over Abruzzi at Cabot Park.

P.J. Melanson led off the frame with a walk. A bunt and an error got him to third, and another miscue allowed him to score.

The winners added a couple of pad runs in the sixth on an RBI double by Chris Scarzi and a run-scoring single by Brian Schraffa.

Melanson and Colin Casey combined to twirl a two-hitter. Melanson took a no-hitter into the fourth, when Abruzzi scored twice. Casey took over during that inning for Post 440, now 5-3.

Warriors stun C&K

The Auburndale Warriors scored three runs in each of the first three innings to belt C&K Components, 14-9, at Ferguson Field.

They started the onslaught in the first when Andrew Hayes walked, took third on an Adam Cedrone single and scored on a double steal. An error, a ground ball and a bases-loaded walk to Mike Armstrong made it 3-0.

C&K went that one better with four in the bottom half. Tom McMillen singled and scored on a Paul Fay double. Fay stole third, then home. David Annese started it again with a walk, and Tom Donnellan was hit by a pitch. Both scored on a Ron Pang single, combined with an outfield error.

Undaunted, Auburndale ripped off three more in the second with Hayes, Cedrone and Tim Meleedy contributing RBI singles.

Cedrone drove in another run in the third, and Dave Quinn added a two-run single.

C&K, Oak Hill tie

Ron Fremault and Angelo Tomano both roped RBI-singles in the top of the sixth, giving C&K a 5-5 tie with the Oak Hill Cubs Friday.

With the bases full in the sixth, Fremault and Tomano tied the score and Oak Hill went down without a run in the last of the sixth to end the game.

American Legion

Sherman's elbows Newton to 5-3 win

NEWTON — A week ago Friday, Somerville southpaw John Sheehan had the Newton Post 440 batters baffled — so much so that the Garden City American Legion entry could not score a run.

Well, Saturday was a different story all together, as the Post 440 gang ripped Sheehan early, scoring three runs in the first inning on the road to a 5-3 victory in a game played at Burke Field.

Some of the credit has to go to Newton's own southpaw, pitcher Jeff Sherman. The big lefthander took the 3-0 lead into the second inning and made it last, holding Somerville off the scoreboard for the next four innings.

By that time, Sherman was riding a 5-0 lead and, despite a little trouble in the top of the sixth, was not about to let the advantage disappear.

"He was in complete control of the game," said Newton coach George Sherman of his pitcherson. "Jeff had been denied St. Clement's (in Somerville) twice this season, and Somerville has three players from the team on the roster. St. Clement's has always been Jeff's nemesis, and he really wanted this game."

The Newton bats had begun to figure Sheehan out in the late innings of its 4-0 shutout-loss, but the corner-picking lefty was no mystery this time. After a deep flyout by George Maxcey to start the Newton first, Jim Giddon roped a double to right field.

Frank Battista then drew a walk and David Grant followed with Newton's second major hit, a tremendous triple over the head of left fielder Steve Matthews for two runs.

Tom Casey then ripped a single right back through the middle to score Grant for a 3-0 lead.

Newton loaded the bases off Sheehan in the third, but the lefty got out of the jam without only one run against him. Battista singled to open and Ed Veiking bounced him to second with a basehit. Two outs later, Andy Lyons walked to load the bases and Sheehan was in hot water.

Battista scored on a wild pitch, but the lefty pitcher came back with a tough one against Chuck Proia, getting the second baseman on a bouncer back to the hill to end the frame.

With a 4-0 lead to work with, Sherman the pitcher took Sheehan the pitcher deep to right-center to lead off the fourth inning with his second homer of the season and a 5-0 spread.

The Newton pitcher was breezing, retiring the side twice over the first five innings and never allowing more than one hit in any of those three other innings.

Somerville reached the southpaw in the sixth, though. Carl Barnhill introduced the inning with a long triple to left-center, and he scored one batter later when Bill Wright grounded out to second.

Ken Olson came back with shot to center field for a solo home run, cutting the Newton lead to 5-2, and Sherman walked the next two batters, advanced them both on a wild pitch, and delivered an RBI-single to Ed Mahoney before recovering.

Sherman got Kevin Wright to bounce deep to short, and Battista snagged the ball and fired to an outstretched Grant at first base for the third out.

Relief pitcher Jim Cataldo set Newton down in order in the sixth, and Sherman looked like he might do the same in the seventh. He struck out the leadoff bat, then forced a flyout before Bill Wright singled past a reaching Battista at short. Sherman came back, though, punching out Olson on a called third strike to avenge the earlier homer and to end the game.

On Friday, Sudbury hammered the Post 440 for six second-inning runs and a 12-3 loss, handing Casey his second loss of the season. The Newton righthander could do no right, but Coach Sherman said the Sudbury bats could do no wrongs.

"According to my catcher, Sudbury was reaching everything and hitting the ball where it wanted. Everything was falling for a hit," Sherman said.

The coach called the Newton offense "pale," as Maxcey had three hits and Battista added two safeties to total the five Post 440 singles.

The Sudbury team draws from both Lincoln-Sudbury High, a Dual County League powerhouse this past spring, and Acton-Boxboro High, the Division I Eastern Mass Championship in baseball.

Bob Karwin, a Boston College pitcher had nine strikeouts to post the win for Sudbury.

Police briefs

Five-year-old boy injured in accident

NEWTON CORNER - A 5-year-old Newton boy was injured last week when a city truck struck a 1985 Toyota at the intersection of Nahanton and Winchester streets, police said. The youth was a passenger in the car. He was treated and released from Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

Phyllis E. Berman, 38, of Newton, told police she was driving her Toyota down Nahanton Street when she saw the truck pulling out of Winchester Street and honked her horn to alert the driver, police said.

The truck driver, Harry M. Leacy, 49, of Newton, said he stopped at the sign at the intersection, but his vision was blocked, police said. Another vehicle apparently waved the truck driver on, indicating the road was clear when it was not, police said.

Boy assaulted by youths at 'T' station

CHESTNUT HILL - A 13-year-old Brookline boy was assaulted by some youths who followed him from the Star Market on Route 9 to the Chestnut Hill MBTA station last Monday night, police said. The boy was struck in the face twice by one of the suspects described as being about 16-years-old, 170 pounds, medium height and blond hair, according to police. The suspects left the scene in a Chevrolet Monte Carlo, police said.

Friends hit in face in surprise attack

NEWTONVILLE - A Mill Street resident and his friend from Reading were assaulted by two men who jumped out of the woods on Blake Street last Monday night, police said. Both victims were hit in the face by their assailants. The suspects left the scene in a green Dodge, police said.

Local girl injured in bike-car collision

AUBURNDALE - An 8-year-old Newton girl was injured when her bicycle crashed into a moving car on Crescent Street last Wednesday, police said. Katlin Flaherty cut her lip and was treated and released from Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

James R. Sonia, 20, of West Newton, was driving his 1985 Chevrolet west on Crescent Street when Flaherty allegedly darted into his lane, police said. Flahert was thrown from her bike seconds before the car ran over it.

Youths break theater door with rock

CHESTNUT HILL - The front glass door of the General Cinema in the Chestnut Hill Mall was shattered with a rock by youths who were hanging around outside, police said. The suspects were not apprehended.

Rape attempted on Allerton Road

NEWTON - An attempted rape on Allerton Road was reported to police Friday evening around 6:45 p.m.

Police said a woman was walking along Allerton Road, near Hyde Street, when a man approached her and grabbed her from behind. He reportedly said to her, "If you scream, I will hurt you. If you don't scream, I won't hurt you." The woman screamed and pushed him away, and her attacker ran up Allerton Road toward Lake Avenue.

The suspect was described as having a dark complexion or a dark tan. He appeared to be between 25 and 30 years old, about 5-feet-7-inches tall and had black curly hair. He wore no shirt and reportedly had acne lesions on his back. He was wearing black shorts and dark running shoes, said police.

Thief tries to run down security guard

CHESTNUT HILL - A Bloomingdales security guard reports that two suspects were seen opening a china drawer and allegedly stealing a $500 silver plate and four $80 crystal figurines Sunday, police said. The security guard tried to stop the suspects from leaving the store but they managed to get away and drove off in a maroon Honda, police said. The silver plate was recovered, but the suspects allegedly got away with the figurines.

The security guard alleges the pair tried to run him down in the parking lot with their car, police said. The car was traced to a Cranston, R.I. woman who apparently has a felony arrest warrant out in Rhode Island for larceny. Complaints will be sought against her for assault and battery with a dangerous weapon and larceny over $100, police said.

Suspect flees after knife point hold up

CHESTNUT HILL - An employee of AT&T at 13 Boylston St. was held up at knife point and the suspect got away with $40 from the cash drawer Thursday morning, police said. He later fled through the back door of the building.

The suspect is described as a white male, medium build, approximately 5-feet-5-inches tall with brown eyes and dark hair, police said.

Found innocent of drunk driving charge

NEWTON - Louis P. Pavia, 33, of Norwood, was found innocent of a charge of driving while under the influence of alcohol but was found guilty of speeding and a marked lanes violation. He was fined $125 by Judge Monte G. Basbas.

Man arrested after stealing phone, watches

By Maureen Azzato
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A 29-year-old Boston man was arrested after breaking into a Bellevue Street home and stealing over $100 worth of items.

Ronald Graham, a former resident of the Bellevue address, entered the home around noon and was allegedly caught in the hallway by a resident who came home and recognized him, police said.

When the suspect ran from the scene, the resident reported the theft to police. Graham allegedly stole a telephone and answering machine, a jug filled with $31 in change and three men's watches, police said.

The suspect was apprehended at the intersection of Centre and Richardson streets at 12:22, police said.

Officer David Selley stopped the suspect, who was carrying a plastic bag and fit the resident's description. The officer looked inside the bag and saw a glass filled with coins. Graham then gave the officer a false name and address.

Selley also observed two watches lying in the gutter next to the suspect. Graham was arrested after the Bellevue resident positively identified the suspect.

Graham was arraigned in district court and was being held at Middlesex County Jail. He could face a maximum sentence of up to 10 years imprisonment for breaking and entering in the daytime and up to five years for larceny over $100, according to Newton Police Lt. James O'Donnel.

City's 'greenest thumb' is retiring

By Barbara Jordan

Anthony Bonica, a West Newton resident since his arrival from Italy through the portals of Ellis Island in 1921, recently announced his retirement from the highly-respected professional landscaping business he began in May of 1923.

The City of Newton has benefited over the years from Bonica's "love of making things grow." There is little doubt that the title worn well by Newton — "The Garden City" — has been enhanced by Anthony Bonica's many personal and philanthropic gestures that have taken the form of beauty in both flower and shrub.

One has only to view the courtyard at St. Bernard's Church in West Newton or the Anthony Bonica Park at the corner of Waltham and Craft Streets to see he has chosen to publicly celebrate his many blessings for all to enjoy.

"I am thankful to God for so much," Bonica said, "for good health, work that I love, a wonderful family, kind friends and success enough to have travelled over most of the world and joy in my heart to come back to my beloved home in Newton each time I have travelled." Bonica especially speaks of his "God-given ability to make my mind strong and my memory accurate when I began to write my life's story, 'The Rewards of Life' in 1982."

The book he speaks of was indeed completed. It is 235 pages in all and includes a segment written by his cousin, Dr. John Bonica of Seattle, Wash., on the history of the Eolian Islands. Mr. Bonica was born on the Island of Fillicudi, one of seven islands in the Eolian chain off the western coast of Italy.

It is interesting to note that now, in 1986, Bonica is having his book, "The Rewards of Life," translated into Italian so that the story and the history there in can be handed onto generations to come as well as to many friends who still prefer to read in their native tongue. Bonica remarks, "To be able to write an accurate account of one's life at the age of 79, an account of life's form, shape and movements, this is yet another gift of God."

Over the years, Bonica has shared his blessings with many. In 1973, in celebration of his golden anniversary as a professional landscaper, he hosted a Mass of Thanksgiving at St. Bernard's Parish in West Newton. Over 300 relatives, friends and neighbors joined with him on that occasion, which was followed by a communion breakfast at the then Valle's Steak House on Route 9 in Newton Centre.

When asked why he decided to celebrate his 50th anniversary in such a way, Bonica smiled as he replied, "It seemed a most wonderful way to express to God my appreciation for his help in making me able to carry on the work I love for these past 50 years."

The year 1976 found Anthony Bonica chosen a "Man of the Year" by the Holy Name Society of the Charles River District. On that occasion, from many towns throughout the area, friends could be found turning their television sets on to Channel 7, when a Mass to celebrate this event was televised in joy and apprreciation for Mr. Bonica's many charitable and spiritual endeavors. Many notes attest to the audience this honor drew and the friends who chose to honor him in kind.

Another milestone in Bonica's career was celebrated in 1983, when he shared the thankfulness of his 60th year as a professional landscaper with a Mass of Thanksgiving, again at St. Bernard's. An honor guard of 11 Knights of Columbus from the Boston area participated on this occasion, as did Mr. Bonica's daughter, Rosemary, his sons Joseph and Felice, and several of his grandchildren. Bonica later hosted close to 400 guests at breakfast at the Hillcrest in Waltham.

State representative and longtime friend, Joseph DeNucci, presented a citation of achievement from the commonwealth. Alderman Richard Bullwinkle, representing the City of Newton, read from an official city plaque that a park had been named in Mr. Bonica's honor.

COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT BLOCK GRANT PROGRAM

Federal Community Development Block Grant regulations require that the City make available to the public a description of any additions to, substantial changes to, or cancellation of activities described in Final Statement of Community Development Objectives and Projected Use of Funds. The following is a description of activities which changed the City's Final Statement for Program Year 11 5/11/86 on after a public hearing held on 12/19/85.

PROPOSED ADDITION OF A NEW FY86 PROGRAM

Alternative Home - Housing Development $60,000

Alternative Home Inc. of Newton is proposing to utilize a total of $60,000 (including $45,000 previously allocated to Alternative Home, Inc. for renovation of 260-262 Langley Road) of FY86 Community Development Block Grant funds to renovate 515 Walnut Street in Newton. Upon completion of the renovations, 515 Walnut Street will be a group residence for 10 emotionally handicapped adults, operated and managed by Alternative Home, Inc.

The State's Chapter 689 Program is making available a total of $378,000 which will be utilized for the acquisiton, rehabilitation, and architectural fees. The total estimated rehabilitation cost of this project is $200,000.

If you have any questions of comments, please contact Elisabeth Ruben at the Newton Community Development Program, City Hall, 1000 Commonwealth Ave. 02159 at 552-7135.

Antique bathroom fixtures on display

NEWTON — "A Victorian Collection for the Old House," a collection of antique lighting and bathroom fixtures, loaned by Susan and Keith Tornheim of Newton, will be on exhibit July 8 to Aug. 13 at the Newton Free Library, 414 Centre St., Newton Corner.

Collecting antique lighting and bathroom fixtures for their Victorian house has been a hobby of the Tornheims for years. The need to renovate the third floor was a major impetus for their research. The Tornheims first installed a new bathroom which incorporated a marble sink, natural fancy pine wainscotting, brass sconces with etched glass shades, brass tub and sink fixtures, and even some Victorian tiles inserted as accents in the tiled rear tub wall. With an eye to future renovation projects, Keith Tornheim continues to acquire a variety of fixtures — more, he admits, than could be reasonably used in the rest of the house.

The exhibition at the Newton Free Library reflects some of the choices people have when they renovate old houses and want to maintain or restore a period look. There are towel bars of brass, wood and glass in various sizes and shapes. The sink faucets on display include one with no handle, the valve is opened and closed by moving the spout from side to side.

Other examples of the plain and fancy can be seen in cup, soap and sponge holders, doorknobs and doorbells, and even little picture molding hooks (a nice way to hang pictures without pounding nails into the walls — provided one still has the right moldings up near the ceiling).

Victorian tiles, some printed, some inlaid with different color clay, and some embossed with geometric or floral designs are also on display. Originally, Tornheim acquired the tiles to border or accent tiled walls or splash backs or to surround mirrors in his house. Recently, he has collected some ornate figurative tiles (full-figured dancing maidens) that can stand alone, as art objects.

Newton Free Library summer hours are: Monday through Thursday 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; Friday 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.; and Saturday 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. The library will be closed July 4 and 5. Call 552-7145 for more information.

Larkin's works evoke feeling of confrontation

NEWTON — David Larkin's new series of paintings at the Newtonville Library, 345 Walnut St., Newtonville, July 2 - July 28, is straight forward enough at first glance.

The imagery is clearly representational. Though it is abstracted into simple shapes, the forms are easily identifiable as women. Larkin emphasizes the torso and paints faceless women. He focuses on their curves and on their angles, painting them directly on the canvas.

The work is all on the surface of the canvas — the energy comes directly at the viewer. Larkin uses the space to create a feeling of confrontation between the painting and the viewer.

While he flattens the picture plane, Larkin activates the space by using radiants such as waves or sparks near the hands or around the body. Several of the paintings allude to the connectedness of geometry and nature. The relationships are implied in the equivalence of forms and can be seen as having either a harmonious or a dissonant effect.

It is an arresting show. Newtonville Library hours through Sept. 14 are: Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.; and Thursday 9:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. Call 552-7126 for more information.

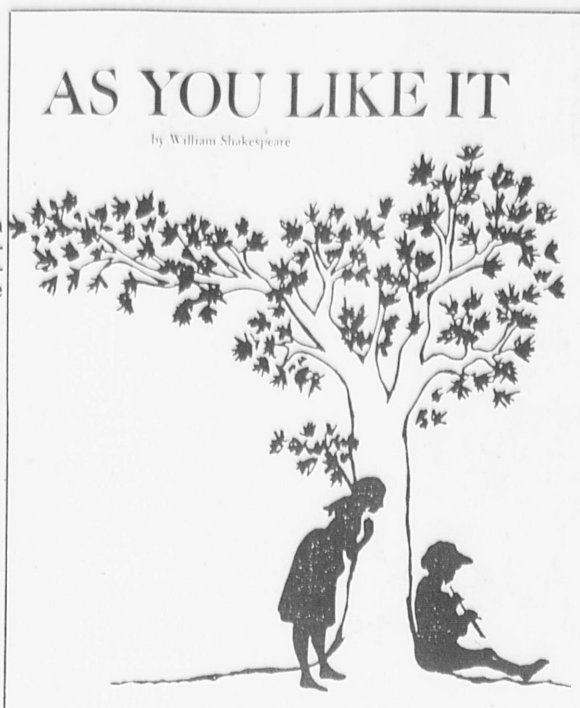
Pops Esplanade concert July 5

BOSTON — Boston's traditional July 4th celebration featuring the Boston Pops Esplanade orchestra will be held on July 5th this year–which explains the 1986 Independence Day ralling cry of "Go fourth on the fifth!"

The event was moved from July 4, to July 5, to allow the Pops to fulfill a command performance in New York City, the site of a national celebration that will be capped by the re-dedication of the Statue of Liberty.

Though a day late, the giant festivity will include all the fun and excitment of previous years and once again will highlight the world famous Pops concert and colorful fireworks over the Charles River.

The attraction, one of New England's biggest and most enjoyable annual events, is expected to draw some 200,000 people to the esplanade again this year, according to metropolitan district Commissioner William J. Geary and David Mugar.



'Shakespeare in the Park'

NEWTON — Arts In The Parks, Newton Parks and Recreation, expands its summer offerings to include "Shakespeare in the Park." On Saturday, July 5, at 6:45 p.m. at the Jackson Homestead, Arts In The Parks will sponosor "As You Like It" as presented by The New Repertory Project, Theater-in-Residence at the Newton Arts Center.

"As You Like It" is a rich play of ideas about envy and humility, wisdom and folly, truth and disguise. It contains some of Shakespeare's most vivid characters.

The New Rep is one of Boston's fastest emerging theatre companies. Founded in 1984, the company is dedicated to building a permanent theatre center in which artists and community can engage in a vital dialogue through performances and workshops.

Bring chairs, blankets and picnics. Gates open at 5:45 p.m. Tickets are available in advance, $5 for adults, $3 for seniors, $2.50 for children. Send a self-addressed stamped envelope to Arts In The Parks, 70 Crescent St., Auburndale, MA, 02166. Call 552-7130 or 552-7120 for further information.

Farmers' Market to open

NEWTON — The Newton Farmers' Market reopens July 8, and will be open every Tuesday until October 28 at City Hall's War Memorial Cirlce. Pick from a variety of freshly picked fruits and vegetables. This will be the market's seventh season. The Farmers' Market will sell every Tuesday from 2:30-6:30 p.m. rain or shine. Come and support the Massachusetts Farmers.

July 4 celebration at Newton Centre

NEWTON — Arts In The Parks, Newton Parks and Recreation, will present a full day of celebration at the Newton Centre Playground on July 4.

Kids Morning will begin promptly at 10 a.m. with contests to include a Grande Pet Parade, Decorated Doll Carriage Promenade, Decorated Bicycles, Teddy Bear Parade, and foot races. Prizes will be awarded along with free candy and ice cream. Master of ceremonies will be Mayor Theodore D. Mann and Edward English. Children of all ages are invited. In case of rain, Kids Morning will be held on July 5.

Evening festivities will begin at 5 p.m. when everyone is invited to bring their picnic suppers to the Newton Centre Playground to enjoy the comraderie of friends and neighbors.

Children of all ages will delight in the versatility of Michael Lane Trautman, a mime, clown, and storyteller or extraordinary talent.

Promptly at 6:30 p.m. a free concert sponsored by The Bank of Boston, Newton Centre, will feature the Herb Pomeroy Band. Herb's 11-piece band will fill the air with superb renditions of traditional and new jazz arrangements.

In case of rain, the concert moves indoors to the air-conditioned auditorium of Newton North High School, Elm Road, at 7 p.m.

If more information is needed, call Arts In The Parks, Newton Parks and Recreation Department, 552-7120 or 552-7130.

Arts in the Parks offers adult courses

NEWTON — Arts In The Parks, Newton Parks and Recreation, will offer a variety of courses for men and women this summer.

In addition to the advanced and beginning knitting and the introduction to quilting and color workshops, there will be advanced and beginning courses in drawing and painting, the making of silver jewelry, the art of papermaking, fabric painting, and chair caning.

All courses will be held at the Mason-Rice School, 149 Pleasant St., Newton Centre, beginning the first week in July. Call 552-7130 for more information.

Developing a first vegetable garden

By Earl Aronson
AP Newsfeatures

Developing your first vegetable garden, one novice related, can be like driving along a strange highway with no map ... at night ... in a rainstorm.

It doesn't have to be that way if, before you ever put a spade or hoe in the ground, you make a few decisions.

The key is: Choose the garden site, choose your crops, select the varieties you'll plant, arrange the crops in the plot, and set up a planting schedule.

Other planning should include how large a garden you can handle, how you'll control weeds and what you want the produce for — whether for fresh eating, freezing, canning, drying or some combination of these.

Deciding on a site

The characteristics of your property may partially decide the site for you. Consider these requirements for a vegetable garden:

— Most vegetables require six to eight hours of direct sunlight daily.

— The garden should be within reach of a water supply.

— Exposure to the wind should be minimal, since strong winds cause evaporation from the soil and excessive respiration from the plants.

— The soil should be of good quality with a limited number of rocks and debris, and well prepared for gardening.

Most vegetable crops do best if they get full sun for most of the day. Leafy and root crops can get by with some shade for part of the day, but crops that bear fruits — tomatoes, peppers, eggplant, beans, squash, cucumbers — need a full day's sun.

In deciding the size of your plot, consider how much time you'll spend each week on your garden. Good advice is "start small." A plot 10-by-10-feet is suitable for beginners. You can make it larger as you gain experience.

A plot in a community garden some distance from home may be better than no garden, but having to load everything into the car and go there turns every gardening foray into an expedition. If the garden is close to home you can work in it whenever you have a few spare minutes, keep close tabs on weed and insect problems, and harvest crops at the peak of perfection.

If sod covers your proposed garden site, remove it. If you just plow or till the grass under, it will keep coming back and you'll be fighting it all summer.

Don't place your garden near shrubs and trees — which will compete for water and soil nutrients and shade the crops.

Avoid putting your garden in a low spot. Cold air tends to sink into such areas, so they're the last places to be frosted in the spring and the first to be frosted in the fall. This can shorten the growing season. Also, water may stand in such spots, causing root rot and foliage diseases.

Plant crops the family enjoys. If you have enough space, try some less familiar vegetables such as salsify, purple cauliflower or Jerusalem artichoke.

Available labor force

Other factors to consider in your garden size are the available labor force (golf, swimming and baseball may be causes of strikes), and the amount of money you want to spend on tools, equipment, seeds, plants and fertilizer.

A suggestion: Decide how much garden you can handle at first, then cut it in half. This may prevent early discouragement.

In a small garden, avoid crops that need lots of space, especially sweet corn, unless it is your passion. The return from sweet corn is small. Other space-hogging crops include potatoes, vining winter squash and pumpkins, dry beans and peas. Bush varieties of squash, pumpkins and cucumbers are now available, but they aren't as productive as their sprawling relatives.

Check seed packets

When choosing varieties, check seed packets for:

Growing habit, whether bush or vining; use, storage, freezing or other; days to maturity; disease resistance; desired color (do you want purple beans, cabbage or cauliflower?); flavor (hot pepper or sweet?); shape of fruits (globe or pear-shaped tomatoes?); size of edible portion (4-pound cabbage or 3-pound squash vs. 20-pound cabbage and 70-pound squash).

Special performance characteristics (self-blanching cauliflower, or slow-bolting lettuce); and appearance (some gardeners grow peppers or flowering kale because they like to look at them, or they interplant flowers or herbs with their vegetables to brighten the garden.)

Placement of crops in the garden can be important.

A garden sketch is helpful so you won't buy twice as many plants or seed packets as you have space to plant. Also, you'll better remember where the various crops were this year so you can avoid planting the same crops in the same spots next year. Crop rotation can be an important practice in reducing the carryover of insect and disease problems.

Placement of crops

Place tall crops, such as sweet corn, sunflowers and Jerusalem artichokes on the north side of the garden so they won't shade sun-loving crops.

Plant perennial crops such as rhubarb, asparagus, strawberries and raspberries together on one side of the garden, out of the way when you till for annual crops.

Utilize all available space through interplanting and successive cropping. Interplanting means growing a short-season crop and a long-season crop or early- or late-crop side-by-side for part of the growing season. Harvesting the first crop makes room for the other crop to mature. Successive cropping means following an early or short-season crop with something else.

Consider vertical gardening when space is limited. Plant pole beans instead of bush beans; grow cucumbers on trellises, and stake or cage tomatoes so they take up less garden space.

If you will use a garden tiller to cultivate between rows, rows will have to be farther apart than if you chop weeds with a hoe. If you rely on mulch to keeps weeds down, space rows so you can walk comfortably between them.

Will you group related crops or interplant unrelated ones?

Simplify crop rotation

Keeping all the cole crops or cucurbits together simplifies crop rotation but may intensify some pest problems. Some gardeners believe certain crops enhance each other or inhibit pest problems when they are planted together. Planting tomatoes and cabbage together, for instance, is suppoed to reduce problems with cabbage worms.

If the thought of spraying your cabbage and broccoli to keep the green worms out doesn't upset you, grouping al the cole crops together would make it easier to spray them without spraying other crops, too.

Such crops as the cabbage family, lettuce, spinach, onions, carrots and peas grow best under cool conditions.

Others, such as beans, squash, cucumbers, corn grown from seeds, tomatoes, peppers and eggplant (planted as seedlings) need warm soil and air temperatures to grow well. If planted into cool, damp soil, seeds may rot rather than sprout. Transplants may survive but fail to grow until conditions improve.

A rule of thumb

Plant cool weather crops as early in the spring as you can work the soil, and again in midsummer for a fall harvest.

A Florida couple enjoy the fruits of their labor, a successful vegetable garden that's not too big to handle.

What compact disc players can do

By the editors
of Consumers Reports

Compact disc (CD) players offer a great advantage over tape players and phonographs — they can faithfully reproduce the widest range of musical sound, from a subtle pianissimo to a booming fortissimo.

But this ability can be a mixed blessing when listening to a recording that alternates between extremely soft and loud passages, especially if you just want to listen to some background music. Turn down the player and pianissimos nearly vanish. Turn it up and the fortissimo can rattle your teeth. People who play background music on CDs complain about this.

Enter the new DX3, a CD player from dbx, a company known for its noise-reduction technology. What sets the DX3 apart from other CD players is its sophisticated signal-processing circuitry. The unit allows listeners to alter a recording's dynamic range to deal with volume problems like the ones described above.

In its compression mode, the DX3 selectively softens the loudest passages and boosts the weakest, delivering music that's remarkably easy to listen to, even at low volume.

The DX3 is ideal as a source for recording tapes, especially for a car's stereo system, because it effectively deals with the road noise that often drowns out quieter passages on tapes made from typical CD players (unless you turned up the car stereo's volume). You can fine tune the process by adding more compression for noisier car interiors.

The DX3 can also reverse the process, stretching a recording's dynamic range to increase its "impact." In its expansion mode, the music's peaks are exaggerated, but with little distortion. Percussion particularly comes alive: The loud and sudden attack of drum beats picks up new punch.

The DX3 can also emphasize differences between right and left stereo channels to enhance the spaciousness of the sound. This feature is especially worthwhile when speakers are set close together — in small rooms, for instance.

Like the compression feature, ambience can be adjusted in either direction; reversing it makes recordings sound more like monaural. Both controls can be bypassed altogether when not needed. But with the DX3's signal-processing circuitry engaged, even untrained ears will hear a difference.

The sophisticated DX3 is highly recommended but, at $600, it doesn't come cheap — especially when compared to the superb sound common to all CD players, including those priced around $200. Its fancy circuitry neatly solves a number of listening problems potentially unsettling to some music lovers. But if you're one of those individuals who can forego those adjustments, you might want to try a less expensive model. (C)1986, Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

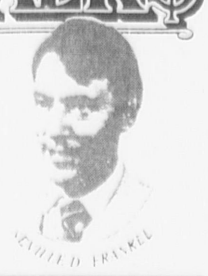
Real estate not best tax shelter

MONEY TALK$

Neville Frankel is Vice President of Financial Planning Associates Inc., a Boston and New York affiliate of Confidential Planning Network, an international network of more than 120 financial planning firms. Direct questions to Frankel, care of this publication.



Dear Mr. Frankel:

I own a number of real estate limited partnerships which were purchased mainly as tax shelters. I hear many opinions on the purpose of such investments, and find it difficult to evaluate the worth of my own. Should these investments be purchased solely to shelter income?

J.G., Cambridge

Dear J.G.:

The nation's second largest secondary purchaser of real estate limited partnership interests, Liquidity Fund, released a study of benefits received by investors from 66 SEC-registered real estate limited partnerships from 1971 to 1980. Represented in this study are $1.4 billion of capital raised and purchases of 679 income properties for $4 billion. This report offers three conclusions:

•The partnerships under study produced overall high returns to investor, substantially outperforming other investments as well as inflation.

•The tax benefits are not as great as commonly believed.

High investment yields

Based on the study, the average real estate limited partnership provided investors in the 38 percent tax bracket with 13.2 percent after-tax rate of return. In comparison, a 38 percent bracket investor who purchased common stocks would have achieved a 6.7 percent after-tax rate of return as measured by the Standard & Poor's 500 over the same period. A position in 30-day T-bills would produce a 4.9 after-tax internal rate of return and long-term corporate bonds, a 2.3 percent after-tax rate of return.

Long life cycle

The study identified three distinct stages of a typical partnership.

Start-up (year 1-4). The initial net equity in the property portfolio is less than the amount raised from investors due to offering costs and securities commissions.

Operations (years 4-9). Properties are managed and upgraded and cash flow to investors increases. The major benefit to investors is from cash flow from property operations.

Liquidation (years 9-15). Remaining properties are sold providing the greatest benefits to investors.

Less tax shelter

Contrary to common belief, investors in publicly offered real estate limited partnerships receive only a small portion of their benefits in tax write-offs. The main portion of benefits comes from long-term capital gains realized upon the sale of the properties. Investors in the 38 percent tax bracket received only 8.4 percent of the total return as tax benefits. Investors in the 50 percent tax bracket received 11.1 percent of the benefits from tax shelter.

New law office in Needham

NEWTON — Frank L. Bridges, a native of Needham and resident of Newton, recently established his law office at the new Hillsite Office Building off of Highland Avenue in Needham.

Bridges graduated from Trinity College in Hartford, Conn.,and the University of Pennsylvania Law School. He has been practicing law in eastern Massachusetts for 13 years, for the past seven years in Boston.

Bridges is one of a growing number of professionals who have foresaken the time-consuming commute to Boston for more accessible office space on the Route 128 belt.

Bridges is the first tenant to occupy the building which will be part of a larger complex to include a new Sheraton Hotel and Conference Center, presently under construction on the site. The hotel and conference center is projected for completion in the summer or fall of 1986.

Consultant organizing Liberty celebration

NEWTON — Captain George H. Geller, of the U.S. Coast Guard Reserve, formerly of Waban, and a graduate of Newton High School and Harvard University, is the Coast Guard's Coordinating Officer for the Statue of Liberty Centennial Celebration. This is the largest peacetime operation in the Coast Guard's history, involving over 300 Coast Guard vessels and several thousand Coast Guard personnel.

In this assignment Geller is responsible for overseeing all Coast Guard activities on water and shore in support of this international symbol of freedom. As a Reserve Officer, Captain Geller's selection for this significant position is a notable honor.

In civilian life, Geller is the founder and president of NBS Consultants Inc., an office automation consulting firm in White Plains, N.Y. A native of Newton, he received a bachelor of arts degree in social psychology from Harvard University in 1961. He was with the Xerox Corporation for 13 years, and prior to that was a commercial banker and an executive consultant search consultant.

Son of the late Benjamin Geller and Helen Uhr Geller of Waban, he is currently a resident of White Plains, New York.

Business briefs

Development to offer public benefits

NEWTON — 400 Centre Street, a mixed-use development office, is a retail and residential space in a design scheme that is exceptionally adapted to one of the city's most prominent sites. Among the many public benefits are a new bus shelter and protected seating area at the Centre Street MBTA bus stop and a beautiful landscape outdoor plaza which extends to the street, providing a convenient open-air walkway through the complex to the bus stop.

Designed by the Boston architectural firm of Huygens and DiMella Inc. for 400 Centre Street Limited Partnership, the project will link the Newton Corner residential community and the Newton Massachusetts Turnpike. Two separate segments, housing and office/retail, will overlook the plaza's flowering trees, lush foliage and built-in seating.

Design professions create 73,000 jobs

NEWTON — Design firms have enjoyed a good year. Profits (before bonuses and taxes) climbed to a median of 9.5 percent, up from 8.9 percent last year, according to the 1986 edition of PSMJ Financial Satistics Survey of design firms, published this month.

Median staff levels rose by 10.7 percent over the previous year, an even higher rate than the 9.4 percent recorded the year before.

"This level of staff growth, a key sign of economic health, indicates the design professions created 73,000 new jobs last year, a sure sign of a good economy," said PSMJ Editor Frank Stasiowski.

The survey is one of the PSMJ series which also covers salary and fee data. The Surveys are recognized nationally as a key source of statistical information on the design professions. The Financial Statistics Survey is available for $125 from the publisher at Ten Midland Ave., Newton, Mass. 02158.

Locally he leaves his son, Martin T. Curran, Jr., of Newton. He also is survived by his wife, Patricia Anne (Murray) Curran; his other children, Brian M. of Weymouth, Lynne M. McDonald of Plymouth, Patricia A. Guerin, Barbara Cadena and Colleen Curran, all of Weymouth; his mother, Nora (Norton) Curran of South Boston; his brothers and his sisters, Joseph of Norwood, John of Milton, Robert Curran, Mary DiPerri and Noreen Gatto, all of South Boston, Barbara Ann Curran of Delaware; three grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Newton resident for 47 years

NEWTON CENTRE — Robert F. Nolan, 77, died Saturday at the Newton-Wellesley Hospital after a short illness.

A Newton resident for 47 years, Mr. Nolan was born and raised in Pittsfield and graduated from the Rensellaer Polytechnical Institute of Troy, N.Y. in 1931.

He was a supervisor for the Division of Surplus Property for the Massachusetts Department of Education for 44 years.

He is survived by his wife, Kay M. (Mahoney); three daughters, Patricia A. Spirito of Springfield, N.J., Kay're Staniewicz of Tewksbury, Linda MacNevin of Newton Lower Falls; a brother, Thomas Nolan of Pittsfield and seven grandchildren.

He was predeceased by a daughter, Nancy Ward.

A funeral mass was celebrated on Wednesday at 10 a.m. in Sacred Heart Church, Newton Center.

Burial followed in the family lot of St. Mary's Cemetery, Needham.

Arrangements by Lyons and Hayes Funeral Home, West Newton.

June King, 67

Worked for GEN-RAD and Custom Music

NEWTON CENTRE — A funeral service for June King, 67, of Newton Centre, was held Thursday at 10 a.m. in the Newton Cemetery Chapel, Walnut Street, Newton Centre. Interment was in Newton Cemetery.

She died Monday at Newton-Wellesley Hospital, after a long illness.

Born in N. H., she had been a resident of Newton Centre for many years and was a 1940 graduate of Simmons College.

She had been a longtime employee of GEN-RAD of Concord and of Custom Music, Dedham.

Rosa di Stefano, 76

Was secretary with Moody's Investors

SILVER SPRINGS, MISS. — A funeral service was held Saturday in St. John's Episcopal Church, for Rosa (Tirabassi) di Stefano, 76, formerly of Boston and Acton, who had been a secretary with Moody's Investors Service, Boston, for 18 years.

Locally she leaves her daughter, Andrea A. Gregory of Newton. She also is survived by her other daughter, Bettina A. Norton of Boston and seven grandchildren.

A violinist in the Gulf Coast Civic Symphony, she had also worked part-time in the showroom of Clearwater Pottery.

Gerald Hill, 39

Worked for Shell Oil Co., Waltham

WALTHAM — The Rev. Howard Haywood, pastor of the Myrtle Baptist Church, officiated at a funeral service for Gerald Hill, 39, of Waltham, in the Myrtle Baptist Church, 21 Curve St., West Newton, Friday at 10 a.m. Interment was in Newton Cemetery, Newton Centre.

Mr. Hill died last Tuesday at his home, after a brief illness.

Born in Goppingen, Germany, he had been a terminal operator at the Shell Oil Company, Waltham, for the past 15 years and was on Shell's safety committee.

Mr. Hill was a member of the Men's Choir and of the Usher Board of the Myrtle Baptist Church.

Walter E. Phelps, 83

WATERTOWN — A funeral mass was celebrated recently in St. Patrick's Church, Watertown, for Walter E. Phelps, 83, of Watertown, a retired examiner for the Massachusetts Department of Insurance. Burial was in St. Joseph's Cemetery, West Roxbury.

Born in Lowell, he had been a Watertown resident for 70 years and was a graduate of Boston Trade School and Bentley College's School of Accounting.

He was an active member of Newton Council 167, Knights of Columbus.

He leaves his wife, Mary A. (Cotteri) Phelps and several nieces and nephews.

Helen R. Dunbar, 84

WEST ROXBURY — A funeral mass was celebrated recently in Holy Name Church, West Roxbury, for Helen R. (O'Brien) Dunbar, 84, of West Roxbury. Burial was in St. Joseph's Cemetery, West Roxbury.

Locally, she leaves her son, Robert P. Dunbar of West Newton and her grandsons, Robert P. Jr., James Michael III and Christopher Dunbar.

Born in Somerville, she had been employed as a schoolteacher in the Boston area and had lived in West Roxbury for many years.

Man faces arraignment

BOSTON (AP) — A 36-year-old man faces arraignment on murder charges after he turned himself in to city police in the shooting death of a woman in her home, police said.

Leo Farrier of the city's Dorchester section surrendered to police a few hours after the shooting in the Roxbury section home of Willie Anne Newbury, 28, Officer John Gillespie said.

Full speed ahead for Liberty bash

By Peter Alan Harper
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Workmen put the finishing touches on the Statue of Liberty for the big weekend bash as more tall ships glided into view and businesses overlooking New York Harbor reported customers swarming in.

"We're jammed," Dennis Starr, vice president of The Liberty Cafe in the South Street Seaport facing the harbor, said Tuesday evening as noise bubbled around him at the restaurant.

"There's no doubt the celebration is contributing to the increase in business," which was about 25 percent above normal, he said.

At the Vista International Hotel at the World Trade Center, also in lower Manhattan, assistant manager Luis Rosario said his business was "fantastic. It's going to be a madhouse. We've been sold out."

Now through Sunday, all 825 rooms are reserved. Would anyone have any kind of chance getting a room? "No, that's impossible," he said.

At the Hilton Hotel in midtown, rooms were booked solid for Friday, and the availability of rooms for Thursday and Saturday "looks sort of iffy," said Robert Fischer, the night manager.

At Gianni's restaurant at the South Street Seaport, general manager Paul Sharon said "this evening we've got a definite increase in business, as much as 20 percent... It's going to be a big, big bash."

The big bash came closer Tuesday as the aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy, flanked by six tugs and two police boats, made its way into the harbor and dropped anchor halfway between Liberty Island and Governors Island.

The carrier will be a floating reviewing stand for the news media during the centennial observances of the statue.

Refurbishing of the statue, which began three years ago, is almost finished, National Park Service spokesman Manny Strumpf said. Workers on Liberty Island were doing some minor landscaping, touch-up painting and stone cleaning, he said.

President Reagan is to unveil the statue with a laser light show Thursday night, kicking off a July Fourth weekend celebration that is expected to attract 13 million people.

It also includes what is billed as the largest fireworks display in the nation's history. More than 20 tall ships, followed by more than 250 smaller sailing ships from around the world, will take part in a Parade of Sail up the Hudson River on Friday.

The National Weather Service predicted rain for today, but clearing Thursday and sunny and clear through Friday.

The Canadian tall ship Bluenose II sailed into the harbor to its berth at South Street Seaport on Tuesday, and the Philadelphia ship Gazela — the oldest of the tall ships at 103 years — was en route.

Another tall ship, the Shabab Oman, navigated through Long Island Sound to the Flushing Marina near Shea Stadium, said Operation Sail 1986 spokesman Gordon Lattey.

Also Tuesday, Lee Iacocca, chairman of the Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation, announced that the money is still rolling in as the fund-raising drive for the two islands has surpassed its $265 million goal by $12 million.

Seizing the celebration as a way to call attention to the nation's homeless was the National Coalition for the Homeless, which scheduled a 30-hour vigil at Battery Park, within sight of the Statue of Liberty.

"We're looking to transform that sentiment (about the statue) into support for homeless persons," said Robert Hayes, counsel for the coalition. "It'll be a sad scene (tonight) when the permit expires and the police start shoving away the homeless before the real festivities begin."

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, the former Democratic presidential aspirant and head of the Rainbow Coalition, was to speak at noon today.

Mayor Edward I. Koch, who was critical of Liberty Weekend organizers for naming only a dozen naturalized citizens for medals, gave special awards Tuesday to 86 eminent immigrants from 50 countries.

Tall Ships leave R.I. for N.Y.

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Twenty-three Tall Ships cruised out of Newport in a Parade of Sail down Narragansett Bay and headed toward New York for the Statue of Liberty celebration.

The sloop Providence led Tuesday's flotilla, followed by the vessels Gleam and Lark. Gov. Edward D. DiPrete reviewed the parade from the Mazurka.

The first of the four giant Class A ships was the French three-masted bark Belem, followed by the Venezuelan ship Simon Bolivar, the Sagres II from Portugal, and the Mexican ship Cuauhtemoc.

Sailors lined yardarms and ships' decks, waving and cheering to thousands of spectators who packed the coastline on both sides of the bay's east passage. An estimated half-million people saw the ships since Friday.

Police said traffic moved smoothly despite a two-car accident on the Braga Bridge in Fall River, Mass., that stalled eastbound traffic for about an hour.

The ships lined up for the parade about noon to the south of the Newport Bridge, but they had trouble maintaining position because of a light and variable wind.

The wind caused problems for the U.S. Coast Guard training ship Eagle, an unexpected visitor to Newport Harbor that arrived with cadets perched high above deck on the rigs of furled sails.

A shift in wind direction forced the ship's skipper, Rhode Island native Earnest Cummings, to cancel plans to pass under the Newport Bridge in full sail.

Cummings said he wanted to swing the Eagle by his home state for the Rhode Island Ocean Heritage Festival, part of the state's 350th anniversary celebration.

The Eagle and the other ships will be in New York for the 100th anniversary celebration and rededication of the Statue of Liberty on Friday.

Ship sculpture in Liberty flotilla

NEW YORK (AP) — It voyaged through fog, hail, rain and snow, and arrived just in time for the Liberty Weekend parade of tall ships. But it has never navigated rivers or seas and will not be in New York Harbor.

The Prairie Ship Liberty, a 200-foot-long, 110-foot-tall sculpture of a sailing ship, with 24,000 square feet of brightly colored sails, was welcomed Tuesday with a brass band, a Navy cadets' salute and as much fanfare as the tall ships that sail the harbor.

The ship — the only land-locked vessel officially designated as a tall ship — began its trip across America three months ago in Portland, Ore. It traveled in pieces in a truck and two vans and was assembled in 11 cities along the way.

"We're just as long as the tall ships; just as high as the tall ships, and we had just as far a voyage," said Naj Wikoff, its 36-year-old artist from Lake Placid.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island fund drive has surpassed its goal of $265 million by $12 million, and contributions are still pouring in, Liberty-Ellis Foundation Chairman Lee Iacocca said.

"There's never been a fund-raising effort like this in history," Iacocca said Tuesday. At the rate money is coming in, the Chrysler Corp. chairman added, "we could well break $300 million."

About $100 million came from individuals, including $55 million "from schoolkids' nickels and dimes," he said.

Only about $65 million was needed for the statue's restoration, he said.

Most of the rest goes to Ellis Island, where work is under way on the main receiving building through which millions of immigrants passed.

What's done on the rest of the island depends on how much money is raised and how the Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Commission decides to spend it.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Members of the Masonic fraternity in California and Hawaii have raised nearly half of the $2 million Masons nationwide are donating to the Statue of Liberty restoration project, officials announced.

The Grand Lodge Free and Accepted Masons of California and Hawaii has raised $901,136 in the largest fund-raising effort ever undertaken by the 136-year-old chapter, Masonic officials said Tuesday.

The Grand Lodge includes more than 160,000 members in California and about 3,000 in Hawaii.

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — A man who donned an Uncle Sam suit to rally support for U.S. hostages in Iran will hit the street Friday to lead the National Independence Day parade in the nation's capital.

"Patriotism has to be practiced every day," said Ernie May, 47, whose personal brand of national pride led him to turn his Pontiac home into a flag-decked "museum of democracy."

During the hostage crisis, he would show up at Pontiac City Council meetings dressed in red, white and blue and urge officials to remember the hostages.

He organized a parade to call attention to the hostages' plight. When they were released 444 days after their capture, May stayed on the march.

May, who retired from the General Motors Corp., estimates he has marched in about 1,000 parades dressed as Uncle Sam.

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Kenneth Mack Jr., the 13-year-old lad who has sung for the president and the pope, has left here for New York where he will sing the national anthem on ABC-TV.

Kenneth was chosen to sing "The Star-Spangled Banner" on Thursday night during the network's Statue of Liberty centennial celebration.

"I'm real excited about it," Kenneth said as he waited to board a plane Tuesday.

The boy, who is afflicted with stunted growth, sang last December at the White House and earlier last year at the Vatican in Rome.

OUR EMPLOYEES TAKE GOOD CARE OF OUR PATIENTS. WE TAKE GOOD CARE OF OUR EMPLOYEES.

At Hillhaven Corporation, we believe good patient care requires even more than the modern facilities and top-notch medical care we offer. It requires people — the kind of RN's and LPN's that provide personal as well as professional expertise. We also understand the value of such employees. That's why at our Briarwood facility, we offer the outstanding benefits a fine staff deserves.

For those without a vehicle or access to public transport, Briarwood offers free transportation to and from several different points in greater Boston. We also offer a Monday through Friday work schedule with no weekends required. Some of our other excellent benefits include a weekend work program in which you can work 12 hours and get paid for 18, and a reliability bonus program that entitles you to an extra check as you accumulate hours. If you prefer, you can even have pay in lieu of benefits.

Hillhaven's greatest benefit, however, is the rewarding opportunity for RN's and LPN's to grow both personally and professionally by working with some of the most touching of clientele — the elderly.

For an interview appointment, please contact Mary Morrissey, DNS, at 617-449-4040.

Liability crunch could close lake

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — While Crystal Lake probably will not dry up in the near future, a nation-wide liability insurance crisis may force city officials to shut down the recreation facility in the next few years.

"The long-term situation in the insurance market is very difficult to predict," Chief Administrative Officer Richard Kelliher says. "Many municipalities have curtailed swimming programs because they were unable to get insurance or self-insure themselves. The area where we are taking the greatest precaution is the swimming pools and Crystal Lake."

Recreation programs, according to Kelliher, are among the first to suffer if a municipality cannot find an insurer. Municipal officials are reluctant to offer programs — like swimming or fireworks — in which someone can be seriously injured without having liability insurance. As a result, programs like the Crystal Lake recreation area may become a risk they are unwilling to take.

According to Comptroller Lawrence Marino, very few if any companies are willing to offer liability insurance to municipalities. To continue offering recreational programs and other municipal services, he says Newton has gone into the insurance business.

"No one bid for our insurance contract this year," Marino says. "Last year, we got only one bid. The market for liability insurance at this point is extremely difficult. Nobody is interested in underwriting our liability risk."

City officials last year set aside $500,000 to cover any liability claims, a figure Kelliher expects to match for fiscal year 1987. Because the money comes out of the "free cash" budget, Kelliher says in addition to a possible curtailment of city services, surplus estimates are often misleading.

"It is hard on the financial plan for the utilization of free cash," he says. "This money does not sit around idly."

Recreation programs are not the only city services requiring liability insurance. Kelliher says the city also must insure against liability incurred by police, public officials and school board members. He adds last year liability costs nearly equaled the premium on an insurance contract to cover the city, making self-insurance a viable option. "Especially if it is the only option we have," Marino says.

To offer additional protection, Kelliher says the city requires contractors for major services to carry "at least $3 million in liability insurance." That requirement, he says, makes finding contractors for services like removing asbestos and lead paint in schools "very difficult.

"Municipalities are not the only ones facing an insurance crunch," he says. "It is very difficult all around."

To offset the lack of insurance, Mayor Theodore Mann, through the United States Conference of Rape suspect charged

By Maureen Azzato

NEWTON — Morris Naggar, 24, of Newton, was arraigned in Brookline District Court Monday on a charge of raping a woman in his 1985 Mercedes Benz July 4.

Naggar pleaded not guilty to the charge and was released on personal recognizance by Judge Henry Crawley. A pre-trial conference is scheduled for July 22. The maximum sentence for a rape conviction cannot exceed 20 years imprisonment.

Brookline and Newton police, having obtained a warrant, searched Naggar's car at 7:30 p.m. on July 4 at his Baldpate Hill Road home in Newton Centre, according to reports. In the car they found two items listed in the warrant — a white sock and a yellow jacket — which police said belonged to the victim.

According to police, Naggar was not arrested, but he was summoned to appear in court Monday morning. The alleged rape occurred near the Newton and Brookline town line, but police would not reveal the exact location of the attack, the circumstances surrounding it or the age of the victim.

While police were searching the car, Naggar's father, Max, 65, complained of chest pains and was transported by ambulance to Beth Israel Hospital. Naggar is not listed as a patient at the

Sentenced for death of newborn

By Andrew P. McCloy

CAMBRIDGE — Margaret A. Moreau, the 24-year-old woman who left her newborn baby to die in the trash can of a West Newton bank, pleaded guilty to charges of manslaughter last week.

Middlesex Superior Court Judge Harry Elam Thursday sentenced Moreau, of Newton, to 10 years at MCI in Framingham, of which three months will be served and the balance suspended. Moreau has been ordered to perform 500 hours of community service during a two-year probationary period. Her sentence begins July 14.

Middlesex County Asst. District Attorney J.W. Carney Jr. said Moreau gave birth to a healthy baby boy Nov. 20 in the restroom while working as a teller at the Northeast Savings Bank on Needham Street.

During testimony it was revealed that Moreau, after experiencing back pains, entered the bathroom around 2:45 p.m., where she gave birth and placed the child in a trash receptacle, covering him with paper towels and trash, he said. Employees at the bank said Moreau reportedly spent an unusual amount of time in the bathroom that afternoon, he added.

After cleaning herself and the bathroom, she returned to her teller's station, he said. Approximately one hour and 20 minutes later she returned to the bathroom and checked on the baby, who was still alive and appeared to be breathing, he said.

Moreau then left for the day when the bank closed, he said. Around 9 p.m. that night the baby was discovered by two cleaning workers, who emptied the receptacle containing the body into a larger barrel and noticed its unusual weight, he said.

An autopsy revealed the baby was a full-term infant who had died from cardiopulminary failure associated with unattended birth and abandonment, he said. The autopsy also revealed the baby had lived for a period of time and had no congenital defects, he said.

According to Medical Examiner Margaret Greenwald, who performed the autopsy, the baby would have lived had he received a minimal amount of care after birth.

Carney said Moreau discovered she was pregnant in

Accessory apt. recommendation

Owner-occupancy is central

By Les Orsini
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Making it clear they do not want to create a boon for housing speculators, Zoning Amendment Committee (ZAC) have said the city should permit accessory apartments only in owner-occupied homes.

ZAC members recently voted 5 to 0 to make owner occupancy the centerpiece for what will likely be a multi-faceted accessory apartment ordinance recommendation.

This provision, they argued, would protect neighborhoods by limiting the number of accessory units and preventing an owner from becoming an unresponsive, absentee landlord.

It will also guard against a wealthy landowner increasing the value of his holdings by simply adding an apartment to each of his properties, ZAC members said.

"I think the purpose should not be to allow a lot of people to use this for housing speculation," said Alderman Vern Vance. "It's going to happen anyway. We should limit the effect."

ZAC members also voted to further restrict homeowners by saying they must live in the principal, rather than the accessory, part of a building.

Aldermen Louis Irwin objected, saying an elderly person

Lack of housing makes proposal too limiting

By Les Orsini

NEWTON — Some city officials and the League of Women Voters fear a proposal to legalize relatively few of Newton's accessory apartments would do nothing to ease the city's acute housing shortage.

Drafted by the Zoning Review Committee (ZRC), the proposal would permit accessory apartments only in owner-occupied homes built before 1923 that have more than 3,600 square feet of building space.

The ZRC also recommends that accessory dwellings be limited to one per house and contain no more than a third of a building's total floor area.

Last week, some members of the aldermanic Zoning Amendment Committee (ZAC) and the league said an accessory apartment ordinance should not legalize only pre-1923 constructed, large homes.

The league also said accessory units should not be restricted to a third of the size of a house.

"Accessory apartments offer both needed low-income shelter and an opportunity for people to buy or retain a home that might otherwise be economically impossible," said league president Anne W. Hayden in a letter to the ZAC.

The ZRC, a committee of residents and aldermen, has drafted a revision of the city's zoning ordinance. The ZAC has been charged with studying that revision and making final recommendations to the full Board of Aldermen.

Senior planner Gene Kennedy told the ZAC that only 1,001 — or 4.9 percent — of the city's 20,300 single- and two-family homes qualify for legal accessory apartments under the ZRC's restrictions.

'A good plant and a song' are farmer's concerns

Giuseppe DeLuca and his cousin, Mauro Illusi.

Howard Altman photo

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Naples, Italy, according to the map, is thousands of miles from the Garden City.

But don't tell that to Giuseppe DeLuca, who runs a farm stand on Dedham Street. His three-acre plot, complete with grape vines, herbs, flowers and trees "is a little bit of the old country."

The first property in Newton as you leave West Roxbury via Dedham Street, DeLuca Farms is more than just a place where things grow. It is, as DeLuca puts it, "a living, breathing piece of the way things used to be."

It is easy to spot, this little plot of land nestled between subdivisions and Victorian homes. Petunias and other flowers bloom along the roadside, and, on a windy day, the scent of the good earth wafts through the open windows of passing cars.

It has been this way for 42 years. DeLuca, now 66, took up the family business of farming from his father Salvatore.

"People come from all over," DeLuca says. "They've been coming here for years. They used to come here to buy plants and vegetables from my father, Salvatore. Now they come here from Boston, Wellesley, Newton and Dedham and buy from me."

Salvatore came to this country from Naples. He saved his money and purchased nine acres of choice land in what was a string of small farm plots. Though he was thousands of miles from where he was born, Salvatore DeLuca never forgot his heritage.

The love of "the Mother Land," and the love of the earth were passed down to Giuseppe, who, when not selling the products of the earth, is singing Italian opera arias.

"O sole mia," he sings, accompanying a tape of Mario Lanza. "This is what people come here for. Good plants, good music and a good word."

DeLuca, a large and gregarious man, is smiling on this gray and steamy day. It is not surprising, considering he is surrounded by everything he loves most.

DeLuca's easy smile belies the hard work involved in maintaining a working farm with only the intermittent help of two high school students.

"I really am involved in this," he says. "When I am not growing, I am tending to the soil over the winter. In the spring, I plant, and all through the summer, I am tending to the plants. It is hard work, but I love it. Working with the earth is what I was always meant to do and the thing I love best."

Despite having three acres, a sizeable plot in a city where every inch of land is drooled over, DeLuca is not able to grow as much as he would like.

"I don't have the help, so I can't grow as much as I could," he says. "The way things are right now, I can make a profit, because I don't have a big labor cost. If I were to hire more help, then this farm wouldn't be profitable."

DeLuca is fortunate this summer. His cousin, Mauro Illusi — a painter by trade — is visiting from Italy in an effort to sell some of his work. When he is not putting paint to canvas, Illusi helps out on the farm.

Otherwise, DeLuca would be alone. His three sons have long since left the homestead and gone on their own. Talking about that, the ever-present smile on his face takes a temporary leave.

"It is kind of sad," he says. "I know that when I die, so will this farm. Every week, I

Blasted for his voting record

WALTHAM — Two area republican leaders lost a motion in the Republican State Committee to criticize republican U.S. Rep. Silvio Conte because of his allegedly anti-President Reagan voting record.

GOP State Committeeman Alvin Mandell of Newton made the motion which was seconded by State Committeeman Paul F.X. Powers of Waltham. The two charged that even though Conte's congressional district in the far western part of the state voted for Reagan in the past election, Conte has "consistently voted against Reagan's policies."

Mandell said, "It has not gone unnoticed that Rep. Conte's voting record indicates a closer affinity to the philosophy of the other party than to our own."

The motion was defeated 33-16, Powers reported, because republicans in the western part of the state charged that the motion amounted to a vote for censure. Powers denied it went that far.

Powers noted, that Republian State Chairman Andrew Natsios also favored the criticism of Conte.

The exact wording of the motion concluded: "Therefore, this Republican State Committee wishes to go on record as urging Congressman Conte to rethink his positions and to provide stronger support for the philosophy and positions of our great President Ronald W. Reagan, who was re-elected in 1984 by an overwhelming majority of the citizens of the United States."

Chaulk to continue service to city

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — An aldermanic subcommittee last week unanimously approved the city's ambulance contract bidding procedures, clearing the way for Chaulk Ambulance to continue providing service for the next three years.

The subcommittee, formed to investigate Alderman Richard McGrath's charges that the bidding was "unfair", determined that Metro Emergency Medical Services, the quantitative low bidder, was not qualified to service the contract.

Last week's vote came on the heels of an agreement between Chaulk and the city awarding the ambulance company more than $71,000 for an interim three-month contract to provide two basic life support (BLS) ambulances and one advance life support (ALS) ambulance.

Chaulk, which has provided ambulance service for the past five years, was originally awarded a three-year contract June 2. Complaints from Metro and the Board of Aldermen that the city did not give either enough time to make a decision lead to last month's vote not to allocate money for the full contract.

Instead, aldermen voted to allocate $140,000 for a six-month contract in order to give them time to review the situation and set up a possible rebid of the contract. Last week, the four-member subcommittee voted to extend the interim contract into the three-year deal.

Chief Administrative Officer Richard Kelliher acknowleged that "we should have done this two years ago when the first contract expired," adding the city was considering other options to save money.

The main option was a regional ambulance system that would bring together Newton, Wellesley and Newton Wellesley Hospital. Those negotiations, Kelliher said, broke down after jurisdictional and control problems could not be worked out.

The city, he said, insisted on maintaining control over the ambulance dispatching so Newton residents would not find themselves without ambulance service. While the regional approach is not viable now, Kelliher said it is still an option that will be under consideration.

While aldermen found that the bidding procedure was proper and that Chaulk was the low responsive and responsible bidder, they decided to continue the review process "to make sure that we do not come under the gun like we did with this contract," according to Alderman Paul Coletti.

After five years of offering ambulance service with no charge to the city, Chaulk asked for a nearly $1 million subsidy to offset losses. Metro asked for a lower subsidy but the subcommittee, after reviewing documents and interviewing city officials, decided that Chaulk was better qualified to deliver the service.

The subcommittee found that Metro was unwilling to provide required financial data, including Dunn and Bradstreet reports and refused to bid on a range of options including reduced service and garaging of vehicles.

Purchasing Agent Blair Kanbar said both companies were invited to a pre-bid conference and asked to bid on a variety of options. He added Metro only bid on the full service. Police Chief William Quinn said "I am confident" that the city would not suffer if ambulance service was reduced at certain hours, but Metro would not consider that option.

The subcommittee's decision will be voted on at the next Finance Committee meeting and will appear before the Board of Aldermen July 14 for a final vote.

Enroll in school

NEWTON — Students who are planning to attend Newton North High School in September and who are presently enrolled in another system or in private or parochial schools, should contact the counseling department at Newton North. Appointments will be scheduled during the months of July and August. Registrations at this time will help to avoid disappointment in course selection and delays frequently associated with registation during the opening days of school in September. Accessory apartment proposal is too limiting dinance," he said.

But one resident argued against changing the laws to legalize accessory apartments.

Former alderman Lisle Baker said Newton's zoning has been traditionally conservative and should remain so.

"Unless there's a compelling reason to change, there may be a compelling reason not to change," he said.

The ZRC's proposal could alter the character of his Chestnut Hill neighborhood because a "disproportionate" number of the homes would qualify for accessory apartments, he said. "It's getting close enough to a change of zone," he said.

ZRC member Glen Morris said his committee chose 1923 as a cutoff date because that was the end of the Victorian housing boom. Those homes are among the city's largest and owners often need a rental income to afford them.

Members chose 3,600 square feet as the cutoff when smaller figures "didn't fly," he said. "Personally, I'd like to see something smaller," Morris said.

He suggested limiting accessory apartment rents to federal Housing and Urban Development Department rates. "It's a mechanism for allowing the public good...not just enriching the homeowner," he said.

Polly Sullivan, another ZRC member, said the city should start with her committee's restrictive proposal, then aldermen can loosen the requirements if appropriate.

She reminded the ZAC that homeowners can legally have three boarders as long as they don't create separate apartments. "So the door isn't totally closed," she said.

"It's clear from the information that the number of parcels that would qualify under the ZRC proposal is limited," Kennedy said yesterday afternoon.

His report suggests the ZAC consider lowering the lot size requirement to at least 2,100 square feet. Doing so would increase the number of homes eligible for legal accessory apartments to 7,227, the document states.

Alderman Sondra Shick said the building size requirement should be around 2,200 square feet so more homes would qualify. She said she was "flexible" on the 1923 construction date requirement.

"If we enacted the 3,600 square foot requirement, we would basically have a token ordinance which would have no effect," said Alderman Sondra Shick.

The ZRC proposal would probably not help several homeowners now asking the Zoning Board of Appeals for variances to legalize their accessory apartments, according to Asst. City Solicitor Ouida Young. "This will probably have very little relief," she said.

Alderman Carol Robinson attacked the 1923 requirement because it is unfair to the owner of a modern home who may need rental income to pay tax and mortgage bills.

"There have been some modern facilities that have been built that people have been moving into," she said. "I want to deal with the 1980s."

Allen White, chairman of the city's Human Rights Commission, said limiting accessory apartments only to old and large buildings could be unfair. The old and the wealthy usually own such homes, he said. "You don't want to discriminate against people and keep it an upper-income ordinance," he said.

But one resident argued against changing the laws to legalize accessory apartments.

Former alderman Lisle Baker said Newton's zoning has been traditionally conservative and should remain so.

"Unless there's a compelling reason to change, there may be a compelling reason not to change," he said.

The ZRC's proposal could alter the character of his Chestnut Hill neighborhood because a "disproportionate" number of the homes would qualify for accessory apartments, he said. "It's getting close enough to a change of zone," he said.

CAMBRIDGE — A 17-year-old Newton girl was indicted by a Middlesex County grand jury last week on a charge of assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon. She will be arraigned in Middlesex Superior Court in several weeks.

The defendant was arraigned in Newton District Court last month and pleaded not guilty to the charge. The terms of release were set at $20,000 surety or $2,000 cash bail, but a superior court judge reduced it to $2,500 surety or $250 cash bail, according to Assistant District Attorney Tania Gray. The defendant then made bail.

The girl was arrested May 30 after she allegedly reached inside a Newton resident's car and scraped the victims face with a plastic, jagged-edged spoon after she was refused a ride, according to Gray.

On that day, the victim was parking her car near her Newton Centre home when the suspect allegedly approached and asked for directions to Newton-Wellesley Hospital, according to reports. The victim repeated the directions three times and "rolled down her car window more and more because the suspect claimed she couldn't hear," Gray said.

The suspect then asked the woman if she and her friend could get a lift to the hospital, but the victim refused, Gray said.

"It's alleged the suspect stuck a long narrow object through the window and scraped it against the victim's face," Gray said.

While the victim was being attacked, she honked the horn and screamed for help and the suspect ran from the car, Gray said. Police responded and within minutes they apprehended the suspect, who later was positively identified by the victim, according to Gray.

"When she was caught by police, the suspect dropped an object on the ground that is believed to be the weapon used on the victim," Gray said.

High school's roof repair plans on hold

NEWTON — Construction to fix deteriorating portions of Newton North High School's 13-year-old roof may not begin until after school starts this fall.

The Public Facilities Committee was scheduled to review the plans, but the consulting firm of Simpson, Gumpertz and Heger has not finished designing project specifications, according to Chairman George Mansfield.

Aldermen several weeks ago approved $25,000 to pay for the project's design.

The Public Facilities Committee had recommended the board hold off approving the estimated $664,000 needed for construction. Members urged aldermen to wait until Building Commissioner James W. Cameron presented designs showing what type of roof the city proposed to construct.

At the time, Cameron and School Department Director of Support Services Roy Cornelius requested specifications be reviewed at an early summer committee meeting. This would permit the full board to appropriate the remaining funds at its July 14 meeting and construction to begin this summer.

Mansfield said roof construction usually involves stripping off existing materials and dumping them to the ground. "I could understand why they didn't want to do this while school's in session," he said.

But since specifications were not ready last night, Public Facilities probably will not be able to deliberate the issue until July 28, its next meeting. And the full board will not be able to appropriate funds until its August 11 session, Mansfield said.

It often takes the city three or four weeks after funding to draw up a contract with a construction firm. "You add three or four weeks to August 11 and school has started," Mansfield said.

The situation is "regrettable" but aldermen can do nothing until the specifications are completed, he said.

Housing plans for bowling ball factory

NEWTON — Developer Jack Antaramian's construction proposal would be an improvement over the bowling ball factory that used to operate at the intersection of Needham and Oak streets.

But the old Stowe-Woodward factory — which disturbed the neighborhood with noise and pollution — has been out of business for more than a decade.

And some residents are unsure whether the developer's latest plans would be better than what is now there — a quiet, vacant building.

Antaramian's representatives recently unveiled a proposal to build 170 apartments on the 3.5 acre site. This is one of three possibilities the developer is considering.

Three Upper Falls residents interviewed said they realized development there is inevitable. But Antaramian's latest proposal may just be too large, they said.

Their reactions ranged from "very much opposed" to "pretty opposed" to open-minded but "skeptical." Again and again, two raised the issue of traffic. The cars those apartments would likely generate could be too much for Needham Street.

"You're talking about 250 cars," said David Slifka of Butts Street. Needham Street is already "stuffed at the morning and evening rush hours," he added.

Cars now avoid the traffic crunch there by taking Elliot Street to High Street to Route 9, said resident Vincent Gamble. "In order for us to back out of our driveways, we've got to wait 10 minutes," he said.

The city continues to allow construction even though it is harming residential life, Gamble said. Two office buildings have been built on Oak Street during the past two years.

Trucks now rumble past Gamble's house to the old Valle's site where 300,000 square feet of commercial space is under construction. The vibrations have cracked the new concrete walls on the sides of his driveway, he claimed.

"You can't prove it," he said. "But that's why it happened."

Charles Manning of Abbot Street hopes he can convince the developer to reduce the project's size.

His backyard touches the developer's lot line. "I'm probably his biggest headache," Manning said.

Developers vie for open Centre parcel

NEWTON — A 4.8-acre parcel of land in Newton Centre will fall under the auctioneer's gavel this month.

The parcel, at 393 Brookline St., was owned for more than 30 years by Robert Cunniff, who died in December. According to George Michaels, the attorney representing the Cunniff estate, the land, purchased for $13,500 during the depression "should sell for more than $1 million."

The parcel's tremendous appreciation, according to Planning Director Barry Canner, is the result of tremendous interest by developers in available land in the Garden City. Because of its proximity to Boston and transportation centers, Newton is an attractive place to build housing.

The deadline for bids on the land is July 15, Michaels says. Closing will take place August 15. Michaels says even with a minimum bid of $900,000, "there is no lack of interest in the property."

"All kinds of people have picked up packets giving a description of the property," he says. "From what I hear, people want to put in as few as four, and as many as seven units on the land."

Cunniff, according to Edith Allanbrook, the deceased's former bookkeeper, used the land mainly to store heavy equipment he used in his trucking and excavating business.

"When he bought the land in 1934," she says, "there were no neighbors. There were cow pastures and apple orchards, real pastoral surroundings. Mr. Cunniff would never have been allowed to store that equipment now."

Man seeks break on street assessment

NEWTON — Despite advice from the Law Department, the Public Facilities Committee has recommended that a resident be charged only half the standard assessment for improvements to his street.

In doing so, the aldermanic committee last night continued a city policy that violates its own ordinances.

The city plans to repave Lothrop Street in Nonantum and put in sidewalks and curbs. The road would then change from a private way to a public street.

The $75,000 project will be paid for by Lothrop Street residents and the city, which will use approximately $45,000 in federal Community Development Block Grant funds for its share.

The Engineering Department has estimated assessments for Lothrop Street residents. The actual charges — which must be approved by the full board of Aldermen — can be lower but cannot exceed those estimates.

Mark Blogier of 5 Jennison St. asked aldermen to waive his assessment because his house sits on the corner of Lothrop Street. His driveway is on Jennison Street and he said he would derive no benefit from the improvements.

The city bases its estimates on $42 for each square foot of land touching an improved street.

But the Engineering Department usually recommends a lower estimated assessment for homeowners who — like Blogier — own property at an intersection and have already paid the full price of betterments on the adjoining street. According to Chairman George Mansfield, the Law Department has issued a memorandum stating this practice violates Newton law. The memorandum says there is no provision for charging some residents a smaller amount, Mansfield said.

All-night stations would disturb locals

NEWTON — Some aldermen and residents hope to block Mobil Oil Corp. plans to make two neighborhood gas stations 24-hour self-service operations.

Aldermen Polly Bryson and Richard McGrath charged the stations would disturb nearby residences and encourage other oil companies to do the same throughout the Garden City.

Self-service stations generally specialize in gas and oil and sometimes abandon auto maintenance services, both said.

If aldermen give in now, Newton residents may eventually have to travel elsewhere for tune-ups, jump starts and engine repairs, Bryson and McGrath said.

Spotty job on Beacon Street

By Stephanie Simon
Correspondent

WABAN — "I think it looks crummy," says Don Goldenberg.

"It looks very strange. Cosmetically, it certainly isn't well done," agrees another Waban resident.

These residents are two of several who have complained about the condition of Beacon Street in the past week. The Department of Public Works recently attempted to fill in the cracks on Beacon. The effect is "like a little kid painted zig zag designs on the road," says Joan Faye, a secretary who works on Beacon Street.

The repairs stand out because they are made with a different color tar. "It's really a mess. It's positively ridiculous," says Faye.

"I thought they were making designs," says Patsy Marchitelli, echoing a common complaint. "We pay plenty of tax money and the job should be done right."

Aside from aesthetic reasons, some residents are dissatisfied with the patch job because the new tar is a different texture.

"It's sticky," says one resident, "And it doesn't feel good to jog on it. They did a slipshod type of job. It's not worth spending the money to fix the road if it looks bad."

Ralph Thurston, of Waban, says, "I saw one young boy skating in the street, and he complained that it was too sticky to skate on."

Some residents shared the attitude of one woman who declared, "the job looks like hell, but if it keeps water out of the pavement, that's OK." "It seems fine to me," says Cliff Seeto. "A street's a street."

James Hickey, Commissioner of Public Works, emphasized that the city had not received any complaints about the road. "It is necessary work in order to maintain the condition of the roadway," he said. "Not to seal the cracks would be irresponsible. From an aesthetic point of view, it may not look the same as a completely repaved roadway, but it is needed to maintain a good, safe roadway."

Hickey added that the repairs will fade, mainly "over the first winter." Until then, some residents will continue to be angry.

Charges pending in car death

WESTON — A 41-year-old woman was killed Friday night when she was struck by a car as she and her husband were walking along Route 117 in front of their home.

Linda Marder died from injuries received when she was hit by a car around 7 p.m. on Independence Day.

According to police, she and her husband, Robert, were walking against traffic on the eastbound side of Route 117 when the accident occurred. Police said there was no sidewalk where the couple was walking, and there was very little room on the side of the road.

The accident took place in front of 548 North St., near the Lincoln town line.

Police said the driver of the car was John Herbert, 31, of Newton's Oak Hill section. Officer Walley Nelson, who was at the accident scene, said alcohol was not a factor in the accident. He said Herbert apparently was not speeding either.

Herbert told police he was returning to Newton from a game of golf when the accident occurred. Sherman Wexler, an assistant to Boston Police Commissioner Francis Roache, told Nelson he had been following Herbert for a number of miles. He stopped when he saw the accident and said he had not noticed any speeding or erratic driving by Herbert.

Although Herbert was not arrested, he was cited for vehicular homicide and operating a motor vehicle so as to endanger the lives of others. A court hearing will be scheduled to determine whether to go forward with the charges.

Duke's 'good government' pose

After some months and a few years of harmony, unity and cooperation–the ultimate in redundancy from a local candidate--our Marvelous Michael, the master of all he surveys in Massachusetts except for the Legislature, has decided to take on that body.

Here is an exquisite pre-election engagement, the Duke versus the tag team match pair, Keverian and Collins, to the special delight of a heretofore bored Golden Dome press corps.

It isn't that our governor needs this kind of leverage to win a third term, his second in consecutive order. No Republican has yet reached the starting gate, let alone possess a prayer of hope for what is to come. Thus, Michael Dukakis has more than a one-party lock as he looks toward November.

So the need for conciliation on an issue doesn't really exist unless it is a matter of bending to compromise for Dukakis gain. What we see here is something different from a reach toward consensus. The governor can stand firm on a matter, conscious it is a public interest stance that will hold up. He is on a good government mission to keep the choice of a new chancellor of higher education out of the political prize ring.

Simply stated, House Speaker Keverian wanted to bypass the selection process already set up for the Board of Regents and orchestrated a board decision to name Rep. James J. Collins of Amherst. This was done even though Collins had not survived the research team's reduction of the original field of 107 candidates to a final four. Political pressures were vious as eight of the 15 regents pre- it abstained from voting on the four alists, after which Collins got the eight votes needed.

Gov. Dukakis promptly went public in expressing disfavor with the procedure. He was careful to state his dissatisfaction was just that, not a personal attack on Rep. Collins. He removed the chairman of the Board of Regents, replacing him with a Harvard-based management expert, and vowed to overturn the appointment of Collins. Thus the confrontation which had Beacon Hill spinning.

Win or lose, the governor acquires a kind of halo as he stands firm for a good government selection method over a purely political ploy. It may cost him House acceptance of some legislation he feels important down the road, but this is not crucial to his election. A victory on the education front of this nature can furnish more projection as a possible 1988 national ticket contender. Without doubt, the Duke has to have a slight case of Potomac fever from all the attention being lavished on him by the Washington media people.

The governor's strong commitment to education in his second term has had a prior confrontation element involving Rep. Collins, who held House chairmanship of the Education Committee. Collins positioned himself as architect of a sweeping reform package with a price tag of more than a half billion dollars, far more costly than the Dukakis plan which eventually came into enactment. Dukakis came under strong criticism from the teachers'lobby while holding firm on his less ambitious program. Although Collins has moved out of the committee leadership, the same alienation is said to be part of the current session.

Nevertheless, the governor is proclaiming friendship and telling him not to resign his House seat in a fight to retain chancellor status. Young Mr. Collins ought to take the advice. We are totally in accord with the Dukakis insistence that the selection process, culminating a six-month research process, should be restored.

Rejection of Collins could be political quicksand for Duke

By Loring Swaim

Last week's furor over picking a new chancellor of higher education won't subside easily. It looks like quicksand for Gov. Dukakis.

There's much more to the story than meets the eye.

Clearly, Dukakis overplayed his hand. There's no question he never wanted Rep. Jim Collins of Amherst, the man finally chosen.

And the governor likewise seems sufficiently worried about the Westfield situation to buy time for himself by reorganizing the Board of Regents.

One way or another Dukakis people imparted a negative attitude about Collins privately to selected individuals. This while the Regents' ad hoc search committee was whittling down a long list of candidates. The committee excluded Collins from its four finalists, only to see the full board reinstate him and then elect him.

The truth, informed sources maintain, is that Dukakis had been stung two years ago when Collins failed to support Dukakis' version of comprehensive K-through-12 educational reform. Quite understandably, Collins pushed the landmark version he and his committee on education had hammered out oafter exhaustive hearings, research and creative thought.

The Dukakis administration had input to that version–Collins judiciously saw to that–but not title to it. So, not wanting to play second fiddle in effect, Dukakis aides produced their own less ambitious and less costly version and heralded it as a precedent-setting initiative.

As it turned out, educational reform waited until last year for enactment, under the guidance of incoming Speaker George Keverian and his Education Committee Chairman Rep. Nick Paleologos. Drawing on Collins' legwork, Paleologos put together a pragmatic do-able modified version and it sailed through as a Keverian priority issue. Dukakis signed it happily, embracing it as a master achievement of (during?) his administration.

Dukakis insists there is nothing personal in his anger that the regents ignored their own (stacked) search committee and chose Collins. "They weren't working effectively," he now explains to justify abruptly shuffling regencies. "It was time for new leadership." Assuming new appointees will heed him, he's now talking about a new search.

But Speaker Keverian bitterly resents Dukakis' assertion that the search for a chancellor was flawed and Collins is not qualified because he's a legislator. Keverian has never been so upset. And members in both branches are taking this as a personal insult to them.

Dukakis' own fine hand behind the "flawed" scene might make interesting–and embarrassing–reading if brought to light.

Few men I have met in the house or senate in recent years have the vision, the excitement, the patience and the tenacity that Collins displays when he warms to the subject of his expertise–in his case, Massachusetts education. Collins is already up to speed. He knows more about education generally and the Regents staff than most Regents. He has excellent rapport also with private education. If he can be faulted, it is because he is too conscientious developing a consensus, too inclusive in his outreach.

It is totally simplistic to paint Collins as a political hack, supported by Keverian simply because he's a member of the house club.

Collins has won the respect of his legislative colleagues by virtue of his dogged creativity and mastery of the art of compromise.

Dukakis is losing similar respect as he juggles the Westfield hot potato and reveals what happens when his will is crossed.

GOP scramble to succeed Reagan has already begun

By Robert J. Wagman

As George Bush and Jack Kemp falter, a growing number of ambitious Republicans think seriously about making a run for the White House.

WASHINGTON — Only a year ago most Republican insiders believed the 1988 GOP presidential primary would be essentially a two-man affair. But much has happened — or perhaps, more correctly, not happened — in the interim, and many Republicans are starting to say that all bets are off. The 1988 GOP presidential field may become very crowded, and the fight for the nomination could turn into the kind of free-for-all that hasn't been seen in U.S. presidential politics for years.

Twelve months ago, most political handicappers thought the 1988 GOP contest would be a slugfest between Vice President George Bush and Rep. Jack Kemp of New York. Others, like former Sen. Howard Baker and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas, were expected to make the race, but most experts predicted they would fall by the wayside once the first few primaries were over.

What has happened is that neither Bush nor Kemp have built up the kind of momentum most believe they should have even this far from the 1988 primary season.

Without doubt, Bush remains the front-runner. Through "The Fund For America's Future," his political action committee (which will eventually turn into his campaign committee), he has raised much more money than any of his rivals. In the last 11 months the fund has taken in more than $5 million and, despite lavish spending, it still has more than $2.5 million in reserve. By comparison, Kemp's "Campaign For Prosperity" isn't very prosperous. It has more debts than cash.

During the last year Bush has quietly waged what is known as "a campaign of inevitability." He has tried to line up so many endorsements as to virtually preclude any other candidate. The Bush message to other Republicans has been, "Get on the train now before it leaves the station."

But for whatever reason — and there are many explanations floating around — Bush appears to have so far failed in his effort to ignite GOP insiders, particularity grass-roots activists who are so important early in a campaign. This was shown vividly in the first round of the Michigan nominating process when Bush fell far short of the level of support he and most party professionals expected.

Kemp's problems appear to go much deeper. The New York congressman thought that he could count on a high level of conservative support. Given the way conservatives have dominated the GOP nominating process in recent years, he believed this was all he would need to sweep to the nomination.

But Bush has worked tirelessly to woo key conservatives like the Rev. Jerry Falwell, and the kind of all-out conservative support Kemp had hoped for simply has not materialized. His campaign staff is widely seen as badly disorganized, and his fund-raising problems seem severe.

Kemp, however, has deeper problems — he has suddenly found himself locked into a surprisingly tough re-election campaign for his House seat.

Apparently no one told five-term Buffalo Democratic City Councilman James Keane that he had no chance of unseating Kemp. Most observers though Keane was paying his party dues in anticipation of getting the Democratic nomination for mayor next time around. But the gregarious and popular Keane has been aggressively attacking Kemp as a politician so intent on the Oval Office that he has all but ignored his district. This message seems to be getting through to the voters. Polls are starting to show Keane within striking distance of Kemp.

A tough re-election campaign will cost Kemp both time and money he can ill afford. It also thrusts him into the classic no-win situation. If he wins big, it is expected of him. A loss, or even a narrow victory, could cost him his political future.

In the meantime, Bob Dole, with his Senate duties and his own re-election campaign, has not had much chance to focus on the presidential race, and Howard Baker has announced that, due to his wife's illness, he has not even decided whether to run.

The growing perception that the race may be wide open is starting to fuel the hopes of a growing number of Republicans. Already, former Delaware Gov. Pierre "Pete" du Pont has officially thrown his hat into the ring, and television evangelist Pat Robertson inches closer every day.

Other potentially formidable candidates are now seen as waiting and watching. Retiring Nevada Sen. Paul Laxalt, who is very close to Ronald Reagan, is actively testing the waters and will probably run if the conviction grows that Bush is faltering. Former Secretary of State Alexander Haig is also said to be putting together a campaign staff and may well announce his candidacy sometime late this year.

Should Robertson, Laxalt and Haig actually enter the race, the GOP field would become one of the most crowded in recent memory. Given the backing each could expect, all bets would be off. What was seen as essentially a two-man race would be up for grabs. At this point it's anyone's guess who would emerge as the eventual winner.

pregnancy test. At a later time, she made an appointment at an abortion clinic but was told she was too far along in the pregnancy to terminate it, he said, adding Moreau never sought any prenatal care.

Testimony revealed Moreau denied being pregnant to family and friends and said, "I was afraid what they might think of me."

Carney said Moreau had a physique that could disguise the 15 to 20 pounds of pregnancy-related weight gain.

He recommended the sentence because of the nature of the crime and Moreau's lack of a prior criminal record. "She clearly was under enormous psychological pressure in dealing with the unwanted pregnancy, but had to be responsible for her actions," he said.

"Although we will never bring back that baby boy, the charges are a statement by the court and community that wanton conduct leading to the end of a human life will not go unpunished," he added.

Folk concert set

NEWTON — Arts In The Parks, Newton Parks and Recreation Department continues to bring the best to their Folk Concert Series at Jackson Homestead with the Patons on Tuesday, July 15, at 7:15.

Sandy and Caroline Paton, founders and directors of the highly regarded Folk Legacy record company have been a major influence in the folksong revival for more than 25 years. They have presented concerts from the University of Maine to the University of California.

Their approach to folk music is informal and upretentious, they prefer to "share it" with the audience. Come prepared to sing and have an evening of musical fun.

Jackson Homestead is located at 527 Washington St. In case of rain, the performance will be held at 7:30 p.m. at Aquinas Junior College Auditorium, Jackson Road behind the Homestead. Tickets: Adults $2, Seniors and Children $1.

Farmer with few needs get offers from people who want to develop this land for housing. I know that I can get at least $1.5 million, but I am not interested in the money. I am interested in the good earth and what it can grow."

One has only to attend a Board of Aldermen meeting to know that DeLuca is not exaggerating when he talks of million dollar offers for his land. His Dedham Street plot used to be surrounded by other farms, which have long since given way to subdivisions and other housing developments. Being so close to Boston, the city of Newton is a very attractive place to live, making every available inch of land extremely valuable. Despite the potential value of his land, DeLuca does not think in those terms.

"This is history," he says as he walks around the rows of plants, over to the grape vines and across the yard to the vegetable plants behind the canopy. "The house where I live used to be a schoolhouse where the Dedham Street fire station is now. About 100 years ago, a team of horses and wagons moved the schoolhouse down here and this is where I live."

He does not have long to be nostalgic. Customers wander in and ask questions.

"How do I take care of this?," a woman holding up a perennial asks.

"Just water it when needed, prune it back, put it in the sun, and give it a lot of love," DeLuca answers.

Others come to haul boxes of dirt from the pile of loam he has near the driveway. At two dollars a bushel, DeLuca donates the money to Children's Hospital and other charities.

"I don't need the money," he says. "I am well off. I put together the money for my son, Joe, to open Newton Centre Pizza, where I sing every Friday. All I need is a good plant, a kind word and a song. I want to enjoy this while I can, because when I am gone, this farm will be gone, too."

Liability places rec programs in jeopardy

Mayors, is petitioning Congress for changes in insurance laws.

Among the changes are the creation of a federal role in insurance regulation, the creation of intra- and interstate insurance pools that would spread liability risk over a greater range — reducing the cost to individual municipalities.

Mann says that without the enactment of some or all of these measures, municipalities will find themselves in a bind in the not too distant future.

Closing Seabrook 'ridiculous'

To the editor:

It would be ridiculous to ground our jetliners because some primitive Soviet version crashed. It's equally ridiculous and exhibits scientific ignorance, to hold up Seabrook because a totally different Soviet nuclear plant has had a serious fire in its graphite moderator.

Our reactors use water instead of graphite. Our reactors are enclosed in a giant steel-lined reinforced-concrete pressure vessel, designed and tested to greater pressures than a malfunctioning reactor or break in the piping can produce. It is called the containment structure or vessel.

The Soviet plant had a far less effective "partial confinement" structure which might have accommodated breaks in the primary cooling system in equipment spaces around the reactor but apparently was not able to withstand upward pressure in the reactor compartment.

We never said accidents couldn't happen — we postulated the worst kinds of failures, and then designed multiple layers of safeguards to protect the public. And they did protect the public, as demonstrated at Three Mile Island. Negligible amounts of radioactivity were released; the consequences were contained within the plant, as they will by any US-style light water reactor with containment vessel and other multiple safeguards.

The main lesson from Chernobyl is that we were right to design thoroughly for safety. Sure, evacuation plans are desirable as still another layer of safety, but even such an unlikely event as a meltdown can be contained with little release of radioactive material. Evacuation from a two- or three-mile zone around the plant would be an additional measure required only for the severest of accidents.

Massive evacuations around Chernobyl were needed because the plant did not have an effective containment vessel and radioactive material escaped. Even so, it appears that fatalities are limited to operators and firefighters. The long term effect on the 100,000 Soviet citizens who were exposed will be a slight increase in the number who will contract cancer - and probably far fewer cancers than result from smoking.

Although the Soviet plant has safety features, the overall safety concept does not appear to have been as thoroughly analyzed and developed as in the western world, and hence there is little to learn by examining their accident except to confirm the value of the correctness and thoroughness of our approach to safety.

The excellent U.S. safety record is no accident. The care, skill, and integrity of the engineering profession have been applied to ensure that a good record is maintained. The Soviets have taken risks we would not take and have learned a hard lesson.

Thanks given for parade help

To the editor:

The members of the Nonantum Childrens Christmas Party Association wish to extend to you their deepest thanks and gratitude for whatever help you gave in making our 1986 parade such a great success.

Our day began with morning observances at eight veterans memorials, which consisted of wreath placements, prayers and "Taps." These services were well attended by the military, veterans groups, fraternal organizations and many of our citizens. All of the people that attended were fed breakfast at the Sons of Italy Lodge.

The parade consisted of units from the army, navy, national guard, Newton Viet-Nam vets, American Legion Post 440, D.A.V. vets I.T.A.M. Post 50, V.F.W. vets, Franco-American vets and many of the local fraternal groups. Leading the parade was a contin gent of motorcycles from the Middlesex County Sheriffs Department.

Followed by three divisions of marchers, floats, antiques, horses, nine marching bands, cheerleaders from Pop Warner, Our Ladys and Little Leaguers. Newton Boys Club entered a float of a rocket ship, in a salute to the ill-fated astronauts. The highlight of the parade was a full division of the Aleppo Temple Shriners, which are a parade in itself.

Our expenses were many and without your help, none of this would be possible. Thanks to all who participated and God bless you.

Keep Len Bias story alive

To the editor:

Unlike my usual condemnation of our national media who seem to relish yet another gruesome tragedy, I sincerely hope that the Len Bias story will stay alive for years to come.

The needless death of a young and brilliant athlete at the zenith of his career should not be in vain. Instead, it should be used to proclaim loud and long that any drug taken either for the first time or the thousand-and-first is like playing Russian Roulette.

You can end up dead, three minutes later.

The impact of these hard facts, given the proper newspaper coverage, could make an historic turning-point in our national fight against drugs.

Charlesbank story a 'disaster'

Editor:

Andrew McCloy's Charlesbank Road story (June 18) was an unmitigated disaster! Here are ten reasons why:

1. In his very first sentence, he mistakenly states that the city plan would allow traffic westward, when, in fact, the direction would be eastward.

2. How can you call a proposal disastrous before it's even tried?

3. How unfair can you get, when not even one proponent of the plan was interviewed; but all three of the opponents were.

4. John Tardiff (who was quoted at length in McCloy's one-sided article) said that "the proposed traffic flow plan would add twenty minutes to his commute because he would have to travel through Watertown Square to get home."

I'm curious about this, since he lives in the Charlesgate Condos and would be able to travel eastbound down Charlesbank Road as usual.

5. McCloy made it appear as if nobody likes the plan, yet 121 residents of Charlesbank Road and St. James Street signed the petition in favor.

6. Also, the Newton Traffic Commission voted unanimously (twice!) for the trial plan.

7. Others supporting the trial include state representatives David Cohen and Joe DeNucci, as well as alderman Sondra Shick and Ronald Marini.

8. Many of us would also spend a bit more time getting to our homes; but we think it's a good trade-off to achieve less accidents, less pollution, less noise, less stress, and less danger for our children and elders.

9. Watertown is blocking the plan, citing numerous "bugaboos" which are purely speculative; we who live here are citing 1,200 vehicles an hour, 20 cars a minute and two cars per second.

10. All this fuss over a mere trial! Why not allow the trial, and let the resulting facts determine who is right and who is wrong?

In the meantime, I believe the Newton Graphic should either publish a retraction or send McCloy back to journalism school.

Baltic Holocaust is marked

To the editor:

June marked the 45th anniversary of the Baltic Holocaust, one of the most tragic events in the history of the Latvian, Lithuanian, and Estonian people. On this date, in 1951, the Soviet Union began the mass extermination and deportation of innocent men, women, and children from these previously independent nations. During the night of June 13-14 Soviet secret police went from house to house and arrested entire families, herding them into railroad cattle cars bound for Soviet slave labor camps in Siberia.

In Latvia alone, almost 16,000 people disappeared in one night. During the subsequent years of Soviet occupation, nearly 600,000 Baltic citizens, 10 percent of the Latvian, Lithuanian, and Estonian population were eliminated. The tragedy of this event is compounded by the fact that perpetrators have never been brought to justice.

Today, an illegal Soviet regime continues to oppress the people of these proud Baltic nations.

Independent not 'private'

To the editor:

Until our elected officials (and journalists) understand that "private" schools ceased to exist decades ago, fair and rational consideration cannot be given to a proposal to amend the state's constitution to eliminate restrictions on public aid to independent schools. The advent of financial aid, available to qualified students with demonstrated need, has altered significantly the nature of the independent school population. Anyone who continues to call independent schools "private" misunderstands the issue for independent educators is not tax dollars from the public till but independent governance.

Committee votes on accessory apartment rules whose spouse has died might want to live in the smaller unit and rent out the main dwelling. "You'd still have all the implied and inherent protection of owner occupancy," he said.

But Vance argued allowing the owner to live in the extra apartment could be a loophole for economic advantage. A "yuppie," for example, could buy a house and make a profit by living in the accessory unit and renting the rest.

Owner occupancy is one of several issues the ZAC must debate before it recommends an accessory apartment ordinance to the full Board of Aldermen.

The ZAC is studying the proposal of the Zoning Review Committee (ZRC), a committee of aldermen and residents that drafted a revision of the city's entire zoning ordinance.

The ZRC has said the city should permit accessory apartments only in owner-occupied homes built before 1923 that have more than 3,600 square feet of building space. In addition, that committee says there should be only one extra dwelling per home and that unit should be no larger than one-third the size of the building.

Last week, the League of Women Voters came out against the ZRC proposal, saying it is too conservative.

While it supports owner-occupancy, the league has said smaller and newer buildings should also qualify. Accessory apartments could ease the city's housing shortage and help some residents afford their own homes, the league has argued.

The issue has become a sensitive one in the Garden City, which by some estimates already has 4,000 illegal accessory dwellings.

Some residents have argued accessory apartments can erode family neighborhoods with too much traffic and too many people. They can attract single people whose habits clash with family values, they have said.

The courts have further contributed to this erosion by allowing groups of single people to live together if they say they function as a family, ZAC Chairman Rodney Barker said.

"The whole thing is absurd," Barker said. "The courts have gone crazy."

Vance said existing illegal apartments should not affect the ZAC's deliberations. "I'm not prepared to let law breakers make public policy," he said. "That does not impress me."

Former Alderman Lisle Baker has cautioned the ZAC against proposing an unfair ordinance. Under the ZRC recommendation, 20 percent of the homes in his Chestnut Hill neighborhood would qualify for an accessory apartment. This amounts to creating a new zone there while leaving other areas of the city virtually untouched, he has said.

"The impact is isolated," he told the ZRC last week. "Because the proportion (in the neighborhoods effected) is relatively high, they would become a two-family zone."

Alderman Susan Basham, who is not a ZAC member, urged the committee to be realistic. Accessory apartments exist in her own neighborhood, just as they do throughout the city, she said.

Accessory apartments in large homes do not pose a threat to peaceful neighborhood life, she said. They would be no more likely to attract unruly people than any other type of home, Basham pointed out.

"It's different from creating a two-family house and a two-family zone," she said.

Barker said the ZAC can protect a neighborhood from too much population density by not allowing boarders in homes with accessory apartments. Present zoning allows a homeowner to have three borders.

In addition to the condition of owner occupany, the committee also recommended accessory apartments be allowed only in single-family homes.

The ZAC also said homeowners should be allowed to use carriage houses as accessory apartments if they are larger than 700 square feet. The Planning Department has said that any detached building smaller than that is usually considered a garage.

Accessory apt. proposal strict in comparison

By Les Orsini
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Of the 101 communities in the greater Boston area, 15 have accessory apartment ordinances. The Garden City will very likely be the 16th.

The aldermanic Zoning Amendment Committee (ZAC) is now deliberating ordinance provisions that were proposed by the Zoning Review Committee (ZRC).

Gene Kennedy, a senior planner from the Planning Department, has studied the 15 other ordinances and says the Newton proposal would be one of the strictest. He has prepared a report summarizing the requirements in other communities.

Like 12 of those communities, the ZRC has recommended that accessory apartments be allowed only in owner-occupied homes. Last night, the ZAC recommended the full Board of Aldermen adopt that provision.

The ZRC has proposed that only homes built before 1923 be allowed to have the extra dwelling. This would cover most of the Garden City's large, Victorian-style homes.

Of the 15 communities that already have an ordinance, 10 establish a minimum building age, according to Kennedy's report. But of those, five say any building built in the 1980s qualfies and only two go back as far as the 1940s.

The ZRC is recommending that no accessory apartment be larger than one-third the size of an entire home. Nine of the 15 communities with an accessory apartment ordinance limit the size of the extra dwelling, Kennedy's report says. The restrictions range between 20 and 40 percent of full building size.

Under the ZRC proposal, a home would have to be 3,600 square feet in floor space to have an accessory apartment. Kennedy's study shows that only four communities say how large a home has to be and each demands a smaller building than the ZRC would.

To permit a legal accessory apartment, Cambridge requires a building to be 3,500 square feet, Duxbury 2,000 square feet, Lexington 2,500 square feet and Weston 3,000 square feet.

Last week, the ZAC voted not to recommend to aldermen two provisions adopted by some other communities - the requirement that a homeowner secure a special permit for an accessory apartment and that it be renewed every five years.

Kennedy's report shows that 13 of the 15 communities require a special permit and four require its renewal every five years.

The ZAC will continue its discussion of the accessory apartment ordinance proposal on July 15.

Post 440 edged twice by Ronnies in Musial

NEWTON — A three-run sixth inning that tied the game proved fruitless for Newton Post 440 on Sunday, as the Worcester Ronnies came up with two in the eighth to complete a Stan Musial doubleheader sweep at Newton South Field with a 6-4 victory. The visitors had taken the opener a little more easily, 10-6.

Ray Gladu went the distance for Post 440 in the nightcap and though he gave up 14 hits, he wasn't pounded, even in the final frame. Three of the hits came in the eighth, but one was of the infield variety and another went off third baseman Chris Pachus' glove.

The first hit of the inning was no cheapie, as Vin Clouthier roped a double. He quickly scored when Lee Boykin drove one off Pachus' glove into left field.

After Boykin moved to third on a Bob Payne single, Bruce Anacleto drove in the insurance run with a sacrifice fly.

Mike Nosel set down Post 440 in the bottom half for the win, throwing a complete-game five-hitter. He struck out two and walked one.

That eighth ruined Post 440's valiant bid to salvage a split. The losers had come up with three in the sixth, aided by several Worcester errors.

One of the miscues started the surge, as Joe Noone wound up on second after a throwing error by the first baseman. Pachus delivered the run with a single through the shortstop hole.

Another error on a Joe King ground ball and a throw that got away put both runners in scoring position. Colin Ryan came up with the big hit of the inning, a sharp single to right which made it 4-4.

The Ronnies had jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first, aided by a Post 440 error. A Dave Fenuccio single and a dropped fly ball set the stage for Paul Gedman. The brother of Red Sox catcher Rich Gedman drilled a two-run single to get his club off on the right foot.

Clouthier and Boykin each had a trio of hits to lead the Worcester attack.

The opener wasn't quite as close, as the visitors seemed to take charge with five runs in the second. Again Post 440 gave them a scare, battling back to within a run before watching the Ronnies scored three times in the sixth to put the game away.

Worcester slapped Newton starter Craig Leonard around for four hits and five runs in the second to break a 1-1 tie.

Singles by Payne and Anacleto ignited the outburst, and Steve Belsito snapped the deadlock with a double down the left-field line for a run. Another marker came across when Scott Powers hit into a fielder's choice that left all hands safe. Barry McGrath made Post 440 pay for that with a three-bagger down the left-field line. Gedman closed out the scoring in the frame when he reached on an error as McGrath tallied.

The Ronnies added another run in the third, but in the meantime Post 440 began chipping away. The home club scored once in the second and twice in the fourth to make it 7-4, then came up with another pair in the fifth to close within one.

Joe Spagnuolo started that fifth frame with a walk, and two batters later Joe Noone ripped a hit through short. Pachus went the other way for an RBI single that sent Noone to third. King lofted a fly to right that made it 7-6, but that was as close as Newton would come.

The three Worcester runs in the sixth seemed to erase any possibility of a Newton comeback. All the damage began with two outs and Powers (walk) on first. Gedman singled and Boykin reached on an error as a run scored. Sean Conrad added a hit for another run and Clouthier chased the final run home with one of his three doubles in the twin-bill.

Kevin Shea got the victory for the 11-4 Ronnies by going five complete innings. He fanned five and walked three. Steve Bieksha finished up.

King had two doubles for Newton, now 5-12.

Sherman, Abruzzi, Battista on all-stars

By Roy LeBlanc
Staff Writer

NEWTON — This spring's Newton Catholic baseball team had only three players who had proven themselves on a varsity diamond. The club still went to the tournament for the second straight year.

Perhaps it came as less than a shock then, when the Catholic Suburban League coaches voted all three of those players on to the circuit's All-Star team.

Jeff Sherman, Nick Abruzzi and Frank Battista all made the squad, as they were recognized as the Lancer leaders this spring.

League champion St. Clement's came away with the Most Valuable Player honors, in the person of Mike Flynn. The catcher was the only senior on the club, which won its fifth consecutive league crown. A good defensive backstop, Flynn ripped league pitching at a .533 clip.

Battista finished only one vote back in the MVP balloting, with junior shortstop Chris Sabourin of Hudson Catholic rounding out the MVP nominees.

St. Clement's was the only club to have four players chosen to the 13-player squad, as shortstop Jim Cataldo, center fielder Kevin Wright and second baseman Dante DiFonzo joined Flynn. All are juniors.

Hudson Catholic and Newton Catholic each had three players picked, while Mission, North Cambridge Catholic and Sacred Heart were represented by one player apiece.

The Newton Catholic All-Stars:

Frank Battista — Coming within one vote of the Most Valuable Player award is quite an achievement for anyone, especially a junior. This was the catcher's third All-Star citation.

Offensively, he was the top gun for the Lancers this spring. He led the club in hitting at .481, hits with 25, runs-battted in with 14, and stolen bases with 14. In addition, he was never caught on the basepaths.

"He really stings the ball," said Coach Don Dabenigno.

Defensively, Battista was just as important. Perhaps the best defensive catcher in the league, he "did what he wanted to behind the plate as far as picking people off and throwing people out," according to the coach.

When he wasn't behind the plate, Battista was on the mound running up a 4-2 record. The hard thrower fanned 58 and walked only 24 in posting a 2.40 earned run average.

Battista is also a two-year starter in the backcourt in basketball.

Jeff Sherman — This co-captain was "overpowering," on the mound, according to Dabenigno. The coach went on to call him "the leading pitcher in the league."

Sherman's 4-2 record was deceptive. Facing the iron of the league, he lost the opener to Cathedral, then didn't lose another game until the tournament, when he was beaten by St. Mary's of Lynn.

He struck out 82 and walked only 26.

On offense, he finished at .320, second on the club to Battista. He started the year at first base, but was moved to the outfield midway through the season to help an unsettled situation. He came through there, performing well in an unfamiliar job.

This year's Hamill Award winner as the best high school baseball player in Newton, Sherman is an All-Star repeater.

He also starred in basketball at NC, leading the league in scoring and making the All-Star team two years running. As a senior he was the circuit's MVP.

Sherman will be attending Assumption College in the fall. If all goes well, he hopes to be able to play both sports there.

Nick Abruzzi — The only Lancer senior other than Sherman, this co-captain provided leadership that can't be measured by the numbers. Willing to do anything the coaching staff asked, Abruzzi contributed as a pitcher, outfielder and hitter.

His numbers were a bit down from his junior year, as he finished at .277 coming off a .400 season. But defensively he was superb, despite playing between two inexperienced outfielders most of the season.

"He really held together an inexperienced group out there," said Dabenigno.

The southpaw was also Newton's number three pitcher behind Sherman and Battista. He finished at 2-2 with a 3.50 ERA.

Abruzzi, who used to play football when the school had that sport, will be attending Northeastern next year.

Belgian booters coming to Newton

The Belgian soccer team, the Racing Jets, will be in Newton from July 12-15. This under 19 team was the Division II champion of Europe in 1985.

This will be a first for the area to host such a team and for players, coaches and parents to partake in clinics and watch European soccer in person. There will be coaching sessions and games, as well as clinics, for girls and boys who are interested in a first-hand experience.

Coah Piet de Mol, one of the best youth coaches in Europe, will direct a 90-minute demonstration on Saturday.

Under the auspices of the Massachusetts Youth Soccer Association, the following schedule is planned:

Friday, July 11
at Newton South Field

6:30 P.M. — Racing Jets vs. Failense Game.

Saturday, July 12
at Newton South/Brown Field

Noon — Demonstration-coaching session.

2 p.m. — Two 30-minute games with under 13½ and under 12½ district teams.

4:30 p.m. — Under 16½ and 14½ district teams play 50-minute game.

6:30 p.m. — Demonstration game: Mass. State under 19½ vs. Racing Jets.

Tuesday, July 15
at Boston College Stadium

Noon — Team training.

4 p.m. — Open youth clinic for all boys and girls for all ages, run by Belgium team.

6 p.m — Belgium game: Racing Jets vs. Metro Team.

Biotti hurls Warriors to shutout win in National

NEWTON — John Biotti pitched a two-hitter, walking none and striking out 10, as the Auburndale Warriors clubbed the Boys' Club, 11-0, in a Newton National League confrontation on Wednesday at West Newton Common.

Biotti, a 17-year-old righty, struck out the side in both the first and third innings, and really had very little trouble once his offense gave him seven runs to work with in the first inning. The only hits he coughed up were harmless singles to Joe Proia and Sam Lookner.

Jim Giddon's two-run homer to left was the big blow of the first frame, but he had plenty of help. Biotti himself and Dan Cedrone each stroked two-run singles.

Tom White wound up finishing the scoring in the game with a three-run double in the fifth.

The Warriors upped their record to 4-3.

The summary:

Rousseau, Lockwood pace Veteran's

NEWTON — Jacques Rousseau and Andy Lockwood combined for 37 points as Veteran's Cab downed Yellow Cab, 56-38, in Newton Park and Recreation boys' basketball at Cabot Park last week.

Rousseau had 19 and Lockwood was right behind with 18. Both played together at Newton North.

Andy Merkin had 15 to lead Yellow Cab.

Young Lancers gaining respect on softball field

By David Cuddy
Sports Correspondent

NEWTON — It's not going to happen overnight, and it's probably not even going to happen over the summer, but a few miles down the road, Bob MacDougall's Newton Catholic softballers will be demanding respect.

What else can you expect? MacDougall's pitching staff this season consisted of a freshman and a sophomore and the Lancers still finished just two games under .500 at 6-8. Give these young pitchers another year and Newton Catholic will be tourney material.

The youth movement doesn't stop there either. Of the eight rookies on the club this season, five were freshman. And if those freshmen didn't see a lot of combat this past spring season, they can expect to witness it first hand next year because MacDougall graduates six seniors, five of them starters.

The whole idea is to get the girls involved and playing as freshmen and sophomores, even if the results don't always amount to victory. The payoff is only a few seasons away. When MacDougall's freshmen and sophomores become juniors and seniors, the Lancers, as well as the Catholic Suburban South League, will notice the difference.

"It's much easier to get these kids coming in as ninth graders," MacDougall said. "To have a kid for four years makes a lot of difference. By the time they're seniors they'll be doing eveything you want them to."

Freshman Linda Leary and sophomore Jill Kazanjian "came a long way" on the mound for the Lancers this season, and the young pitchers can only get better with experience.

Both girls have shown they can pitch the ball with some accuracy, and MacDougall said he plans to add speed to their routine next year.

"Yes, we're going to develop some speed," the coach said. "When you start hitting the spots with some consistency, you start throwing with speed."

During preseason, MacDougall was stuck without a pitcher when the girls he figured on handling the duties decided differently. In stepped Leary, and after a bit of convincing, Kazanjian soon followed.

"Jill wasn't too sure whether she wanted to pitch," MacDougall remembers. "I didn't want to make her do anything she didn't want to do, but she decided to try it and she came a long way in a short time."

The girls split the mound duties, finishing with identical 3-4 records.

MacDougall said he feels confident in his pitching situation, but, with five starters gone from various places in the infield and outfield, the coach admits that he isn't quite sure which end is up right now. MacDougall's got the basics down, though.

"We're never going to have a set lineup by any stretch of the imagination," he said. "I can only guarantee two things, and that's that we'll put nine players in the field and either Jill or Linda will be pitching."

MacDougall has got to find himself a catcher, a shortstop, and a center fielder and, although he admits he has no clues at the moment, he isn't losing any sleep over it.

Not having a freshman or a junior varsity program has its advantages, and MacDougall said he is hoping for a few interested and talented freshmen coming up.

Ann Kling has been a permanent fixture behind the plate for Newton Catholic for the past three years, but graduation snatched her away. The only other Lancer with catching experience is junior Angela Canty, who caught part of one game this season. Her arm is suspect though, according to MacDougall, which could force junior Mary Holland, a third baseman-outfielder, into duty.

"Mary's got a good arm, and it's important to have someone back there who can throw the runners out," MacDougall said.

The starting job at shortstop, previousky occupied by graduated senior Joanne Abruzzi, was supposed to go to freshman Michelle McLaughlin, but MacDougall said the ninth grader is transfering to Newton North High next year.

"I really and truly don't know what I'm going to do at short," the coach confesses. "I might throw (third baseman Silvana) Visco over there and put a put a freshman in her spot. I don't know."

Visco, a sophomore-to be, played back-up to senior Cheryl Chagnon at third base and looked good in limited action.

Jean Deffley is being moved from center field to first base to fill the hole left by senior Susan Williams, but Deffley's transfer opens up another hole MacDougall isn't sure how he's going to fill.

Angela Canty and Jennifer Longbottom flanked Deffley in the pastures this season, and the defensive pair are going to stay put for the time being, said MacDougall.

Offensively, the Lancers had no trouble scoring runs this season, and they'll have no difficulty scoring them again next year. Newton Catholic scored 10 or more runs in 10 games this year and scored 20 or more four times.

Sophomore-to be Leary batted a team-high .548 and drove in 19 runs to boot, tied for second on the team with Canty, who hit .486. Kazanjian can rap the ball, too, as her .483 average and 12 RBIs proved.

Holland rounds the returning .400 hitters, as she will try and duplicate a .429 season.

Four Tigers honored in lacrosse

By Roy LeBlanc
Staff Writer

NEWTON — It may say something about the future of the Newton North lacrosse program that the Tigers of the first first-team All-Stars they had, three will return next spring.

David Robinson, Mark Adams and Dave St. Germain all made the squad as juniors. Of the first-teamers, only defenseman Scott Lanciloti has graduated.

Together with Weymouth North, the Tigers dominated the Division 1 South All-Stars. Each placed four members on the 10-man squad.

Joining the four Tigers named were Weymouth North's Mark Donovan, Jamie Jackson, Mike Carter and Mike Ross.

Framingham South attack Noah Schaeffer and Needham goalie John Snyder were the only players to break the Newton-Weymouth domination.

Lincoln-Sudbury and Framingham North were held without a selection, though L-S did place two players on the second team.

Newton had three more players named to the second team, all seniors. Attack John Flynn, midfielder Otto Mariano and goalie Matt Keegan were cited by the league's coaches.

Flynn was the number three scorer for the Tigers with 22 goals and 10 assists for 32 points. He had without a doubt the hardest shot on the club.

Mariano was fifth in socring at 13-13-26. Keegan was a bit inconsistent at times, but at his best, was as good as anyone. He showed the coaches enough to be voted number two behind Snyder.

The Newton North first-team selections:

David Robinson — Tiger coach Rick Clark called this senior-to-be "a player to watch out for."

Robinson is an outstanding inside player, as his numbers show. He led the club with 37 goals and 18 assists for 55 points, the top numbers in all three categories.

When Robinson gets the ball inside, he's virtually unstoppable one-on-one. That meant teams were forced to double-team him most of the year, and if Robinson learns to pass as well as he shoots, he could be the premier attack in Eastern Mass. as a senior.

The transfer from Belmont Hill also was a regular for the Tiger hockey team in the winter, though his role was completely different, playing on defense.

to everyone's mind when Mark Adams' name is brought up. He came to prominence last fall as a running back for the football team, rushing for more than 1,000 yards as a junior. After a winter on the ice for the Tigers, Adams brought his speed and toughness to the lacrosse field and proved adept at yet another sport.

Like Robinson, Adams commands respect from other teams when he heads for the net. But when other teams send an extra man after him, he's equally at home taking the shot or dumping the ball off, as his 14-15-29 numbers illustrate.

"People don't realize how important he was to our offense," said Clark. "We went to him on man-down clears and man-up clears. He was our catalyst."

Clark pointed out that if Adams learns to use his first three steps a little better, he could be devastating on offense.

Scott Lanciloti — This senior was simply "the best one-on-one player in the league," according to Clark. "He can utilize all the defensive checks. He had the highest number of takeaways of anyone in the league."

Lanciloti boasts tremendous speed, which he combined well with his aggressiveness on

An All-Star in football and wrestling, the talented athlete will play lacrosse at the University of New Hampshire next year. The coach has already seen him play, and was one of several coaches who sought Lanciloti.

Dave St. Germain — He doesn't make an instant impression, because he's not a whirlwind out on the field. In fact, he's so smooth that he often doesn't get noticed. But anyone watching him over a period of time would learn that Dave St. Germain is as good a defenseman as there is around.

He doesn't have to make the great play to stop an onrushing attacker, because he's thinking ahead and has already put himself in the right spot to thwart the attack.

"He has all the tools," agreed Clark. "He has an excellent stick and great one-on-one ability. He sees the entire game."

At 6-1, 175, St. Germain has the build to go with his skills and with some work in the off-season, could be as good a defenseman as Newton North has had.

Clark said, "I honestly believe he could be the top defensive player in the state next year."

Comeback by Post 440 sinks Oak Hill, 9-7, in International

Newton Post 440 gave up seven runs in one inning to the Oak Hill Cubs, but recovered for a 9-7 International League triumph on Tuesday at Newton South.

After the Cubs got through scoring seven runs in the fourth inning on three hits, four walks and two wild pitches, they boasted a 7-2 lead.

Post 440 immediately began fighting back, however, and finally went ahead with three in the sixth.

Singles by winning pitcher Steve Leonard and Colin Casey opened the frame, and P.J. Melanson stroked a hit for one run. Two batters later, Ivo Rufo dumped a hit into left for two runs, putting his club ahead.

Troubadour triumphs

Dan Gwirtzman started the scoring with a double in the second inning and later added a two-run triple in the seventh as Troubadour stopped C&K Components, 8-2, at Ferguson Field.

Troubadour seized control of the game with three runs in the third and never looked back. After Khari Brown walked, Gwirtzman lashed a double to tie the game at 1-1. Derek Fergus untied it with a single, and eventually scored (after stealing second) when Brian Berlandi reached on an error.

Boys' Club strolls

Mike Connell tossed a five-hitter to keep the Boys' Club undefeated with an 8-2 decision over St. Bernard's at Cabot Park. The 14-year-old righty struck out 11 and walked six. He had a shutout going into the seventh, when St. Bernard's scored both of its runs.

The Boys' Club, meanwhile, started the scoring with a run in the second and added two in the third. Paul Leone keyed the latter frame with an RBI single, driving in Joe Spataro, who had singled.

Carson Post romps

Carson Post broke a close game wide open with five runs in the fifth inning and sailed off to a 12-3 victory over the Albemarle Club at Newton Centre Playground. Albemarle didn't help itself with four errors in the frame.

One of those errors enabled Dan Tafe to get aboard to start the frame. Another miscue and a walk to winning pitcher Steve Lookner loaded the bases for Mike Fisk, who singled in two runs. After a couple of more errors upped the inning's total to four, Brian Rooney capped the scoring with an RBI single.

Volleyball star

Maureen Prioa of Newton, a member of the 13 and under Massachusetts Patriots elite volleyball team, recently attended the University of Rhode Island Junior Olympic Volleyball Festival. The Massachusetts team was in first in its pool, but bowed out to Windy City of Chicago.

Arrows cop state soccer title

AMHERST — The Newton Arrows of the Greater Boston Youth Soccer League defeated Chicopee, 5-2, Monday in overtime to become the first youth soccer team from Newton to win a state title.

In an incredible comeback at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, the under-12 Division 2 Arrows got two goals from Peter Morse in the last 15 minutes of regulation to knot the score, 2-2. Then, led by Daniel Apstein's two goals and one assist and Kahlil Hogan's goal, Newton scored three goals in the first seven minutes of overtime to lock up the championship.

The defense of goalie Peter Lesburg and fullbacks Michael Guzzi, Harry Lowd, Charlie Strauss, and Gabe Acevedo dominated the second half of the game, blunting the Chicopee attacks.

Halfbacks Mark Badger, John Mullen, and Alex Ross controlled the midfield, and forwards David Goldberg, David Lockwood, Aaron Cooper, and John Harper supplied the pressure on the Chicopee defense in the second half.

"In spite of playing without Noah Messing and Sam Brown, this state championship was a combination of three years of hard work and commitment to provide Newton with its first state youth championship," said coach Marc Goldberg.

Debbie Hamilton plans to marry Michael Duprey

AUBURNDALE — Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hamilton of Auburndale announce the engagement of their daughter, Debbie Ann, to Michael J. Duprey, son of Mrs. Irene Duprey of Cambridge and the late Mr. Russell Duprey.

The bride-to-be is a graduate of Newton Catholic High School and is currently employed as an assistant bookkeeper at G.O. Graphics in Burlington.

Her fiance is a graduate of Boston Latin High School and Cambridge Rindge. He is presently employed at Computervision in Bedford.

A May 1988 wedding is planned.

Na'amat USA fundraising for the Spiritual Adoption Fund

BROOKLINE — The spiritual Adoption Campaign for this fiscal year began July 1. Every year, Na'amat USA raises millions of dollars to help care for 22,000 children in close to 800 day care classes and day night homes in Israel.

Na'amat USA supplies more than 65 percent of the social services in Israel including the care of children from broken homes, sub-standard economic circumstances and orphans.

Each Spiritual Adoption donation assures an unfortunate child of a healthy emotional and physical foundation on which to build the future.

The benefactor receives a picture of a spiritually adopted child. Children in N'amat day care centers and day-night homes receive loving, individual care, and the centers are used as "role models" in many countries.

For information about how to make a donation to this fun, call the Greater Boston Council office of Na'amat USA at 731-8378.

Check-out schedule at library

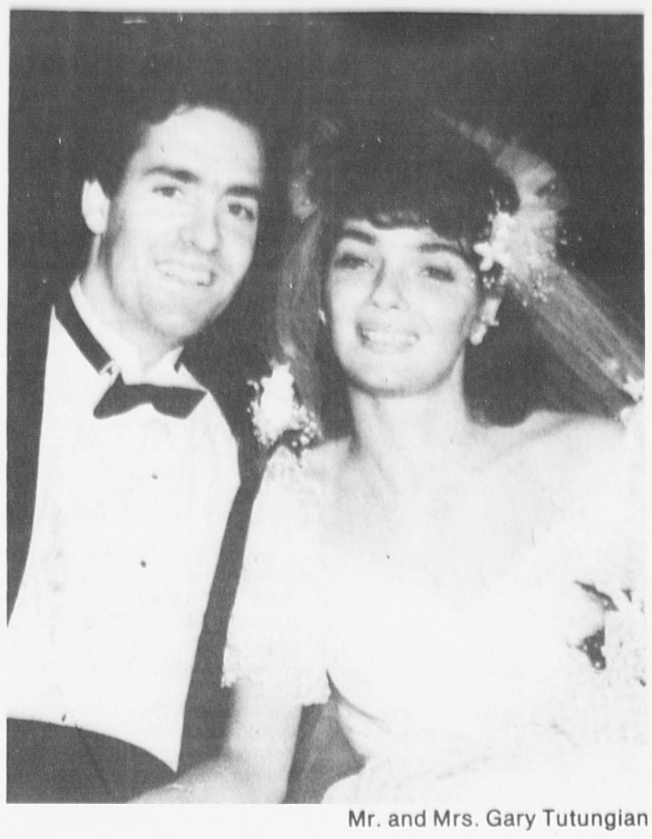
NEWTON — The Newton Free Library offers Newton residents — who leave the city and who can give a specific address where they can be reached by mail — the opportunity to borrow books until Sept. 15, 1986.

The summer vacation loan program offers readers a variety of opportunities: They can read in depth or very broadly; they can learn new skills, develop new hobbies, broaden their knowledge in specialized fields and keep up with world affairs.

The Readers's Advisor, at the main library can make reading recommendations and suggestions.

With certain exceptions such as reserve books, rental books, new fiction and non-fiction with an imprint of one previous calendar year, and books in constant demand, all library books can be borrowed for this extended period.

These long-term vacation privileges include children's literature as well as adult materials. Ask at your local library for details of this popular program.



Mr. and Mrs. Gary Tutungian

Maureen Gruttner and Mr. Gary Tutungian wed

NEWTON — Maureen Gruttner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis and Marie Gruttner of Dorchester, and Gary Tutungian, son of John Tutungian of Edward Road, Newton, were united in marriage.

The ceremony was performed on June 7 at St. Marks Church in Dorchester, with a reception following at Canton Town Club, Canton.

The bride is a 1977 graduate of Dorchester High School and is presently employed as a CRT operator at David Brett Sales, Easton.

The bridegroom is a 1975 graduate of Newton High School and a 1980 graduate of Boston State College. He currently works at Hanscom Airforce Base in Lexington.

After a wedding trip to Aruba, the couple is making their home in Brockton.

Shelley Barres engaged to wed Mr. George Black

NEWTON — Mr. and Mrs. Samuel L. Barres of Newton announce the engagement of their daughter, Shelley, to George Black of Cupertino, Calif., son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harry Black.

An August wedding will be held in California.

Newton Centre residents celebrate at John Weeks House

NEWTON CENTRE — Senior residents at The John W. Weeks House in Newton Centre were treated to festive entertainment on a rainy Thursday afternoon, June 12.

Children living at The Weeks House sang a number of lively tunes in The Weeks Community Room.

Savitree and Vijay Persaud, Michelle Williams, Arthur, Cherice, and Chanelle Jackson, Elbert Simmons, Robert and Mario Williams, and Michael Glennon all participated.

Songs included: "The Greatest Love of All," "Row, Row, Row Your Boat," "We Are the World," "That's What Friends are For," and "It's a Small World After All."

A rousing rendition of "Reach Out and Touch Someone's Hand," with all the residents singing and holding hands, ended the festivities. The children were coached by parent Karen Glennon, and refreshments of ice cream and cookies were served.

Na'amat women's shelter needs furnishing

BROOKLINE — A special plea for a shelter for battered women to help furnish their larger and newly renovated house was received by Na'amat USA.

The shelters will pick up donations. They need refrigerators, linen, towels, single beds, cribs, playpens, sofas, large kitchen table, rugs, lamps, a food freezer, dishes, silverware, pots and pans, windows shades, venetian blinds, washing machines, clothes dryers, office equipment, and supplies, chairs of all kinds, baby high chairs, alarm clocks, children's toys, and books, bureaus, and any other houshold item you can donate.

Help these women by calling the Na'amat USA office at 731-8378 to arrange for pick up from your home.

B'nai B'rith Women holds International Biennial

Las Vegas — Patricia Neal was honored by B'nai B'rith Women where 700 delegates fron the United States, Canada, and overseas recently participated in the B'nai B'rith Women International Biennial Convention in Las Vegas, Nevada.

Academy Award winning actress Particia Neal received B'nai B'rith Women's prestigious Perlman Award for Human Advancement at a special banquet. Ms. Neal was recognized for her dedicated work on behalf of the disabled and for her support of the Patricia Neal Rehabilitation Center in her hometown of Knoxville, Tenn.

Irma Gertler of Milwaukee, Wisc., was elected president of the 120,000 member organization which unites Jewish women as a force for social advancement through education, service and action.

The president succeeds Beverly Davis of Jamaica, N.Y., who led the deliberations of the delegate assembly which defined its agenda for the next two years and launched a $1.5 million Capital Building Campaign for one of its major projects, the BBW Children's Home in Israel.

The Home, a residential treatment center for emotionally-disturbed boys, is in need of major repairs and expansion of its physical facility. It is the only institution of its kind in Israel and has achieved recognition from many mental health professionals in the U.S. and other countries for its uniquely successful treatment methods.

Speaking at a session on Soviety Jewry, Morris Abram, Chairman of the National Conference on Soviet Jewry, told the delegates that recently-released Prisoner of Conscience Anatoly Shcharansky symbolizes not only the Jewish experience with oppression through the ages, but also the Jewish tradition of mutual support under attack. Said Abram, "He was a man who would not give in to tyranny; we held Scharansk's hand and he survived."

Abram called on American Jews to "Come out and shout on Solidarity Day in May so that the Soviets will hear you." Pointing to the fact that when the Jackson-Vanik Amendment was in place, 265,000 Jews were permitted to emigrate, Abram said, "The Soviet Union responds to their own self interest. It is up to you and to us to show them where their self interest lies."

Asher Naim, Israel's Minister of Information and Culture, who also addressed the delegates, praised the United States for defending its right to battle with Libya. Criticizing Quaddafi for asking the world to abide by his rules and for "waging wars against everybody," Mr. Naim pointed out that in spite of Quaddafi's actions, the Arab League will continue to support him. He stressed that in the Middle East "Israel is the only country the United States can rely upon in times of need."

Jewels & Gems
BY CAROL
THE GOLD LADY
HYPHENATED GOLD
"Solid gold" does not necessarily mean pure, 24-karat gold. It means only that the item is 10 karats or finer and that it does not have a hollow center. The terms "gold-filled" and "gold-plated" refer to a type of "faux" gold in which a film of gold has been bonded onto some ordinary base metal. In the gold-filling process, the layer of gold must total at least one-twentieth of the total weight of metal in the piece. In gold-plating, the quantity of gold may fall below that amount. The term "vermiel" also indicates a bonding process. However, with vermeil, the metal under the gold is nothing less than sterling silver.
For "pure" beauty in jewelry come see the creative displays at CAROL "THE GOLD LADY". We have what you want in fine gold pieces in chains, rings, earrings and bracelets. Many people are remounting their wedding and engagement rings and we can design the perfect setting for you. We're located at 109 Dalby St., Newton, but will be closed for vacation during the month of July. Watch this column for great jewelry ideas. Tel. 332-5935.

Plenty of fun for seniors

NEWTON — The city has organized activities for senior citizens interested in sports, food and theatre. A listing of events and opportunities follows.

Walking Club: "Father Moore's Happy Soles" will still meet every Friday at 9:30 a.m. to walk the streets of Newton for health and fitness. Everyone welcome. Come join us at Norumbega Gardens, corner of Ash and Commonwealth Avenue.

Swimming: Swimming everyday at Gath pool and Crystal Lake from 2 p.m. until dusk. Starting June 30th, we'll have underwater aerobics and swimming for "seniors only", Monday through Friday, at Gath Pool from noon to 1 p.m. Permits are free if you are over 60 and live in Newton.

Exercise: Wednesdays 9:15 to 10:15 a.m. at Lower Falls Community Center, 541 Grove St. in Newton Lower Falls. Betty Conrad will be holding classes all summer long so there's no excuse for getting out of shape. All classes free to seniors.

Bingo: Helen Forster will call Bingo every Friday afternoon at Lower Falls Community Center from 1 to 3 p.m. with the exception of July 18 (when she'll be at "camp"). Refreshments are free and cards cost 50¢.

Sr. Tennis: If you're over 60 and looking for a tennis partner, call Irv Kalman, 332-6949, or Mary Brown, 552-7120. Your name and telephone number will be added to our list of players and you can call individual members and arrange your own game.

Free tennis lessons for beginners on the 3rd Thursday of each month at the Lower Falls Community Center. All members meet on the first Thursday of the month to learn "tennis tips" from our instructor, Diane McMullen, and meet new members. All are welcome at no charge.

City Wide Trips:
July 23 and 30: "The King and I" at the North Shore Music tent and lunch at the Theatre or King's Grant Inn. Cost is $26.50.

August 13, 21, and 27: Lunch at Grandma's Restaurant in Bourne than a trip down the Cape Cod Canal. Cost is $19.

Pick up your registration forms for these trips at the Recreation Office or at one of the drop-in centers. Be sure to mail your registration and check in on the first of the month as we do not accept reservations over the phone.

Adult classes begin

NEWTON — Arts In The Parks, Newton Parks and Recreation, will offer a variety of courses for men and women this summer.

In addition to the advanced and beginning knitting and the introduction to quilting and color workshops, there will be advanced and beginning courses in drawing and painting, the making of silver jewelry, the art of papermaking, fabric painting, and chair caning.

All courses are held at the Mason-Rice School, 149 Pleasant St., Newton Centre. Call 552-7130 for more information.

Antique automobile exhibit continues at mall

NEWTON — The summer exhibit of antique automobiles from Brookline's Museum of Transportation continues in July with a display of two more unusual classic cars.

Presented in a setting which tells a story, both cars can be seen in the Heart of the Mall throughout the month.

A midnight green 1969 Pontiac GTO convertible brings back memories of the Beach Boys, surfing, Sunset Strip and bikinis. This recent classic, from the "muscle car" era of auto manufacturing, was first offered in 1964 as an option package for those buying Pontiac Tempests or LeMans. The company hoped to sell 5,000 of the GTO options that year, but they ended up selling over 30,000, and the GTO became one of America's most popular cult cars. The model at the Mall boasts a 400-cubic-inch engine and is still driven by its original owner, who has put 157,000 miles on the odometer.

Also to be seen is a 1924 Luxor, a rarely seen model which was manufactured for two years. It was frequently used as a taxicab back in the roaring twenties, and its bright red exterior epitomizes the carefree attitude of that era. Within the Mall, the Luxor will appear to have returned from a shopping spree, with bags and boxes from many of the Mall's 68 stores tossed onto the seat.

Children's entertainer will open series

NEWTON — Arts in the Parks, Newton Parks and Recreation Department will open its Wednesday performance series on July 9, at 2 p.m. with Hugh Hanley.

Hugh Hanley, musician and children's entertainer with a theatrical flair, offers performances that encourage audience participation. Children will love his songs about peanut butter sandwiches and fluff and elephants, while parents, grandparents and babysitters will find themselves having an equally good time.

This outdoor series is held on the Newton Centre playground, Tyler Terrace, Newton Centre. For more information, call 552-7130.

Co-owned P.P. Antonellis Grocery Store

NEWTON — Pasquale C. Antonellis, 90, died last week at the Newton-Wellesley Hospital after a brief illness.

Born in San Donato, Italy, Mr. Antonellis had been a Newton resident since 1912.

He was retired co-owner P.P. Antonellis Grocery Store on Adams Street in Newton for 40 years.

He was a member of American Legion Post 48 of Newton, a member of the Sons of Italy Lodge 1069 of Newton and a U.S. Army World War I veteran.

He is survived by his wife, Filomena (Bibbo); two daughters, Mrs. Nicholas (Anna) Coutoulas of Hull and Beatrice Mooar of Newton and a son, Joseph F. Antonellis of West Newton.

He is also survived by eight grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

A funeral service was held on Saturday at 9:15 a.m. from the Andrew J. Magni Funeral Home, Newton, followed by a Funeral Mass in Our Lady Help of Christians Church, Newton, at 10 a.m.

Interment was in Calvary Cemetery, Waltham.

Anne T. Clarke, 91

NEWTON — A funeral mass was celebrated Tuesday morning in St. Ann's Church, Marshfield, for Anne T. Clarke, 91, of Newton, a retired bookkeeper. Burial was in Calvary Cemetery, Waltham.

Born in Newton, she had been a resident of Wellesley before moving back to Newton many years ago.

She leaves her sisters, Catherine Fitzpatrick and Mary F. Murphy, both of Marshfield.

Peter F. Mack Jr.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Rep. Peter Francis Mack Jr., who was known as Illinois' "Flying Congressman" after completing a 33,000-mile, around-the-world goodwill tour in 1951, died Friday. He was 69.

Mack, a Democrat, served seven consecutive terms from 1949 until his defeat in 1962. He served on the Commerce Committee and had been chairman of its Commerce and Finance Subcommittee. He visited 30 countries and 45 cities and logged 210 hours in a single-engine plane on his 1951 tour.

After leaving Congress, he spent 12 years with the Southern Railway System, where he was assistant to the president. Ten years ago he founded Peter Mack Co., a real estate and investment firm.

Boston hospital announces lower room and lab rates

BOSTON (AP) — Brigham and Women's Hospital will lower its room rates and laboratory charges over the next 12 months by a total of $10 million, mainly due to an influx in patients, the hospital announced.

Individual patients will probably not notice much of a price drop, but the decrease may lead to lower health insurance premiums, according to a report today in The Boston Globe.

"Our admissions have been strong and we've been able to operate efficiently," said hospital President Dr. H. Richard Nesson. "We want to pass along the savings to the consumer."

A significant increase in the number of patients at Brigham appears to stem from an agreement reached last year between the hospital and the Harvard Community Health Plan.

Under the agreement, which became effective in February, most of the health plans 200,000 adult patients who need hospitalization pick Brigham over numerous other well-known hospitals in the Boston area.

The agreement has led to about a two-thirds leap — from about 83 rates, the Globe said.

Hospital officials from several Boston hospitals have said that the price cuts at Brigham are generally required by state laws and by regulations governing non-profit hospitals.

percent last year to 90 percent now — in the hospital's occupancy rate.

A semi-private room at Brigham costs $340 a day, effective yesterday. That's down from $360 previously.

Beth Israel Hospital also has announced that it expects to lower its room rates in two weeks, from $380 a day to $360 for semi-private rooms, said financial Vice President Eugene E. Wallace.

At the New England Medical Center and Massachusetts General Hospital, spokesmen declined comment.

A semi-private room at the MGH currently goes for between $342 and $382 a day, said spokesman Martin Bander. A spokesman for New England Medical Center would not give

Sharp earthquake shakes night in Southern California

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A sharp earthquake shook a wide region of Southern California early today, but there were no immediate reports of injury or heavy damage.

Reports flooded in to police agencies throughout the region following the temblor about 2:20 a.m. The earthquake's strength and epicenter were not immediately known.

"It's a big one," said Dennis Meredith of the California Institute of Technology. He said the Richter measurement was not immediately available.

The temblor lasted 30 seconds to one minute, according to most callers.

It was felt by residents from San Diego, 100 miles south of downtown Los Angeles, to the Palm Springs area, 110 miles east, to the San Fernando Valley, 20 miles north.

"It's still rolling around. Its been about 30 seconds," said Los Angeles County sheriff's deputy Drew Basey, who said no damage reports had been called in.

In Palm Springs, Gene Aker, night copy editor at The Desert Sun, said one window shattered in the building and there was a brief power outage in Palm Springs.

Lt. Connie Van Putten of the San Diego Police Department said the only damage report so far was of some building tiles falling from a downtown structure.

Greg Gross, a resident of Rancho Penasquitos, about 15 miles north of San Diego, said he was watching a movie on television when he felt the floor starting to move.

"I figured it would pass after a couple of seconds and then it continued. And then the windows really started to rattle. The patio door, which is all glass, really started to rattle," Gross said.

"I've been living here since 1975, and this is the biggest single shaking that I can recall ever feeling," he said.

Police, court briefs

Breaking, entering at Mt. Ida reported

NEWTON - A breaking and entering at Mount Ida Junior College was reported to police Thursday. Police said they found five empty beer cans in a room on the second floor of Chapman Hall. A mirror had been taken off a wall and had a white, powdery residue, possibly cocaine, on it, said police. Two mattresses from another locked room had been dragged into the room. Police said there were no signs of forced entry into the dormitory.

Boat motor stolen from Perry Road yard

NEWTON - A Honda outboard motor was reported stolen Friday from a boat in the backyard of a home on Perry Road.

Woman scares off intruder with screams

NEWTON - A woman living on Adams Street told police she woke up shortly after midnight Friday morning and saw an intruder standing in the doorway to her bedroom. The woman screamed and the intruder ran out of the house.

Police said the man apparently got into the house by cutting open a window screen. Police dusted for fingerprints and an investigation is continuing.

Court dismisses drug, fire arm charges

NEWTON - Charges of illegal possession of Class B drugs, assorted pills, and possession of a fire arm without an identification card against Claude E. Gilbert, 36, of Newton, were dismissed in district court last week.

Gilbert still faces charges of seven counts of possession of a firearm without an identification card, operating negligently so as to endanger, failing to stop for a police officer, driving a car without a driver's license, speeding and illegal possession of Class E drugs - Percocets and Xanax. His trial was continued to Aug. 4.

$12,500 auto stolen off Waverly Avenue

NEWTON — A 1984 Mazda RX, valued at $12,500, was stolen from Waverly Avenue last Tuesday morning, police said.

60 pairs of shoes taken from storeroom

LOWER FALLS — About 60 pairs of sample Nike footware, valued at $1,354, were stolen from a storeroom of Frank Dilegro Associates on Executive Park Drive sometime last month, police said. The theft was not discovered until Monday because the empty shoe boxes were neatly repackaged in large boxes, police said. According to a company manager, only three keys to the storeroom were issued to employees and a fourth key was found in the storeroom door last Monday.

Two men injured in motorcycle crash

NEWTON - Two Melrose men were injured last Monday when a 1979 Oldsmobile allegedly cut their Kawasaki motorcycle off at the intersection of Washington Street and Jackson Road, police said. Craig W. Truman and Kenneth Linehan, 22, were treated and released from Newton-Wellesley Hospital for minor bruises and abrasions.

Linda Visco, the operator of the Oldsmobile, was travelling east on Washington Street and attempted to make a left turn onto Jackson Road when her car crashed into the motorcycle, police said. Visco will be cited for failing to grant the right of way, police added.

Car hits seniors crossing Washington St.

NEWTONVILLE - Two elderly pedestrians were hit by a 1986 Mazda at the intersection of Washington and Walnut streets last week, police said. Lucille VanDeusen, 63, of Newton, was treated and released at Newton-Wellesley Hospital for minor bruises and abrasions. Sophie Pidacks, 64, is listed in fair condition at the hospital.

The two women were crossing Washington Street at the light when the Mazda made a left from Walnut onto Washington Street and ended up in the oncoming lane and struck the pedestrians, police said. The driver of the Mazda said he doe not know how he ended up in the wrong lane and he did not see the two women, police said.

Zervas School vandalized over weekend

WABAN - Vandals broke into the Zervas School and ransacked the teachers' lounge, poured chocolate syrup all over the furniture and smashed several instruments with a hammer in the music room two weekends ago, police said.

Entrance was gained through a skylight that was removed from the roof. Police found two door opened that the intruders apparently left through, police said. Nothing was discovered missing.

Jewelry, antique lamps, VCRs stolen

NEWTON CENTRE - A Lake Avenue home was broken into last Sunday night and it appears the thieves gained entrance by prying the dining room window open with a tire iron, police said. The entire house was ransacked. Assorted silverware and women's jewelry, two antique lamps and two VCR's were stolen, police said.

Man gets away after stealing cigarettes

NEWTON - A man went into the Heartland Drug Store on California Street last Saturday night, stuffed between 20 and 30 cartons of cigarettes into a trash bag and ran out of the store.

Police said two store employees chased the man out of the store toward Los Angeles Street, but lost him near the Stearns Playground. The employees told police the thief was joined by another man during the chase who helped him carry away the cigarettes.

Counselors help older adults face changes

Older Adult Services, a contracted program by the department of Mental Health with Newton-Wellesley Hospital, is a counseling service for older adults and their families.

As people grow older, changes naturally occur. These may be experienced as emotional, personal or physical. Sometimes people need help in coping with losses or changes in functioning. Often physical symptoms, like sleep, appetite changes, low energy and decreased concentration may be related to stress or depression. For some, family and friends aren't able to provide all the help and understanding needed.

The Older Adult Service Program provides counseling to help older men and women cope with and adjust to the changes in their lives. Individual, couples and family counseling services are available as well as group therapy programs. The staff is able to help older adults with either ongoing problems or sudden emergencies. A psychiatrist is part of the team and can prescribe medications, if needed.

Many of our older adult patients have a chronic psychiatric illness and have had many psychiatric hospitalizations in state hospitals. These people have been placed in nursing homes that will address their needs. The Older Adult Service staff also provides individual treatment in area nursing homes and meets with staff to discuss patient issues. Inservice programs and support groups are made available to these nursing homes.

If a psychiatric hospitalization is needed for a patient in a nursing home, the team member has a list of hospitals that have psychiatric facilities.

When the patient is hospitalized, the team of psychiatrists and therapists frequently visit with the patient, consult with staff and communicate with the nursing home where the patient will be returned. If the nursing home is unable to readmit the patient, the Older Adult Service Team will make every effort to relocate the patient in another nursing home which can address the patient's needs.

Help begins when a call is made to the Older Adult Services office at 243-6490 (Monday-Friday, 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m.). A staff member will discuss the problem over the telephone. Conversations are kept strictly confidential. An appointment will then be arranged.

Through coordination with other health and human service agencies, the program seeks to provide complete care for the needs of its client.

Parking card offered to handicapped riders

Mrs. G. is a 79-year-old woman who was determined to be legally blind two years ago. She has been a widow for almost 10 years. She has never driven a car in her life. She has always depended on family and friends to take her shopping and to various appointments both medical and personal. An ongoing problem for her and her drivers has been the inability to use handicapped parking. Despite the fact that most times there has been a handicap parking place vacant, her various drivers did not have HP plates and therefore could not legally use the parking place. There are heavy fines for using a handicapped parking place without HP or disabled veteran license plates.

Handicap parking must be located as near as possible to a building entrance or walkaway, adjacent to curb ramps or other unobstructed areas that permits sidewalk access. The parking places themselves are oversized to permit easy egress for wheelchair users. Mrs. G. and many other handicapped people need to use these parking spaces even though they do not have a drivers' license or own a car.

The Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles has instituted an HP Placard service. The Placard is a special identification card authorized by the Registry, bearing the international handicapped symbol and an assigned I.D. number on the front. In addition, the handicapped person's photograph and name are on the back of the placard.

The only people who are eligible to use the placard are those people who qualify under the Registry's Medical Affairs guidelines. Applicants who qualify for HP plates will also meet HP Placard application standards.

An application can be obtained at any Registry branch office, or by telephone. Call and request an application to be sent to you in the mail.

With the Placard, Mrs. G. can get into her friends' car(s) and park in spaces for the handicapped. She will place her handicap placard in the left portion of the windshield where it will be clearly visible. The Placard goes where Mrs. G. goes and no other person may use it. If someone other than Mrs. G. uses her placard to park in a handicapped parking place, that person is subject to a $100 fine and Mrs. G. could have her authorization to use the placard revoked.

The Handicap Placard will make life much easier for Mrs. G. She will no longer have to be dropped off at the entrance of a building and have to wait for the driver to find a parking place, then return to assist her into the building.

At the moment, no fee has been authorized by the legislature for the placard. However, it is reasonable that a fee will be authorized some time in the near future. If you feel you might be found eligible by the Registry's Medical Advisory Board, it makes sense to apply now.

Retired senior citizens attend PR forum

Four experts in the public relations field gave presentations: Valerie D. Navy of WCVB-TV, Channel 5, "You Want Publicity On TV"; Edward J. Kingsbury of Wellesley, producer of slide shows for M.I.T. and Wellesley College, "Successful Slide Tape Shows"; Constance Afthim-Reddy, director of college relations at Framingham State College, "See Yourself In Print"; and William G. Solimene, communications consultant, "Quality Printing and Graphics on a Low Budget."

The workshop was attended by representatives of 28 non-profit agencies in the Greater Boston area. Newton residents active on the REV planning committee included Bernice Bennett, Herbert Graetz, John Curry, Harold Feldman, Mollie Schoenberg, Norton Shapiro, Harris Snyder and Harold Williams.

Safe barbecueing rule is care and patience

By the editors
of Consumers Reports

Barbecues are as American as the flag and mom's apple pie. Steak, hot dogs, hamburgers and chicken sizzled to perfection over a hot grill can provide the highlight of a luscious meal.

But barbecuing requires care and patience. Careless use of Liquified Petroleum (LP) gas or charcoal lighter fluid can lead to an explosion or fire. While testing gas grills, Consumer Reports' engineers reviewed safety procedures for outdoor grilling.

To assure safe, trouble-free cookouts, the engineers suggest the following:

Never store a fuel tank indoors. It's designed to vent gas automatically if excessive pressure builds up, as might happen on a hot day. LP gas is heavier than air; if not dispersed by a breeze, it flows to the lowest point and collects there, creating the potential for disaster.

Prop a full tank securely when you transport it so that it can't tip. Drive with a window open. Keep the tank upright when you're reconnecting it to the grill's regulator. If it tips, a spurt of fuel could damage the regulator. Once the tank is attached, check the connection with a few drops of detergent solution. Bubbles mean a leak;

Buy only a new LP tank approved by the U.S. Department of Transportation — never buy a used tank. If a burner doesn't ignite, turn off the gas. Keep the grill's lid open and wait five minutes before trying again.

Thoroughly clean the grill at least once a year, or after every 50 cookouts. Clean the burner ports, the gas tubes running from the control valves to the burners and the igniter tip. With the gas off, check the igniter to be sure it sparks properly.

Keep the grill away from combustible surfaces, such as wood siding or deck railings. Don't position it under low eaves or overhangs, where the heat could char the wood. Never use a grill in a garage doorway or an enclosed porch where escaping gas could explode.

Dress sensibly; avoid loose-fitting clothing and use oven mitts. On a related topic, coaxing charcoal briquettes into yielding easily managed, evenly burning coals for your summer cookout can be frustrating.

Consumer Reports' engineers used a number of lighting products to start a 30-briquette fire, with emphasis on safety, convenience and cost.

Some match-ready products produced fires that were hotter and faster cooking, or cooler and slower cooking, than an ordinary briquette fire.

None of the chemical starters left a chemical off-flavor taste.

Briquettes cost about $4.50 per 20-pound bag, making the basic cost of a 30-briquette fire about 45 cents — exclusive of the starting medium.

A pile of briquettes doused with watery charcoal lighter-fluid or thick, creamy gel starters adds roughly 10 to 13 cents per start, and takes about 20 minutes to get ready for cooking.

Solid starters (little pieces of flammable material you surround with charcoal and ignite) are slow and awkward. They add about 30 cents per start and take roughly 28 minutes.

Self-starting hardwood charcoal in bags cost around a dollar more than cooking with regular briquettes. Composed of odd-size pieces, they produce a hotter fire and take about 15 minutes.

Egg carton briquettes produce the hottest fire. Ready to cook in 15 minutes, they cost about $1.55 per fire more than regular briquettes.

Electric starters give the cleanest start. The coals are ready in about 18 to 22 minutes. Their one-time cost is anywhere from $5 to $14, and they use very little electricity. Chimney starters look like a piece of stovepipe (to hold the charcoal) with a handle (to dump the hot coals out of the unit after about 15 minutes). They sell for $10 to $15 or so. (C)1986, Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Keep your home cool cheaply

By the editors of Consumer Reports

On those days when the asphalt gets soft at sunup and the air is thick enough to see, an air conditioner that can cool a bedroom or living room without sending you to the poorhouse is most welcome. Recently, Consumer Reports engineers tested 10 major-brand room air conditioners ranging in average price from $291 to $432.

With a cooling capacity in the range of 5,000 to 6,000 Btus per hour, these units sell out first when a hot spell turns the bedroom into a sauna. While their output is relatively low, it's enough to cool a small room in Florida or a large one in Maine.

All the tested models had a high energy-efficiency ratio (EER), the number that helps you separate the economical air conditioners from the ones that can send your electricity bill as high as the mercury. Running one of these cheaper units for a typical cooling season would cost about $35.

The engineers tested each unit for thermostat performance, uniformity of room temperature and directional control of cool air. They checked operating noise levels, both indoors and out, and the ability of each unit to dispose of moisture. A dripping air conditioner over a walkway or patio can be intolerable.

All the units did an adequate cooling job in tests that simulated normal summer conditions — 90 degrees. Most even did well in tests that simulated the doggiest of dog days — an outdoor temperature of 115 degrees and brown-out conditions from the power company.

Five of these energy-efficient models also had an "automatic" or "energy-saver" feature. Typically, an air conditioner's fan keeps running, while the compressor cycles on and off, under command of the thermostat, to control the amount of cooling. An "automatic" or "energy-saver" setting turns the fan off each time the compressor cycles off. This feature, however, isn't likely to save much electricity. It's the compressor, not the fan, that uses the bulk of the electricity. You would almost always pay a penalty in comfort, too, since most of the machines with this feature wait longer between cycles and thus allow greater temperature fluctuations.

Consumer Reports' engineers don't recommend the exhaust feature found on some units. They estimate that an ordinary 20-inch window fan on its lowest setting would eliminate stale or smoky air much faster than most air conditioners.

All the units tested favored their left sides; none could be set to send the greatest cooling effect toward the machine's right. On some models the louvers were useless. Where they were effective at all they just shifted air from the far left toward the center. (C)1986, Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Millions of employees participate in stock plans

By Neville D. Frankel

Dear Mr. Frankel:

The company I work for just started an employee stock option plan. Could you explain how this kind of plan works?

L.B., Boston

Dear L.B.:

You are working for a good company. Over 5,500 corporations — including Mobil, Hallmark Cards, Pan Am, Eastern Airlines, and Atlantic Richfield — currently have ESOP's and millions of employees participate in them. The growing popularity of ESOPs is simply explained:

ESOPs are qualified retirement plans allowing employees to accumulate funds for retirement and to have those funds compound free from taxes.

An employee's stock option plan is similar to a profit sharing plan. The yearly contribution to the account of the employees is made in the form of company stock based on the profitability of the company. These funds in the employees's ESOP account are compounded tax-free until withdrawal and, in addition, escape current taxes.

A characteristic ESOP may combine a 10 percent money purchase plan and a 15 percent profit-sharing plan. For example: An employee earning $30,000-a-year would have a guarantee of $3,000 (10 percent of salary) contributed in company stock. If the company had an especially good year, the employees would be entitled to share in the profits up to $4,500 (15 percent of salary) in company stock.

Once an employee reached the age of 59 and half, he or she may withdraw ESOP funds in either of two ways: A lump sum payout (with 10-year tax averaging) installment payments (taxed as regular income).

Employees who leave before the age of 59 and a half will receive the value of their vested contribution. This amount can be placed in an IRA and continue to be treated as tax-deferred earnings. If the amount is not placed in an IRA it will be taxed as ordinary income subject to a 10 percent nondeductible tax penalty.

Each employee of a company participating in an ESOP receives a periodic statement containing the number of shares owned, vested interest and the market value of the stock. This allows the employees to determine what the plan is worth at any time.

The same early withdrawal rules and tax penalties that apply to other tax deferred pensions of profit-sharing plans are applicable to ESOPs.

Arnold Z. Rosoff

Ad manager in hall of fame

BOSTON — Arnold Z. Rosoff, retiring chairman of Arnold & Company, Advertising/Marketing, was recently inducted into the New England Advertising Hall of Fame for his outstanding achievements in agency management. Rosoff started Arnold & Company 40 years ago and has been called "a man of great wit and wisdom" by his peers. During the ceremonies at the Copley Plaza, Boston, Rosoff, a Newton resident, was joined by his fellow inductees, all of whom have made significant contributions to the advertising and communications industries in Boston.

DeNucci speaks at Boys Club dinner

NEWTON — The Newton Boys Club recently conducted it's Thirty-Second Annual Awards Dinner at Newton Catholic Cafeteria. Nearly 300 people witnessed 175 children receive their awards for participation and achievement during the 1985-86 program year.

Master of Ceremonies Victor A. Nicolazzo, Sr. welcomed the gathering and informed everyone that the children's excitement has not diminished over the 28 years he has served as M.C. All were treated to a roast beef dinner prepared under the direction of Committee chairman, Anthony Pellegrine and Joseph Capalbo.

Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci was the principal speaker. He congratulated the children on their effort and the parents for supporting their children's achievements. He challenged the children to set high goals and to do all within their power to reach those goals. He further asked those present to do only those things which would make their parents proud.

Over 300 awards, ranging from trophies to k-chains where awarded for participation in Club activities. Outstanding Awards were presented to Robert Trudo and Traci Proia for Boy and Girl Camper of the year. Anthony Gentile was presented the Most Progress Award and Rocco Marini was awarded the Unsung Hero. Ray Panaggio was the Athlete of the Year and Aldo Calcagni was the recipient of the Sportsmanship Award. Steven Smith was honored with the Adelaide B. Ball Memorial Trophy for his volunteer work with the Boys' Club baseball teams.

Named the 1986 Outstanding Girl of the Year was Noelle Ahearn, daughter of Steven and Joanne Ahearn. Noelle is a student at the Lincoln-Eliot school and was most active during this past year when girls were provided with a daily activity schedule at the club. Noelle was presented with a trophy from the Fiore D'Italia Lodge #1640 emblematic for her achievement.

Guy Clemente, a senior at Newton North High School, was awarded the Newton Rotary Club Trophy for attaining the 1986 Boy of the Year honor. Guy, an 11-year member of the Boys Club, is planning to attend Northeastern in the fall where he will be a physical education major. He is the son of Guy and Margaret Clemente.

Dear Ray,

I feel that I should be making some kind of a decision right now, but I'm somewhat in a state of confusion and uncertainty. After my marriage ended in divorce about a year ago, I enrolled in a group for divorced and separated. Although it was not really a "therapy" group in the formal sense of the word, it did give me a chance to process a lot of my feelings and to resolve some of the issues that were troubling me at the time.

It was in this group that I met sarah. When we met it was like one of those magical encounters that you might read about in a romance novel or some erotic movie. I mean, we just seem to emit sparks between one another. In my own marriage my wife had complained that I was not a very good lover and in Sarah's marriage, her husband had often accused her of being frigid.

Between us we discovered that there was nothing wrong with us sexually. It seems that each of us just had the wrong sex partner in our marriages. It's difficult to describe just how good sex is between us, but if I were to try a one work description, the word would be terrific or fantastic.

The problem is that sex seems to be the only strong area of compitibility that we have. Sarah firmly believes that if she remarries the man should be well-off financially. I'm a school teacher and love my profession. And, although I work at a second part-time job there is no way that I will ever be wealthy. Especially when I have child support payments for several more years. Sarah is Jewish and I'm roman Catholic. Neither one of us is overly religious, yet we have dissimilar religious orientations and perspectives.

We are both college graduates. However, Sarah's carrer is in chemistry and mine is in English. Thus, Sarah tends to have a very analytical approach to most things while I tend to lean more towards literature and the arts. I could go on with listing our differences, but the bottom line seems to be that the only things that holds us together is our sexual attraction.

As long as I'm involved with Sarah, I can't develop a relationship with someone with whom I might be more compatible in many areas because I have strong feelings about sexual fidelity. I'm trying to decide if I should end my relationship with Sarah or stay with it for as long as it might last. I might add that Sarah is experiencing some doubts as well.

G.W., Waltham

Dear G.W.,

Often the answer to problems can be found in the very problems that someone may raise or the questions that someone may ask. Apparently, when each of your marriages ended you were both suffering from low self-esteem. At least this is true in the area of human sexuality and perhaps in other areas as well. A valuable gift that you have given to one another is the restoring of self-esteem. This is a precious gift for which you can both be thankful. However, you both seem to be emerging from you blinding passion and seeing issues in a perspective.

If you were to marry one another, what do you think the chances of a successful marriage between the two of you would be? If you were to continue the relationship, what do you feel would eventually happen? Maybe you have both reached the point when it is time to move on. Although marvelous sex between two people is quite enjoyable, to say the least, is it enough to sustain any kind of a long-term relationship? I think that you are both discovering that it is not. Added to htis is the fact that you both went into your present relationship directly from marriage and neither one of you has had the opportunity to function as single adults for awhile. Maybe you should both do some growing and self-discovery before considering any kind of a permanent relationship.

Do you have a question about dating and relating or learning to function as a single adult? Send it to the Singles Advisor co/Transcript Newspapers, 18 Pine St., P.O. Box 69, Waltham, MA 02154.

3 Bigelow students win prizes

NEWTON — Twenty students from throughout the Boston metropolitan area were awarded prizes for posters depicting water conservation messages June 12 at an awards ceremony in Doric Hall at the state house.

Three winners were from the eighth grade of Bigelow Junior High School in Newton. David Curcio won first prize. Christina Wertheim and Jennifer Yonkers won special merit awards.

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA), Governor Michael Dukakis and many local communities declared the week of June 7-13 as "Water Conservation Week" to increase awareness of the importance of considering pure and adequate water supplies.

In addition to Water Conservation Week, the MWRA is encouraging water conservation throughout its service area by launching a comprehensive "Demand Management" program, featuring leak detection and repair programs, a house hold water savings project and public education.

The poster contest was sponsored by the MWRA, which supplies water to 46 communites in the metropolitan area. The contest drew entries from over 3,000 school children from 40 communities and more than 90 schools. Six savings bonds were donated by corporate sponsors Anderson Nichols, Belmont Springs, Coca-Cola, Gillette and Polaroid.

Proud parents, teachers and local officials joined MWRA representatives and sponsors to celebrate the special day with the students.

There were two award categories: grades kindergarten through four and grades five through eight. Each grade category received a first, second and third prize (savings bond). Special merit awards were also given out.

More turn to home health care

By The Associated Press

With pressures to keep health care costs under control and to keep hospital stays as brief as possible, more and more Americans are turning to home health care.

Home health care is the fastest growing service industry in the United States, with expenditures at $6.3 billion in 1984, a figure that officials expect will triple by 1990. More than 5,800 Medicare-certified home health agencies exist — a 600 percent increase over 1966, Medicare's first year, according to figures published in a recent issue of Medical World News.

Home health care is not new; the first U.S. home care program was founded in Boston in 1796. And until recent decades, most patients, even those who were terminally ill, were cared for primarily at home.

But home health care expanded significantly when Medicaid and Medicare programs started.

Today, home health care is a $6.7 billion business in the United States.

Home care services include such things as nursing, physical and occupational therapy, nutrition counseling and other medical services.

At the 1985 meeting of the National Association for Home Care, Dr. Marvin Cetron, said: "People are leaving the hospital quicker and sicker and they're going to be dumped on you. This is the growth industry of the 1990s."

His consulting and forecasting firm had recently completed a study of home care.

Many professionals believe that home health care patients heal faster, feel better and may even live longer.

"Many people simply respond to treatment better in the familiar surroundings of their home," says Stephen F. Nagy, president of the Foster Medical Division of Avon Products Inc. "Often, home care enables them to maintain their regular routines," he told a recent meeting of health care experts in New York.

He predicted rapid growth in the home health care industry as it develops the products and services to meet the nation's needs, especially among the elderly.

"What older folks need is a special brand of T.L.C. (tender loving care) that meets their unique needs," says Dr. Gregg A. Warshaw, whose emphasis is geriatrics. "That means revamping the traditional hospital setting and making use of home care wherever possible."

Warshaw recommended the home care team approach — comprised of doctors, nurses, medical students and other health-care professionals — in a 1982 study he conducted of the level of functional disability found among hospital patients over 70 years old.

The study indicated that because the elderly's special needs were not being met by traditional hospital care, hospitalization made their illness worse.

"Home care prolongs a sense of self-sufficiency," Rep. Claude Pepper recently told a hearing of the House Select Committee on Aging subcommittee on long-term care, which he chairs.

"Home care has the positive effect of permitting the aged and infirm to enjoy the comfort of familiar settings. Home care relieves some of the pressure on institutions. ... And, in many cases, home care can mean considerable savings to (the) American health care system."

The Florida congressman released a study by the National Association for Home Care that said home health care enjoys broad public support as an alternative to institutional care.

Yet, Pepper said, home health care benefits under Medicare are being cut back in an apparent money-saving effort and the federal agency that runs Medicare is tightening regulations to limit home health care coverage.

A major difference in home health care today, in addition to new technologies, is the involvement of not-for-profit organizations, such as visiting nurse associations. About 70 percent of all home health care is provided by such organizations, according to the Federal Trade Commission. Services are also provided by local governments and by companies that do operate for profit.

Hospital-affiliated agencies account for the most dramatic rise in recent years, led by for-profit chains like Humana Hospital Corp. of America, National Medical Enterprises and American Medical International, as well as small, rural facilities.

The real financial benefits, the cost-effectiveness of home health care, is still debated.

A recent FTC study said that laws requiring home health care firms to prove they are needed before going into business raised costs by $46 million in 1984, without improving care.

There are 33 states, plus the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico, where a "certificate of need" must be obtained before a home health care service can be established.

States justify these laws as helping to prevent costly duplication of services, the FTC report said. Officials favoring the rules say they promote economic efficiency.

However, the study concluded that the opposite may be true for the home health care business.

"Certificate of need regulations impose barriers to entry in the home health care field," reported David Scheffman, acting director of the FTC's economics bureau, "resulting in reduced competition and increased costs and prices. In addition, there is no evidence that the regulations provide any benefits."

Slowing the entry of new businesses may deny consumers the benefit of innovative or cheaper services, the report said.

In general, doctors support the idea of home care, but seem uncertain about its capabilities and also cite poor Medicare reimbursement as one reason they rarely make house calls under home care programs.

Dr. Frank Randolph, a clinical instructor and attending physician in family medicine at San Bernadino County Medical Center-University of California, Irvine, is quoted in Medical World News:

"I'm for home care, and most doctors seem to be for it. But I sense a lot of concern about when it's indicated, the lack of outcome studies, and the fact that private business is becoming so heavily involved that it's sometimes hard to tell whether it's the patient or the home care agency who's benefiting."

Anger can be fatal, researchers say

By The Associated Press

Anger can be a fatal pressure cooker for people with high blood pressure, according to a small-town study of personalities and deaths.

This is one conclusion drawn by a group of University of Michigan researchers who examined the relationship between stressful marital events, anger-coping styles and death rates in Tecumseh, Mich., a town of about 10,000 population.

Subjects with high blood pressure who are likely to suppress their anger when provoked unjustly by their spouse have more than twice the mortality risk of those who express their anger, the study disclosed.

The key issue is not the amount or degree of anger, according to Ernest Harburg, research scientist in the university's psychology department and school of public health. Harburg is one of four researchers who conducted the study of 696 men and women aged 30-69.

"Anger is usually induced by the perception that some arbitrary authority — an individual or group — is threatening to take away something that belongs to you," he explains. "It may be your job, some material possession or your self-esteem.

"The three standard responses are 'anger-in,' (suppressing your angry feelings); 'anger-out' (venting your anger), and reflective coping (waiting until tempers have cooled to rationally discuss the situation)."

Either of the first two choices can lead to greater stress, and reflective coping is by far the best choice, since it restores a sense of control over the situation and helps solve the problem, he adds.

The Tecumseh study began with a survey of life change events, anger-coping styles and psychological well-being in 1971-72, and was followed by death ascertainments 12 years later.

It showed that individuals who had scored high on suppressing anger in the earlier survey were 2.1 times as likely to have died during the previous 12 years than those who said they would express anger or protest.

"The important thing," says Mara Julius, research investigator who headed the project, "is to recognize that there is a connection between behavioral traits, such as how you deal with anger, and biological traits, such as elevated blood pressure.

"Reflective-anger coping not only promotes better problem-solving but better health, and possibly longer life."

HMOs starting where Medicare ends

By The Associated Press

A growing number of Americans are turning to health maintenance organizations — HMOs — to cover medical bills that Medicare doesn't pay.

An estimated 18 million people are covered by HMOs, which provide a range of health-care services through specially designated doctors and hospitals. Members, who enroll through company health plans or individually, pay a fixed premium in advance. In exchange, the HMO guarantees that it will provide all services specified in the contract, without large deductibles or patient payments. The amount paid generally has no relation to the amount of care needed; the premium is the same if a patient sees the doctor once a year or once a week.

HMOs emphasize staying healthy — and early detection. Many now cover things like preventive care, regular checkups and education services.

There are three basic types of HMOs — the clinic or center, group practice plans, and individual practice associations (IPAs).

With the clinic or center, members go to a central facility for all their health care needs.

Group plans provide doctors' services to members at one or more centrally located facility. They generally are staffed both by primary-care physicians and specialists, and many offer laboratory and other facilities under one roof.

Individual associations offer services at the private offices of doctors who are under contract to the HMO.

HMOs work with Medicare in two ways: Either they have direct contracts with Medicare or provide what is called Medicare "wrap-around" coverage for individuals who were members of the HMO when they became Medicare beneficiaries.

As a rule, an HMO will not pay for any service or care received from a practitioner or facility not affiliated with that HMO. Medicare may or may not cover such services, depending on the specific relationship between the Medicare group and the HMO.

Runners must keep close eye on their feet

By The Associated Press

Running on loose sand or with mushy-soft shoes can be hazardous to a jogger's health, says a Missouri doctor, who warns that some hard surfaces aren't advisable, either.

Running a mile requires about 1,750 footfalls and puts a great deal of stress and strain on the lower extremities and the lower back muscles, according to Dr. Allen Jacobs, associate dean for academic affairs at the Kirksville (Mo.) College of Osteopathic Medicine.

The college conducts an innovative sports medicine program, which consists of examinations and screenings, diagnosis of sports-related problems, conditioning and nutrition seminars and treatment clinics.

"Enthusiastic joggers who burst into action on the first sunny day without warming up sufficiently and who run on hard, unresilient surfaces can develop foot and ankle problems, shin splints, knee injuries and fatigue fractures," Jacobs says.

To reduce the risk of injury, he advises, joggers should have running shoes that are appropriate to their feet.

"The shoe should bend easily at the ball of the foot, since a stiff shoe can cause tightening of the calf muscles," notes the doctor. "Avoid a running shoe with a narrow, unstable heel or an unusually soft sole. Both can contribute to ankle sprain.

"Although an ultrasoft shoe would appear to absorb shock, it actually allows the foot to sink unevenly into the shoe and allows the ankle instability."

Joggers new to the sport should take care to start off their workout easily and slowly, always warming up properly before they run with five to 10 minutes of relaxing, stretching and kicking exercises, Jacobs suggests.

"Jog a bit in place, stop, and then jog again," he says. "A good sign that you're ready to begin serious running is when you break into a light sweat."

Joggers also should avoid running on hard surfaces like cement or asphalt which can cause pain in the calf, knee, hip and back as well as shin splints and stress fractures — and it is just as hazardous to your body to run on unusually soft or loose surfaces, he adds.

"Running on loose sand, for example, can cause your heels to sink and produce problems with the Achilles tendon," Jacobs explains. "Also try to stay away from small tracks with more than 15 turns to the mile. These are steeply banked and cause you to run on a slant. The result is often ankle and knee strain as well as groin pain."

Jacobs also has some advice for golfers, to whom back pain is a constant curse and afflicts some 75 million Americans, including such champions as Jack Nicklaus and Lee Trevino. He points out the golf swing is not a natural movement for the body and is extremely strenuous for the back.

"The most common causes of back pain on the golf course are swinging out of control and trying to kill the ball," says Jacobs, who adds that hitting 50-100 balls on the driving range and twisting the body in one direction for such a prolonged period can induce muscle spasm with pain in the lower back or lower limb.

A back-saving swing suggested by the doctor includes maintaining a relaxed posture at the address, using a three-quarter backswing, using more hand action during the downswing and completing the swing with a shorter finish.

In tennis, Jacobs says, the sudden stops, twists and turns make the player vulnerable to a sprained ankle, a strain or partial tear of the knee ligaments and injury to the cartilage in the knee.

"Also, tennis elbow is usually caused by flipping the wrist in an attempt to put spin on the ball or by failing to follow through on the backhand," he explains.

"A player who fails to follow through slams the 'emergency brakes' on the forearm muscles and this sudden braking puts the muscles under a strain."

To protect against injury during tennis, Jacobs says, players should take five or 10 minutes to do stretching exercises as a prelude to the game, with part of the warm-up to include practicing strokes to help reduce the risk of soreness and muscle pulls.

And no matter how fit you are, says the doctor, start the game slowly.

FDA bans six sulfite preservatives

By William Kronholm
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration is issuing regulations today banning the use of sulfite preservatives on fresh fruits and vegetables in restaurant salad bars, suspected in at least 13 deaths nationwide.

The regulations, which take effect in 30 days, remove six types of sulfite preservatives from FDA's list of food additives generally recognized as safe.

Adoption of the rules follows nearly two years of debate in Congress and within FDA and the scientific community on the possible dangers from sulfite preservatives, particularly those used on restaurant salad bars.

Sulfites have long been used to make fresh fruits and vegetables look more attractive. Sulfites keep lettuce from wilting, for example, and prevent apple slices from turning brown.

They are harmless for most people — but not to an estimated 500,000 sensitive people, mostly asthmatics, who can suffer an allergic reaction to the substances.

Most reactions are mild, resulting only in nausea, hives, diarrhea or shortness of breath. But severe reactions can send a person into shock and constrict the air passages, causing suffocation.

The National Restaurant Association and the Produce Marketing Association, in endorsing the proposal for a ban last year, said most restaurants have stopped using the preservatives because of the hazard.

"Salad bars have been associated with most of the serious problems, and the idea of posting signs in restaurants when sulfites have been added has not been universally accepted," FDA Commissioner Frank E. Young said in a statement Tuesday. "Thus, we believe we must ban the sulfites in this use."

The agency said the regulation was based in part on studies conducted by an independent scientific panel on sulfite hazards which recommended a ban, as well as on its own studies of 500 reports of reactions filed since 1983, including 13 deaths.

But FDA also was under heavy pressure from Congress. A hearing on the issue last year featured emotional testimony by the parents of a 10-year-old Oregon girl who died after eating sulfited guacamole in a restaurant and who accused the FDA of inaction.

The FDA regulation, published in today's Federal Register, affects six sulfite preservatives: sulfur dioxide, sodium sulfite, sodium and potassium bisulfite and sodium and potassium metabisulfite.

Papa Shep's legacy of love will linger on

By Maureen Azzato
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Papa Shep personfied love to most every elementary school child in the city. He ignited their young minds with fantasy, magic and shared with them his zest for life. And for that, he will never be forgotten.

Shepard Herman, otherwise know as 'Papa Shep' died last week of cancer at the age of 80, but left behind his spirit and art of storytelling that these young children one day will pass on. He was a sculptor, an inventor, a businessman and a lover of life.

For the past four years he visited the elementary schools about three times a week to share his tales of a girl named Ishkabibble who rode magic carpets, cavorted with pirates and kings and had endless adventures and possibilities.

Upon each visit, Papa Shep transformed the classroom into an enchanted world filled with marshmallow clouds and jellybean rainbows. Licoln-Eliot kindergarten teacher Natalie Stimmel says Papa Shep handmade the images himself with candy and the children devoured both the rainbow and the clouds with gusto.

"He was so clever and the children loved him so much," she says. "It was a mutual love-in. He benefitted and derived as much pleasure from his visits as the kids did."

For some children, Papa Shep was a surrogate grandfather who had enough love to spead around to everyone. Everything he touched glittered like gold, she says. "He reached out to everyone and allowed his love to flourish so beautifully and that's what the world is all about."

It was his grandson, Matthew Simon, 10, an Angier Elementary School student who first introduced Papa Shep to his classmates. During show-and-tell one day, Matthew bragged of his grandfather, the sage, who told the most wonderful stories in the world. Had it not been for Matthew, Newton children would have been deprived of knowing Papa Shep and his capricious tales of Ishkabibble, Esther Osborne Herman, Papa Shep's wife of 10 years says.

Parking fine recovery

Contract stalled

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A vote on the parking fine recovery contract to Datacom Inc. — the target of federal and state investigations in two major American cities — was chartered and therefore delayed Monday night until the next full Board of Aldermen meeting.

A non-controversial petition to increase overdue parking fines by $5, the step-fine petition was held by the board in the wake of controversy surrounding Datacom — the company selected to recover $400,000 in parking fines owed to the city.

The step-fine petition originally passed in November by a 22-0 margin, but, due to a technicality, aldermen had to vote on the issue again Monday night. After debate on whether city officials acted properly by selecting Datacom, Alderman Richard McGrath chartered the item.

McGrath said he chartered the petition, which delays action until the next full board meeting, after learning of Datacom's alleged illegal activities in New York City and Chicago.

"A week ago, this would have gone through with no problems," he said. "But, after reading the (newspaper) article about Datacom's past involvement, this petition has a whole new significance."

McGrath referred to charges brought by New York's US Attorney Benito Romano that two former Datacom employees allegedly took part in a scheme to bribe New York City officials to secure parking fine collection contracts for the company.

"I think this is a good opportunity for the board to look into Datacom, even though there is nothing we can really do now."

Aldermen allocated funds for the hiring of an outside collection agency during November's budget hearings. While he acknowleged Mayor Theodore Mann's exclusive right to negotiate this contract, McGrath asked city officials to explain in greater detail why Datacom was selected over the Massachusetts Municipal Association (MMA).

Both McGrath and Alderman Richard Bullwinkle also wanted more information about charges made by Cook County State Attorney Richard Daley that Datacom increased parking fines without proper authority.

"In Chicago, this company upped the fines, without the proper authority, willy-nilly," McGrath said.

NEWTON — The company about to be hired to collect nearly $400,000 in overdue parking violations has been the target of federal and state investigations in two major American cities, according to US Attorney's offices in New York City and Chicago.

Additional reports about the investigation have been published in the New York Daily News and the Chicago Tribune.

Datacom Inc., a company with data processing and collection contracts in 93 US cities and towns, is being sued by Cook County State Attorney Richard Daley for allegedly increasing overdue parking violations without the proper authority, according to the Chicago Tribune.

And, in New York City, two former Datacom employees will face trial Sept. 8 on federal bribery and racketeering charges, according to a spokesperson for New York US Attorney Benito Romano.

The Chicago newspaper says Datacom "sent out notices increasing the $10 meter

Repercussions of a fatal accident

One man's crusade to eliminate hazard

By Maureen Azzato
Staff Writer

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — The campaign to make the Woodcliff Road-Route 9 intersection safer is no longer a one-man crusade. Highlands resident Albie Walton has persuaded dozens of village merchants and homeowners to band together in a petition drive to vent their outrage and frustration to city and state officials.

The petition drive is also intended to inform residents of the community effort to demand a change at the intersection. Over 900 signatures have been gathered, but Walton does not intend to stop there.

"This is just the beginning," he said. "This intersection has been a hazard for as long as I can remember and we're not going to stop our efforts until something concrete is done."

At a Tuesday morning meeting of the city's Traffic Commission, commissioners agreed to recommend that the state DPW install a temporary median in the middle of Route 9 to close that intersection for a trial period of 45 days. A recommendation to upgrade the signals at the intersection also came out of the Tuesday Traffic Commission meeting.

State Rep. Susan Schur had a meeting with the state DPW late Tuesday to press for an expeditious followthrough on the latest recommendations.

The neighborhood's outrage was spearheaded by the accident that killed Newton Highlands resident and mother of four Marcia Henry at that intersection on

Trucker charged with vehicular homicide

By Maureen Azzato
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A Byfield man will stand trial on charges of vehicular homicide, operating to endanger and running a red light in connection with a June 13 accident that killed a 40-year-old Newton woman.

George Riel, 20, was arraigned last week in district court following a probable cause hearing. In that hearing, Court Magistrate Henry Shultz found sufficient facts to bring the case to trial after hearing testimony from seven witnesses.

The case is slated for pre-trial conference Aug. 7.

Riel was driving the truck involved in the June 13 crash that killed Marcia Henry, a Newton resident and mother of four children.

On that day, Henry was crossing Route 9 at Woodcliff Road at a green light when a truck, driven by Riel, allegedly ran a red light and barreled into the driver's side of her car and dragged it 315 feet, police said.

The maximum sentence for vehicular homicide is 2½ years imprisonment, or up to a $3,000 fine or both, according to Asst. District Attorney Tania Gray. A guilty finding on the other charges could lead to suspension of his driver's license, she added.

Two witnesses subpoenaed to testify at the hearing, which was closed to the public, said there is no doubt in their minds that Riel ran the red light on Route 9 the day of the accident.

Firefighters finally OK pact, with drug testing

By Les Orsini
Staff Writer

NEWTON — By a surprisingly narrow margin, firefighters last week endorsed a four-year contract containing controversial drug testing language. One said the 77 to 60 vote was the closest he could recall in 25 years.

Some firefighters who voted against the pact stressed they were opposed to drug testing — even though the Newton Firefighters Association (NFA) bargaining team unanimously recommended ratifcation.

Richard Ciccone, head of the NFA bargaining team, said he was amazed by the closeness of the tally. The contract gives firefighters an average of $3,500 in retroactive pay and a 23 percent pay hike over four years.

The drug language also offers rehabilitation rather than discipline for a first-time offender. NFA leadership explained it would be unable to get a better deal even if the group's two-year holdout was continued for another year.

"I'm amazed that these guys with their retroactive money sitting on the table would still want to continue even though there's no place to go," said Ciccone.

"The vote tells me something. I can't put my finger on it," he added. "I would have been disturbed if it didn't pass."

Firefighter Michael Morrissey voted against the contract, calling the drug testing provision a "travesty of justice." The provision is a personal insult, considering his 14 years of service to the city and the department, he said.

"I will take a drug test tomorrow for the (newspaper), but not for the chief of the Fire Department," Morrissey said.

'Tercentenary' versus 'Tricentennial'

By Kevin C. Kennedy
News Editor

NEWTON — A number of Garden City residents, especially some older ones, are a bit confused as they read of preparations for the city's "Tricentennial Celebration," in 1988.

While the committee for the celebration has been chosen and charged with its duties, these residents are wondering what, exactly, was the "Tercentary Celebration," which took place in 1930, and the "Centennial Celebration," held in 1973.

The explanation lies in the three phases of the city's development. In 1930, a statewide celebration was organized to mark the 300th year of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, of which a pre-natal Newton (known as North Village) was a part as an adjunct of the City of Cambridge.

In 1973, the "Centennial Celebration" marked the 100th anniversary of Newton's becoming incorporated as a full-fledged city.

The events planned for 1988 will mark the 300th anniversary of the official incorporation of Newton (nee Newtowne) as a town separate from Cambridge. It celebrates a time when Newtonians, sick and tired of trooping all the way to Cambridge for church and civic meetings, finally broke away.

According to a 1930 copy of the Boston Transcript, 1688 was a time that marked the official birth of the Garden City, "... which separated from Cambridge after Cambridge residents became tired of listening to 'those long-breathed petitioners' who wanted a church in 'Newtowne' of their own."

Whatever the official cause for celebration, though, it becomes obvious, after reading newspaper accounts of the 1930 "Tercentenary Celebration," that the committee planning the coming "Tricentennial" has its work cut out for it if it hopes to match the splendor of preceding events.

Papa Shep's legacy of love will linger on

Schools," she says. "He told the children he couldn't tell a story unless he had his Greek sailors cap on. They identified his fantasy world with that hat."

As a grandfather, Esther says he had enormous patience and could transmit his knowledge in a way children could understand. "There was something magical about him. There was no hate or violence in any of his stories and they were never dull," she says. "I never went to listen to Papa tell his stories to the children because I didn't want to interfere with what was his. I regret it now. It was such a big part of his life."

Six years ago Papa Shep was diagnosed as having bone cancer, but he never let his illness get the best of him. There was too much work to be done, she says.

"No matter how badly he felt he never would cancel an appointment with the children. He was always in physical pain in his last years, but through sheer will and love for the kids he would keep going," Esther says. "He would come home after a session with the children so animated and alive. They were the best medicine in the world."

The most beautiful aspect of his stories is that the children participated and helped him develop the plots, Esther says. He never went into the classroom with a preconceived tale in his mind. They would build the stories together. Papa Shep would share with the children a fantasy and, when they closed their eyes, the fantasies became real.

"He allowed the children to explore their own imaginations. He would say 'I'm stumped. I don't know where the story should go,'and the kids would shout ideas to him that he incorporated into the tales," Esther says.

Stimmel says Papa Shep's volunteer work at the schools kept him going a few extra years. She recalls him once thanking her for saving and fullfilling his life.

"I attribute it to the children, not me," she says. "He loved children so much and I'm so happy he was able to return to that love in his later years. I shall miss him very much. He also brought great joy and magic into my life."

Aside from his notoriety as a bard, son Bob Herman says Papa Shep's inventor's workbench is his strongest childhood recollection. A number of his inventions were patented, such as an air-cushioned heel pad and special heat radiators.

"He was always working on something that had never been done before. He was so industrious and full of energy. He never viewed a challenge as adversity. It was simply something to overcome," he says.

There is a pond in the back yard of the Herman's home where neighborhood children would ice skate in the winter and frolic in rowboats in the summer. Esther says she remembers Papa Shep wanting to do away with the oars of the rowboat to find another way to propel.

"Instead of oars he made a giant egg-beater type mechanism. I can see him now in the pond propelling himself around with it," she says giggling, recollecting fond memories. "I think he did it mostly to make the children laugh, which of course they did."

Although Papa Shep was remarkably older than his wife, she always thought he would out-live her.

"I was quite a bit younger than he was, but he had more energy and zest and a joy for living, and he radiated that where ever he went."

The positive properties of 'play'

By Maureen Azzato
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Traditionally, play is viewed as sheer recreation. It is thought to be a time for children to occupy or entertain themselves "mindlessly." But for kindergarten teacher Karen DeRusha, play is central in educating youth.

Children can learn through play in the classroom if given the proper materials, guidance and challenge, she says.

DeRusha designed a curriculum model for kindergarten and first grade students that revolves around play with sand, water, block-building and dramatic role play. These activities are integrated with the basic curriculum, and they provide an alternative learning environment from the usual pencil and paper workbook programs, she says.

"I really feel kindergarten children are not ready to do intensive paper and pencil work. There are so many ways children can learn and the focus of this program is to show that books are not the only source of education," she says. "They should have activity time in the classroom to choose what they want to do and how they want to spend their time."

The Newton Public School nominated DeRusha for the Lucretia Croker Fellowship under the Education Improvement Act of 1985. She was one of 15 teachers in the state chosen by the Massachusetts Board of Education to share her innovative program with other schools. DeRusha will spend the next year conducting workshops at other schools explaining her program and she will help other elementary school teachers implement it in their classrooms.

"This concept isn't earth-shatteringly new. I'm just trying to point out how we can incorporate play activities in the classroom better. Every kindergarten classroom has the materials my program calls for. It's just a matter of making the proper use of the materials by inspiring learning and giving students the chance to develop their own ideas," DeRusha says.

Ideally, DeRusha would like to see 25 percent of classroom time spent on play. She says it is important not to push children educationally until they are ready. When a child is developmentally ready, they will learn and pick up skills quicker, she says. It is unfair to pressure a child to grasp something they are not prepared for because it sets them up for unnecessary failure, she added.

"We're still trying to combat feelings among parents who have sent their children to nursery school for a few years and feel their children are ready for more intensive curriculum," she says.

Art Illman photo

'Once parents realize it's not just extended recess, most accept it and even advocate it.'
Teacher Karen DeRusha

"No matter how bright a youngster is, they still need to interact playfully with their peers. They're young and active. They can still profit if we just let kids be kids."

DeRusha designs her classroom so the three play activities in her program can go on simultaneously. In the block-building corner, students construct bridges, ramps, steps and their own miniature towns. They label the buildings in the town and discuss the functions of structures in the town with the teacher. Often the class will write stories about their pseudo towns.

According to DeRusha, block-building helps students to geometrically understand why their buildings stand or fall. DeRusha will ask her student to explain their block-buildings so they learn to express their ideas.

An area is also set up in the classroom for a little pool of water and a sand box. Students realize, through their own experimentation, what objects float in water and what causes some to sink. They also play with dry and wet sand and students can discover that wet sand can be molded.

"It all sounds so obvious to us, but it's a revelation for these children to discover these things on their own," DeRusha says. "It's really quite magical. When they see things floating in water, they think it's magic."

Dramatic role-play, another component of her program, is something her students "take very seriously." It teaches children to work together, share and plan ideas of real life situations. It also helps them "figure out how the world works," DeRusha says. "They reenact what they see other adults doing."

Her class once took a field trip to Newton-Wellesley Hospital to see what roles different people had. They made their observations, went back to the classroom and did a dramatic reenactment of what they saw.

DeRusha says she does not advocate "free" play in the classroom. All the activities have purpose, she says.

"It is all very carefully structured and intended to enhance children's imaginations and thought processes," she says. "It's very important learning and if parents don't understand this, it is also the teacher's role to explain why it's important. Once parents realize it's not just extended recess, most accept it and even advocate it."

Antique automobile show continues at mall

NEWTON — The summer exhibit of antique automobiles from Brookline's Museum of Transportation continues in July with a display of two more unusual classic cars.

Presented in a setting which tells a story, both cars can be seen in the Heart of the Mall throughout the month.

A midnight green 1969 Pontiac GTO convertible brings back memories of the Beach Boys, surfing, Sunset Strip and bikinis. This recent classic, from the "muscle car" era of auto manufacturing, was firstoffered in 1964 as an option package for those buying Pontiac Tempests or LeMans. The company hoped to sell 5,000 of the GTO options that year – they ended up selling over 30,000 — and the GTO became one of America's most popular cult cars. The model at the Mall boasts a 400 cubic inch engine and is still driven by its original owner, who has put 157,00 miles on the odometer.

Also to be seen is a 1924 Luxor, a rarely seen model which was manufactured for just two short years. It was frequently used as a taxicab back in the roaring twenties, and its bright red exterior epitomizes the carefree attitude of that era.

Man pleads guilty in stabbing case

CAMBRIDGE — A Newton man Monday pleaded guilty to a charge of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, having stabbed a Waltham man with a Buck knife at the Reef Bar in Waltham on Nov. 28, 1985.

David Katz, 30, of 100 Andrew St. is expected to be sentenced on Aug. 5 before Judge Hiller Zobel in Middlesex County Superior Court.

According to assistant Middlesex District Attorney Peter Bella, he and Katz's lawyer, public defender Milly Whatley, in the abdomen and once in the groin.

have made a joint recommendation that Katz be sentenced to serve a term of four and a half to five years at MCI — Cedar Junction in Walpole.

Bella said the state will likely drop a related indictment charging Katz with assault with intent to murder the same victim, John Dwyer.

Katz, who is free on bail pending sentencing, admitted to stabbing Dwyer at the pub on River Street at about 11 p.m. on Thanksgiving night. Katz, according to Bella, stabbed Dwyer once

City hopes to replace federal funds

NEWTON — Almost $200,000 in federal funds will be allocated to 13 human service programs next month. However, one city official says "they may be out on the street next year" if the money is axed from the federal budget.

The money, which is part of the $1.5 million federal Community Development Block Grants (CDBG) awarded to the city for the upcoming fiscal year, will be used "to seed human service programs for the future," according to Mayor Theodore Mann.

"Most of these funds will no longer be available," he says of money that may be eliminated from the federal budget by the passage of the budget reform bill.

"We have made a commitment to plan and develop human services in this city and by using this grant for seed money, hopefully we can start these programs now and keep them going in the future."

Divestment awaits gov's signature

NEWTON — Legislation that would force the city to rid itself of $3.5 million in South African-related investments sits on the desk of Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, awaiting his signature.

The home rule petition recently passed both the state House and Senate by unanimous voice votes, acccording to Senator Jack Backman, D-Brookline/Newton.

Backman and state Rep. David Cohen, D-Newton, sponsored the legislation after the Board of Aldermen unanimously voted for the home rule petition in June.

Southside sewer repairs are under way

NEWTON — The city is seeking federal permission to finish reconstruction of the South Side Sewer lines. The lines, dating as far back as the 1890s, leak refuse from the city's kitchens and bathrooms into the Charles River, according to Conservation Commission Executive Secretary Helen Heyn.

The city is asking the Army Corps of Engineers for permission to construct and maintain a sewer crossing under South Meadow Brook in Newton Upper Falls. Because the project involves construction near "navigable waters of the United States," according to Heyn, the Army Corps of Engineers must approve plans for placing 40 feet of concrete-encased pipe beneath the brook's stream bed.

Construction of the sewer crossing, Heyn says, is one segment of "a program to update the sewer lines, which service the whole south side of the city and run from the Varick Road pumping station upstream to South Medow Brook.

Environmental study at Bullough's Pond

NEWTON — A Boston engineering firm is in the midst of an environmental study aimed at finding ways to restore Bullough's Pond to its turn-of-the-century status as a passive recreation area.

Specialists from Camp, Dresser & McKee, Inc., who began a year-long diagnostic feasibility study of Bullough's in March, are scheduled to release the preliminary results of their work at a public meeting in October.

The firm already has indicated that leaks in the city sewer lines near City Hall may be responsible for the high phosphorus and coliform counts found in Bullough's two years ago, according to recreation supervisor Carol Stapleton.

Putting aside the usual, mundane banterings between the mayor and local journalists at his weekly press conferences, Mann welcomed them to his office for an ice cream bash. Locals may buck Kiwanis over women's status

By Lauren McFalls
Assistant News Editor

Two weeks ago at a convention in Houston, Kiwanis International voted against allowing women to join its clubs. But within the next two weeks, the Newton Kiwanis Club will decide whether to admit its first female member.

If the club admits women, it will be in violation of Kiwanis International rules, and Newton Kiwanis' charter could be pulled.

But Leonard Faucher, Newton Kiwanis Club president, is "not sure if the will is there" from International to pull the charter.

Although members voted 53 to 47 percent at the Houston convention to preserve the all-male status quo, International directors urged delegates to admit women into the club, he said.

Further, he continued, other clubs will be adding women to their membership rosters, and the New Jersey Supreme Court in April ruled Kiwanis is a public organization and must admit women.

But not everyone is as optimistic about women's future in Kiwanis. According to Irving Talberth, Kiwanis New England district secretary, even if the New Jersey case is successful, "I don't believe it will be adjudicated until it goes to the U.S. Supreme Court . . . Kiwanis has been an all-men's organization for 71 years," said Talberth. "There are clubs for women. Why don't they join their own clubs?"

He continued, "Each year there's been a motion on the floor to admit women. And each year it's defeated."

New England clubs, however, for the past two years, have voted in favor of convention motions to admit women, said Faucher. According to Ed McCallum, Kiwanis lieutenant governor for the Newton area, most Kiwanis stalwarts against allowing women into the organizaton live in the southern regions of the country and in California.

For the Jaycees, a formerly all-male community service organization, a court case — similar to the one brought against Kiwanis in New Jersey — influenced the club to formally accept women as members.

The Minnesota Supreme Court ruled the club must accept women because it is an organization of "public accomodation" that organizes community projects and meets in community halls, said Jeff Levine, Newton Jaycee member.

But the Newton Jaycees accepted women into their group long before the court ruling. "We always considered it wrong that the Jaycees were not admitting women," Levine said.

In fact, the club even named a woman — Sharon Yarkoni Kaluf — president prior to the International club's formal acceptance of females.

Although she was president, Kaluf was barred from participating in a speaking competition at the Jaycee annual convention two years ago in Atlanta. And, during the parade of states event, when delegates march through the convention hall, directors refused to announce her name.

"It was extremely disappointing," said Kaluf, from her downtown Boston office in the Federal Reserve Bank. "I went with the hopes they would let me speak. In my heart, I'm sad they didn't."

Still, she is happy she attended. "Otherwise," she said, "(Jaycee directors) might have said, 'Oh, she didn't show up. That's why she didn't speak.'"

Community service clubs, such as Kiwanis and the Jaycees, give members a chance to help their community through fund raisers and improvement projects. But another main benefit of joining is to develop business contacts.

"It's a great resource of networking," said Faucher. "It's a way to meet other business people, socialize and learn things.

"To exclude women is discriminatory," he said. Besides, "The more members we have the more we can help (the community)."

Summer program for stay at homes

While the Parks and Recreation departments of other cities and towns are cutting back their programs in the face of decreasing revenues, Newton's department continues to add athletic and artistic programs to its curriculum.

Staffers in the department have every right to be proud of the smorgasbord of activities they offer for kids of every age and ability. The department's summer program for special needs kids is especially laudable for filling the space between the end of one school year and the beginning of the next. It helps keep those kids "in tune" during a time when the activities they are used to are not being offered.

It's obvious the members of the Parks and Recreation Department are fully aware that not all the kids in one of the most affluent cities in the commonwealth go away for the summer. While many go to summer homes on the Cape, in the White Mountains and other places, many more have to stay at home. It is those kids that are best served by the city's services.

As wide-reaching as the department's agenda is for the summer, though, there is one small improvement that could be made. It seems it would be a small investment in time, effort and money for the city, and it would be a terrific boon for the many people, young and old, that it would serve.

What we are driving at is the installation of a wading pool at Hawthorn Playground. A visit there on a summer day will reveal dozens of mothers sitting under the shade trees, watching over their young children as they run back and forth through a sprinkler attached to a hose. Leave it to kids with their vivid imaginations; they think the sprinkler is great.

The mothers think they deserve better. "We don't go to the Cape," they say. "This is the Cape for us." They come to the playground in the morning, return home to feed the kids lunch and put them down for a nap and then they are back. They make do with what they have.

When it seems so simple to do better by them, why can't we make it happen?

How do you tell when they're on vacation?

After six months of guileless endeavor to preserve their prerogatives in spending the state's huge surplus, projected at more than a half billion, Massachusetts lawmakers have embarked on a summer recess through Labor Day. It cannot be said they needed a rest from excessive toil since a half year's toil has accomplished so little.

On the credit side, it must be said the members conformed by enduring those long, often dreary committee sessions to dispose of thousands of bills. But mostly, it was just a matter of tending to routine business in the briefest possible time and letting the major bills hang until the customary late-year struggle for consensus.

This opinion corner has been pushing an old chestnut, an abbrevitated General Court session of six or eight months, for what seems an eternity. What is now taking place ought to stimulate a serious attempt to bring that about. Politicking might be just as intense, but more could be accomplished for less by cutting down on the strategic and self-serving way the laws are being made.

Once Citizens for Limited Taxation gets past the current effort to reform state spending habits, Barbara Anderson and her organization could well spearhead a reduced session drive. Common Cause and the Taxpayers Foundation, two other citizens' advocacy groups, ought to be revving up for just such a crusade, too.

With only some 200 bills passed out of a total of close to 8,000, the Legislature's intransigance becomes starkly evident. A state tax cap, pension funding, mandatory sentencing of criminals and total repeal of the income surtax still in Phase 1 are the Senate-House biggies.

Overriding all else, of course, are two great power battles. Again, Barbara Anderson and her CLT are locking horns with the two branches, this time over the process by which a lid can be put on state spending. Anderson labels the legislators' formula a sham, in no way restraining their ability to open the money spigot, she charges.

She has an initiative petition on the November ballot designed to give the opportunity to put a halter on the state's budget extravagance, just as was done to municipalities in the passage of Proposition 2 1/2. Beacon Hill delays and the long recess certainly favor the ballot option, as does a recent Supreme Judicial Court ruling which struck down proposed "vanishing exemptions" in a tax bill.

The other confrontation involves Governor Dukakis and the Keverian-led House. In taking on the legislative branch over Rep. Collins' grab of the education chancellor post, Dukakis impaired a previously harmonious relationship with the Keverian leadership.

The governor will be asserting executive power to the fullest extent to oust Collins, whose choice as chancellor bypassed a screening committee procedure which had overlooked him in favor of four candidates. In August, Dukakis will have the opportunity to fill three positions on the Board of Regents and thereby have the votes to void the Collins' appointment, Beacon Hill watchers agree.

We're with Barbara Anderson and Gov. Dukakis all the way in both situations. If Proposition 2 1/2 is good for the cities and towns, as has been demonstrated, a budget hold-down on the Commonwealth is both desirable and equitable. In the Collins matter, the Dukakis position is well taken.

Election law changes would avoid another Hyatt fiasco

By George B. Merry

BOSTON — Who would think of waiting until the house burns down to call the fire department? But that, in effect, is what happens all too often in government.

Recent much-publicized fraud involving certain nomination papers of Republican gubernatorial candidate Gregory Hyatt could have been prevented. All it would have taken was some long-overdue tightening of Massachusetts election laws.

Now, in the wake of the discovery of more than 1,100 forged voter signatures on Mr. Hyatt's papers, a move is afoot to protect the nomination process from such abuse.

Secretary of State Michael J. Connolly, the state's chief election official, is pushing legislation that would empower him to set regulations concerning the handling of candidate signature sheets.

But what he wants may be just a timid step in the right direction. The reelection-bent second-term Democratic secretary of state seems unwilling to ask lawmakers to cast in statutory concrete the improvements he hopes to achieve through regulations.

Under his proposal, procedures could easily be changed or relaxed, should Mr. Connolly or a successor so desire.

Instead, what is needed are more durable reforms, including uniform state-mandated procedures under which local election officials would be required to process nomination papers submitted for voter-signature certification.

All of the improvements Connolly favors clearly have merit, but in some instances they might involve a trifle more work for municipal officials. One of the proposals would require the drawing of a red line after the last name certified on a candidate's nomination papers. A second change would have the local election officials write in longhand on each nomination sheet checked the number of signatures found valid. In addition, every community would be asked to send to the state elections division, by registered mail, the total certified signatures for each candidate.

Had any of these proposals been in effect this year, it would have been impossible for the Hyatt signature forgeries to have occured. Fortunately, the fraud was exposed by handwriting experts at signature-challenging proceedings before the ballot-law commission.

It was not the first time that those working for a candidate have taken such a shortcut to reach the ballot. While there is nothing to suggest that most office-seekers and their petition-circulators are less than honest, the possibility that others have gotten away with forgery cannot be discounted. Prosecutions of such felonies, however, have been rare. The most recent was that of a 1976 would-be candidate for the US House in the state's Ninth Congressional District.

Why it took Secretary Connolly nearly eight years in office to come up with his proposals for tightening the nomination-paper process may never be known. His apparently less-than-agressive efforts in that direction before the Hyatt discovery may have given Connolly's Republican challenger, former state Rep. Deborah Cochran of Dedham, a strong campaign issue.

Had the bogus signatures on the Hyatt papers been less conspicuous, coming as they did on nomination sheets after names certified as valid by city or town clerks, those perpertrating the forgeries might well have succeeded. Municipal election officials are not handwriting experts. They simply check for a signer's name on the voter rolls. Unless somehow challenged by the political opposition, all but the most blatent forgeries can go undetected.

Obviously, this is a major weakness in the system — and one unaddressed by Conolly's proposals.

Lawmakers might well consider eliminating the nomination-paper requirement altogether, as was done long ago in neigboring Connecticut and New Hampshire.

In the latter, candidates qualify for the ballot either by paying a small filing fee or by collecting a modest number of voter signatures of endorsement. Most office seekers go the former route.

Connecticut election laws require that a candidate seeking to run in a party primary compete at his or her party's convention and come away with at least 20 percent of the delegate support. Only independents — those running without party label and focusing directly on the November election — need collect voter signatures. Critics of the arrangement contend that it tends to deny ballot access to those with minimal party backing.

Those faulting the New Hampshire setup maintain that everyone should have the right to run for office, and nobody should be required to pay even a penny to get on the primary ballot. But surely any candidate could come up with the $2 it takes to run for the Granite State's House of Representatives, or even the $100 needed to run for governor and US Senator.

Campaign signature fraud might be significantly reduced were the number of voter signatures, particularly for statewide offices, sharply reduced. To achieve this and at the same time hold down the number of candidates, a modest filing fee might be added.

Such payments could be refunded to those who in their party's primary receive at least 10 percent of the votes cast for that office. In this way, those on ego trips with little or no appeal or campaign support would be discouraged from running.

We're all losers in one-party system

By Edward F. King

> Even the most ardent Dukakis supporter would have to admit that there are issues that could be debated and discussed.

The trials and travails of the Republican party in Massachusetts have gone from being humorous to incredible to downright sad. In straight language, it is the people of Massachuestts, all the people, who are suffering from the total lack of an effective minority party.

In the legislature, Senate President William Bulger and House Speaker George Keverian do as they please. There is no debate of any partisan nature, no suspense, and little or no accountability. A partisan dicatorship is the kindest description that comes to mind.

The gubernatorial campaign, or lack of same is a pefect example of how we all lose when only one party fields a credible candidate. Even the most ardent Dukakis supporter would have to admit that there are issues that could be debated and discussed.

Our state treasury has built up an almost incredible surplus. How did we get it? Are we overtaxed? Is our prosperity due to the brilliant Dukakis leadership? Or are we benefiting from the national policies of the Regan administration? What role has Proposition two and half played in our economic surge? Should we use the surplus for more social programs? Or should we have meaningful tax cuts? Or more local aid?

Governor Dukakis is adamantly opposed to captital punishment. Is that not a dabateable issue? Should he explain his position to the voters?

The Dukakis administration continues to use tax money to perform abortion. Can we question such a policy? Since tax money is involved, is not abortion a legitimate subject for debate?

Both the so-called bottle bill and the seat belt law were strongly promoted and endorsed by the governor. Are we satisfied that these laws are working well? Was his judgment correct?

What about roadblocks to check for drunken drivers? The governor has supported such roadblocks. Was he correct in doing so?

How about Westfield? Why is it wrong for an educator to have sex with a student but perfectly alright for a Democratic Congressman to seduce a teenage page? Why did the governor urge prosecution for Mr. Pilecki in Westfield but re-election for Gerry Studds on Cape Cod?

All of the above are grist for a good, old-fashioned, hard-fought, bare knuckles political campaign. Alas, it won't happen.

Because of the weakness and follies of the GOP, we will be treated to discussions of office nudity, forged signatures, falsification of campaign brochures, and a new cornation for the Duke. He wins. We all lose.

New wrinkle in nuclear disaster

By Tom Tiede

WOODBINE, N.J. — Eugene Shoemaker is a U.S. Geological Survey scientist who has introduced a new wrinkle in the old worry over accidental nuclear war. He believes the holocaust could conceivably be precipitated by the explosion of a meteorite close to Earth.

Shoemaker argues that the planet is continually being showered by space debris. Most of the matter is small, but not all of it. He says asteroids that are a half mile or more in diameter are in frequent contact with the Earth's orbit, and any one of them is capable of creating a fearsome explosion.

The explosion could take place by way of the laws of physics. Shoemaker notes that a meteorite 80 feet across, entering the atmosphere at 50,000 mph, might create a condition in which the air would compress to a degree that the meteorite would be brought to an instantaneous halt and blow apart.

That blast would be felt around the world, of course. And Shoemaker thinks leaders of some nations could panic. The United States and Russia probably would know immediately what happened, but smaller nuclear powers, say Pakistan or Israel, might think it was an attack and retaliate in kind.

So, World War III, or whatever.

Shoemaker concedes that the potential is relatively remote — no sizable asteroid has detonated over the Earth since the beginning of the century — but he has succeeded in alerting the world to what could be a most disastrous threat from outer space.

He has also succeeded in reminding the world that the threat has other scenarios as well. The fact is, the heavens have always been latently hostile. There are 2,000 large asteroids lurking around Earth and 100 comets that visit each year, and any collision with the planet could be severe.

Some collisions have already taken place. Meteorites have buffeted areas from Siberia to Arizona. The Siberian explosion occurred in 1908, destroying hundreds of square miles, and, before that, a 130-foot hunk of meteoric iron hit Arizona and dug a crater that is three-quarters of a mile wide.

Presumably, the big rocks have also crashed into the more than 70 percent of Earth's surface that is comprised of water. And this may be the most disquieting threat from space. Scientists say that if a meteorite of Shoemakeran size landed in a sea it could throw up a tidal wave that might be worse than an atomic detonation.

An incident of that sort may have taken place here in southern New Jersey. The evidence is circumstantial, but there is a belief that an asteroid crunched into the Deleware Bay, creating a tidal wave that roared over and flattened the ancient forests of Cape May.

The belief has been published in a book called "Investigating the Unexplained." The author, Ivan Sanderson, writes that the tidal wave probably occurred a few hundred years before Columbus. The only people in New Jersey then were Indians, who did not keep accounts of such curiosities.

Despite that, Sanderson writes that there is no doubt something happened. The evidence is still scattered about. Hundreds of thousands of cedar trees were blown into common graves, over wide areas, and the suggestion is they had to be toppled at the same time by a obviously cataclysmic force.

Sanderson claims the only force that makes sense is a tidal wave. And he writes that it could have been manufactured by a meteorite. He says a ball of relatively modest proportions could have created a wave 1,000 feet high, which in turn would have rolled all the way to Appalachia.

A tidal wave of that magnitude would move at more than 500 mph. And it would be followed by smaller but still powerful afterwaves. The result, according to Sanderson, would be an initial scouring of the forests, and then a subsequent depositing of silt and soil to bury the trees in their places.

And that's not the half of it, Sanderson goes on. He says the meteorite might have been larger, and the wave as well. He says a really big asteroid could construct a 10,000-foot, or even a 20,000-foot tidal wave, and if it happened in the world of today it would destroy as many people as trees.

And Eugene Shoemaker says it can happen. At least according to his current calculations. He believes that a meteorite with one megaton of power should enter the atmosphere every 30 years, on the average, and a meteorite with a 20-megaton capability should arrive every 400 years.

Thus Shoemaker thinks the Earth should be making preparations. He says scientists could be tracking the large bodies, if nothing else. It would be bad enough if one of them got through to start a war; it would be worse if there was no one left in any condition to do the battle.

Pressure mayor for $1 million

To the editor:

In response to our recent group petition, the Aldermen were kind enough to pass a resolution asking the mayor to propose the allocation of $1 million from Newton's free cash surplus to reduce the fiscal Year 1987 city real estate tax. The mayor has not yet done so.

The Newton Taxpayers association, therefore is now requesting that the aldermen not approve any other appropriation from surplus until and unless the aforementioned $1 million appropriation is proposed and approved.

Democracy, not divestment

To the editor:

Will sanctions "force the South Africans to come to their senses," or help, along with the Communists, to push South Africa over the brink into a bloodbath?

The Conservative Afrikaners are fully aware of the links between the ANC and the South African Communist Party – and of the fact that the ANC is armed by the Soviets.

It has become abudantly clear that if the ANC and communist-led factions manage to grab power in South Africa there will be a bloodbath, a slaughter of Whites and conservative Blacks, along with anyone else who doesn't want to live under a communist dictatorship – the way 70,000 people have been put to death recently by the communists in Angola.

Conservative Blacks have no intention of allowing themselves to be ruled by the ANC (for a replay of the famine in Communist Ethiopia), and are beginning to take matters into their own hands.

Obviously, if the Communists take over in South Africa, there will be no Democracy to replace apartheid.

On the other hand, if the Afrikaner extreme right takes over, acting on the fears fanned by threats of slaughtering the Whites, they may wind up slaughtering the radical Blacks – or, if sufficiently crazed, Blacks in general.

Then, the Soviet-backed Cuban and North Korean troops in Angola, after exterminating all opposition to communist rule in Angola with a $4 billion donation of Soviet munitions, will invade South Africa.

Then we'll lift the sanctions and reinvest in the new Warsaw-pact nation for the purposes of "peace" and "Detente," right?

Two possible, bloody endings to apartheid are terrifyingly real. There are two forks in the rocky road the South Africans must travel, that every American should be fully aware of, and oppose in any and every way we possibly can.

Better options with brighter futures are:

1. Full Democracy in South Africa for everyone.

In order to quell fears of Genocide:

2. Whites and Blacks separate geographically and create two separate Nations.

3. Liberal Whites may choose to live with the Blacks under predominantly Black rule, and conservative Blacks may choose to live with the Whites, under White rule.

Crucial to an orderly transition of power will be an intact economy. Pressures created by economic chaos and racial violence do not result in rational decisions.

The best thing to do may be for the South African peoples to decide among themselves which option they want to live with, in a binding referendum — provided that 2/3 of the population votes.

The Whites and the Blacks would vote separately, apart from each other.

The Blacks would decide whether they want Democracy or to return to Tribal rule, and they would decide whether they want to live with and be part of the same government as the Whites, or live separately and have a separate government: either a Democracy or a Federation of Tribes.

The Whites would decide whether they want to share power with the Blacks in a Democracy, or create a separate nation from the Blacks.

I do not agree with the premises that sanctions and divestment in South Africa will somehow, automatically, bring about Democracy.

We should push for a referendum on Democracy in South Africa, and not waste any more time pushing for sanctions or divestment.

The hour is already getting late.

Dana Smith
Newton Centre

Take the time to buckle up

To the Editor:

In a recent newspaper article on seat belts (Boston Globe, 5/23/86) it was mentioned that police officers in Newton tend to enforce the law and issue citations to individuals who have been detained for a moving automobile violation and who happen also not to be wearing their seat belts.

As a simple matter of fact, this is the law and should therefore be enforced in Newton and across the Commonwealth. But what is more interesting and important to me, as Chief of the Newton Police Department, is the fact that our compliance rate (49.8%) is well above the state average (37.2%), according to statistics compiled by Boston University Department of Public Health Sight Survey, done in February 1986. Not necessarily because it is the law, but because using your seatbelt is the intelligent thing to do.

The United States Secretary of Transportation recently estimated that we could save as many as 10,000 lives in 1986 if we only used our seat belts. One of those lives could be an innocent child, a beloved family member or a trusted friend. The misery of debilitating, traumatic injury — these are the reasons we should wear our seat belts.

Is it not worth the few seconds it takes to BUCKLE UP if a person is saved from injury or death, or if a family is saved from years spent suffering the loss of a loved one? Of course it is!

Please use your seat belt — it's the intelligent thing to do.

William F. Quinn
Chief of Police

Question Duke's priorities

To the editor:

In a "show and tell" program, recently put on by Governor Dukakis, fifteen of the participants said, according to press reports, that "they probably would not be present if not for seat belts." Likewise, Dukakis cited estimates that "there are 70 people in the state living today because of the seat belt law."

Of course, both of these statements are pure speculation and guesswork, not fact. No one, not even anyone as omniscient as Dukakis, can truthfully state as a fact that even a single life has been saved by the seat belt law. What we do know as a fact is what is reported in the press, namely, that hundreds of dollars of state moneys have been spent for photographs of the governor's wife! The question arises whether this is a legitimate expenditure of public funds.

Another fact, not a speculation or guesswork, is that other public moneys have been spent for events favored by the governor's wife, such as a $3,500 commemorative fete and nearly $5,500 for hors d'oeuvres, liquor, and a dinner for 125 people to celebrate beautification efforts.

Again, the question arises whether such lavish expenditures, for events favored by the governor's wife, are the best possible purpose to which public moneys, your taxes and mine, should be applied, or would it have been more appropriate and for a better cause to have spent such funds for the benefit of the less fortunate, such as the poor, the hungry, the homeless, the handicapped, and the elderly, for whom the governor purports to have compassion.

I leave the answer to these questions to Mike Dukakis and his conscience, as he continues sanctimoniously to portray himself to the people as the quintessence of integrity and a paragon of good government.

Firefighters OK contract & drug testing language

Even if a firefighter's urine test proves negative, the stigma of having been suspected will remain, Morrissey said. If "I'm stereotyped as a drug abuser, I'll never be treated fairly by the Newton Fire Department again," he said.

Police in April voted 131 to 53 in favor of a four-year contract calling for the same 23 percent raise, but with a somewhat different drug testing policy.

Police Chief William Quinn can order an officer to submit a urine sample if he determines there is "reasonable cause" to suspect drug abuse and a three-man committee agrees.

Ciccone and NFA President Kevin McArdle have criticized that arrangement because the committee is composed of two city representatives — one from the city's Personnel Department — who would invariably support the chief's request. Officers could be the victim of a personal vendetta, they have said.

In contrast, firefighter drug language sets up a three-member committee of firefighters — two appointed by Fire Chief Edward Reilly and one by the union — to decide if an employee will submit to urinalysis.

This "peer review committee" would be unlikely to engage in a "witch hunt" since all members are firefighters, said McArdle. "It can't be used as a tool to get someone," he said.

Committee members will probably have a good idea whether the fire chief's suspicions about a firefighter are valid, Ciccone said. A city health official has told them that symptoms of drug abuse usually show up in the work place, he said.

"There's a good chance they will know," he said. "We live together 42 hours a week."

In addition, a first-time offender will be disciplined only if he fails to complete a drug rehabilitation program set up by the city physician's office, McArdle said. The city can discipline — including dismiss — a repeat offender, he said.

"The bottom line is we feel we got a good deal, the city got a good deal," Ciccone said.

Despite the leadership's recommendation for passage, McArdle made it clear that he still opposes some drug-testing requirements on principle.

He questioned the sincerity of the city's concern about drug abuse, saying city negotiators were willing to drop the provision if the NFA was willing to accept a smaller raise.

In addition, the drug provision is redundant because department regulations permit the fire chief to discipline a drug or alcohol abuser, he said.

Firefighters have an interest in making sure the department is drug free, he said. "We as firefighters are not suicidal," McArdle said. "We're not going to work with people who are impaired with drugs or alcohol."

Other than the drug-testing clause, some NFA members objected to a provision which could deny them overtime for a year if they take more than four sick days. Upon a fifth sick day, a firefighter must prove there are extenuating circumstances — such as a chronic injury or a lingering illness in his family — to avoid losing overtime.

One firefighter, who voted against the contract, said he has accumulated over 200 sick days, "and now all of a sudden if I take five, I lose overtime."

He said it was this provision, not drug testing, which led to his "no" vote. Two years back pay also did not tempt him, he said.

"It's the principal of the thing," he said. "The money doesn't matter. It's either right or wrong."

Seven city contracts have expired

By Les Orsini
Staff Writer

NEWTON — City bargainers are probably looking for a breather after finishing nearly two years of police and firefighter negotiations. But they are not going to get one.

Seven other municipal employee groups will be seeking new contracts, and some unions want raises comparable to what police and firefighters recently received. Their contracts expired July 1.

Those two unions have accepted raises totaling 13 percent over the next two years.

But Richard Kelliher, the city's chief administrative officer, said there is no guarantee all municipal unions will receive the same pay hike. Police school crossing supervisors, for example, recently settled for a 5 percent raise each of the next two years.

"We're bargaining with each unit separately," Kelliher said.

The city has also raised the very issue — drug testing — which prolonged police and fire negotiations several months, according to some union representatives.

"We plan to discuss it with all the units," said Kelliher. "While we are negotiating, I'm not prepared to comment on specifics."

Police and firefighters resisted drug testing provisions, and some of their union leaders openly challenged the constitutionality of forcing employees to submit to urinalyis. The two unions eventually accepted somewhat different drug language, though not all members approved.

Despite potential disputes over wages and drug language, some union leaders hope negotiations will proceed smoothly to a quick and happy conclusion.

City Hall Associates, which represents around 230 employees, has already had two bargaining sessions and has another scheduled for July 28, according to President John Proia.

"I think possibly we'll settle this session or the next," he said. "We're not that far apart."

His union — which includes clerical staff from City Hall, the housing authority and the Police, Fire, Recreation and the Library departments — hopes to do as well as officers and firefighters.

"We're going to try to shoot for the same thing, if not more," said Proia.

Daniel MacLaren — president of the Amercian Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) local 800 branch — said he hopes his approximately 380 members will receive a similar wage boost.

"That's a rough estimate," he said. "We hope to be there."

Local 800 represents Recreation, Public Works, and Building Department employees.

James Maguire, a member of the bargaining team for the Building Department Inspectors Associates, said he hopes his 18 members will receive raises that are "the same or more" than police and firefighters accepted.

Those wage hikes are the "water mark" for the Newton Municipal Engineers, said union President Martin Lucente.

"I can't see much movement on that," said Lucente, whose union represents 16 municipal employees. "I don't think any people are worth less than any other people."

Just as important to municipal engineers is the staffing levels in the Engineering Department, Lucente said. The city had around 30 engineers years ago but has not to his recollection replaced a retiree since around 1974, Lucente said.

City engineers serve the same number of municipal agencies as they did years ago and more need to be hired, he said.

"That's one of the things we're going to push for," Lucente said. "Everybody more or less looks to us for information."

Kelliher said hiring more employees is a management decision. "Nothing along those lines has been raised at the table," he said.

City readies for 'Tricentennial' as it remembers 1930 'Tercentenary' of 15,000 to Newton Centre Playground over the course of its three-night run, began on Memorial Day and continued for five months.

The Memorial Day parade saw more than 5,000 residents marching in full regalia. It was followed by an exhibit of local artists and artisans, a tennis championship, a track and field meet at Newton High School and a city golf championship (played on four different courses in the city, with the finals being held at Brae Burn Country Club.)

The celebration also featured citywide championship tournaments in swimming, baseball and squash. The whole affair ran from June 7 to October 25.

According to a 1930's Boston newspaper columnist, who preferred to write under the pseudonym "The Prowler," an exhibit of antiques at the Newton Centre Women's Club was the highlight of the extravaganza. The city's first commuter train, "The Meteor," was on display outside the club.

Inside, representatives of each of the city's villages were given a separate room in which to display their antiques. The women from Newtonville constructed "a sylvan glade" in back of the club, complete with a well and a wellsweep. After words of praise for all the exhibits, "The Prowler" concluded, "It seemed a pity that such an unusual exhibit had to be dismantled after a few days."

But it was the "Tercentenary Pageant" that got the most attention from the Boston press. To promote the event, the Boston Traveler announced, "The entire City of Newton has cooperated in making this pageant a success."

It also ran large pictures of local schoolteacher Raymond Greene, wearing the garb in which he played Abraham Lincoln in the pageant, and several young ladies described as "Newton's prettiest," dressed in antebellum dresses and bonnets, inviting Governor Allen to the pageant.

The June 6 edition of The Newton Graphic wasted no time on small praise for the pageant, which it announced in a front page headline was "Acclaimed by thousands as the best ever produced in the vicinity."

In the lead paragraph of its review, the Graphic proclaimed that the three-night production had hit the heights. "Pageantry's purpose, to 'make old men dream dreams and young men see visions,' was most successfully accomplished this week in the production of the inspiring Tercentenary Pageant," according to the paper. "It was a production of perfection, probably unequalled by anything of its artistic type ever given before in this section of the country."

The production included 400 men, women and children as actors and actresses, a 60-member orchestra and a chorus of 150 voices. It traced the city's development along lines parallel with those of the country's, beginning with the first town meeting and former Mayor E. O. Childs acting as moderator.

One act was devoted to the city's first residents, the Indians, and John Eliots's efforts to pass along his Christian vision to them. Another act depicting a typical day on the village green, according to the reviewer, included "a negro boy," way in the back, "fishing in the river."

The final act represented day-to-day life in the typical Newton home of 1930. Mrs. W. Cornell Appleton was the mother. The kids were played by Fred Hammond, Baxter Richardson, Sybil Lander, Marion Morgan and Virginia Lichtner.

Final comments from "the paper of record" noted that, while Newton's pageant cost only $15,000 to produce, it "surpassed" those recently produced by Plymouth ($100,000) and Lexington ($50,000.)

The more than 1,000 residents involved in the production of the pageant might have found ample reward for their efforts in the Graphic's final estimation: "From the opening fanfare of trumpets to the finale, Newton's Tercentenary Pageant was a gem, the brillance of which will shine for a long, long time."

Linda Plaut, head of the Arts in the Parks program for the city's Parks and Recreation Department, appeared to be unintimidated by the appraisal of the city's 1930 celebration. She has been planning the 1988 festival and said Monday she already has a crew of 200 volunteers organizing a number of events that will take place between January and October of that year.

She refused to talk about specific plans, calling them "a little bit unsettled" at this time. But she did say that she had just conferred with someone who would be in charge of national publicity for the tricentennial.

City aware of 'scandal'

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — City officials have known "since May" of Datacom's involvement in a New York City parking scandal, but, according to Chief Adminstrative Officer Richard Kelliher, "They are still the best company to provide the parking violation collection services.

"We are painfully aware of this," Kelliher says. "It has been a tough decision. The bottom line is how Newton taxpayers will be affected. We feel confident that this is the best service available to them."

Kelliher says the city, after a recommendation from the Parking Ticket Review Committee, decided last week to sign Datacom to a two-year collection contract, worth $300,000.

Kelliher says Datacom was selected over the Massachusetts Municpal Association (MMA), which also bid on the contract.

"If the MMA were awarded the Newton contract, it would have increased their overall volume of business by 50 percent," he says. "Datacom handles Boston, Cambridge, Somerville and Worcester and is ready to go on line immediately. Their experience in dealing with large cities is well-proven and easily documented."

During the research process, which Kelliher says included reviews of clippings from the New York Times and interviews with company officials and municipal officials from Cambridge, Somerville, Worchester and Fall River, "it became evident that individuals, not the company itself," were the target of the indictments handed down in April.

> 'The bottom line is how Newton taxpayers will be affected.'
> Richard Kelliher

"Datacom officials will testify at the trial," he says. "They have not requested immunity, and they say they will cooperate fully with federal attorneys."

Thomas O'Neil, Datacom regional vice president, says the company "has not been charged or indicted and we never solicited bribes. We will cooperate, but we don't expect to hear a hell of a lot more from the United States Attorney's office on this."

Assistant City Solicitor Ouida Young says there is a difference between individual and corporate culpability and that "nothing in our research" determined that Datacom Inc. was involved in the alleged criminal activities of its employees.

Kelliher says, on June 15, he, Young and Parking Clerk Richard Walsh met in Attorney Thomas Dwyer's office with Datacom counsel Stephen Lipstiz to confirm "that Datacom is able to handle the Newton contract."

He adds that, if the company is found guilty of any charges, there will be a termination clause in the contract, to be signed this week, that will allow the city to break the contract without further justification.

Aldermen will have little if any ability to hold up or block the contract. Because they appropriated money for a collection agency during November's budget meetings, "We do not have the same leverage we did during the ambulance contract," said Alderman Verne Vance.

The only apparent alternative would be to delay voting on the revised step fine ordinance, already approved by Vance's Legislation and Rules Committee.

The ordinance, which would empower the city to charge a $5 surcharge to parking scofflaws, has, as companion legislation, the authorization to hire a collection agency. Vance, however, does not think aldermen could delay the Datacom contract even if they held up the step fine ordinance.

fee to $20, plus a $3 fee" to scofflaws. In addition, the Tribune says Datacom mailed notices warning that "if scofflaws do not pay, the fines will increase gradually and could go as high as $200. The Daley suit contends that only the Cook County court system has the authority to increase the fines."

The New York City charges, according to Deborah Corley, spokesperson for Romano, involve a scheme to obtain city collections contracts for the company. A third Datacom employee, Vice President Allen Scott, has been charged with extortion by Romano in New York.

Corley says Michael Lazar and Stanley Friedman, two former New York City officials, were indicted in April on charges they attempted, while working for Datacom, to bribe city officials in an effort to secure collections and towing contracts from the New York City Parking Violations Bureau (PVB).

According to Corley, the indictment charges that former New York City Commissioner of Transportation Lazar, at the time an attorney for Datacom, offered a $20,000 bribe in 1980 to Jeffrey Lindenauer, deputy commissioner of transportation in charge of the PVB. The alleged bribe, according to Corley, was to "influence (Lindenauer's) discharge of duty with respect to Datacom."

The contract, according to Lloyd Deutsch, assistant New York City Corporation Council, was to "collect millions of dollars of unpaid parking fines that were apparently just sitting there."

The contract gave Datacom the exclusive right to process and collect unpaid violations from out-of-state drivers, said to be worth millions of dollars, according to the New York Daily News.

Corley says Friedman, the Bronx Democratic leader who worked as a consultant for Datacom in 1982, was indicted for scheming with Lindenauer and former Queens Borough President Donald Manes — who later committed suicide died by stabbing himself in the heart — to award an unrelated data processing contract to Datacom. Corley says the three would share in 10 percent of the estimated $500,000 paid to Datacom for that service.

Last November, according to the New York Daily News, Friedman alledgedly paid $30,000 to Manes in an effort to secure that contract.

Scott, according to Corley, was charged March 26 with extorting more than $100,000 between 1978 and 1984 from a Bronx towing company. Corley says Scott approached the tow company owner and demanded cash in return for awarding a subcontract to perform towing services for Datacom in conjunction with its existing towing contract with the city.

Friedman, according to the New York Daily News, used his influence in 1985 to secure that contract in return for 1 percent of the total value of the contract.

Under the agreement, Datacom allegedly would provide the actual towing equipment while two competing companies, Sennate and Krumholtz (SK) and Systematic Recovery Services (SRS), would do the paperwork.

Corley says no indictment has yet been filed against Scott.

Datacom was one of nine companies whose contracts with the PVB have been terminated by New York City. The company itself has not been indicted, according to Datacom Regional Vice President Thomas O'Neil.

In addition to the New York charges, Datacom, among other data processing companies, is being investigated by the United States Attorneys office in Chicago according to that office.

The investigation, according to Chicago Corporation Council Judson Miner, will determine if the company is involved in a similar scheme to bribe public officials in that city. Miner says there have been no charges filed. Miner would not comment on Datacom's involvement, saying federal and state investigations into the matter are still on-going.

Crusade is paying off

June 13. A tractor-trailer truck allegedly ran a red light and barreled into Henry's car while she was crossing Route 9 on Woodcliff Road on a green light.

"As I traveled from store to store in the village asking if I could hang my poster and petition in their stores, I realized how well known and liked Mrs. Henry was," Walton said. "Everybody wants to help. I think people are finally tired of traveling that intersection with fear for their lives. Merchant's have welcomed the petitions and are basically saying, 'Stop this carnage.'"

The petition is demanding more prominent traffic lights for the intersection, and until a new system is installed, residents want better police enforcement and ticketing of motorists who habitually run red lights, according to Walton.

A Bay State Beauty Mart employee, Henny, who asked that her last name not be used, said she sees people "consistantly" running that light.

"Every year we hear of so many accidents that happen there. It's just terrible," she said. "People are finally putting their foot down. We only received the petition Friday and already we have over 40 signatures. I know that I get extremely nervous at that intersection. I check to both sides and make sure people on Route 9 are stopped before I will cross."

Henny said she believes the issue has "hit home hard" for many residents because Henry was a mother of four. "A very emotional tragedy brought this to light. It could have been any one of us."

Several merchants said they are involved with the petition because of community responsibility.

"I'm glad people feel they can use our stores as a public forum to indicate how they feel about something," said John Dulin, general manager of Bread and Chocolate Bakery. "I think we have a certain responsibility to this neighborhood to help out where ever we can."

Since Friday, when Walton distributed the petitions to store owners, over 300 additional signatures were gathered.

Because Route 9 is a state highway, there are numerous stumbling blocks the city and petitioners will face, Walton said. The authority to make changes at that intersection lies in the state's hands, according to Alderman Rodney Barker. A Woodcliff Road resident, Barker contends the only way to make the intersection permanently safer is to close the median on Route 9.

"This has been proposed by the state in the past, but area residents have lobbied against it because of the traffic inconvenience it would cause," Barker said. "I'm more than willing to put up with the inconvenience. We'll just have to see if people have changed their way of thinking."

Parking fine recovery stalled

"I think we owe it to the taxpayers to find out a little more about the company that is going to handle their money."

Bullwinkle agreed.

"The public has a right to know who we are doing business with," he said. "If the vendor has a problem with his reputation, and I don't care whether it is individual or corporate, the public should know what is going on."

The two also blasted terms of the contract allowing the city to terminate it if the company is indicted.

"Who are we going to hire if Datacom is found guilty?" Bullwinkle asked.

McGrath and Bullwinkle, however, were outnumbered in their bid to send the step-fine petition back to committee for further inquiry into Datacom. A motion to recommit the petition failed 12-8.

Alderman Elaine Gentile, who chaired the Parking Ticket Review Committee (PTRC), which is charged with making a bid recommendation to the mayor, said "an exhaustive review process" determined that Datacom was the only bidder able to carry out the contract.

"This is not something we did at the spur of the moment," she said. "We spent almost two months interviewing company officials, attorneys, city officials and others. We had our backs to the wall."

Gentile said the city is losing "hundreds of thousands of dollars" because it is unable to collect on overdue fines. If Datacom was not selected, she said the only alternative would be an expensive conversion to an in-house collections system, requiring the purchase of additional computer hard and software as well as additional personnel.

McGrath scoffed at that argument. "You might as well let the fox redecorate the chicken coop," he said, "because the fox knows the inside so well."

Bullwinkle criticized the PTRC for not going public with its information prior to Monday night.

"I want to know as much as she does," he said of the PTRC chairman.

Alderman Verne Vance, representing many of his colleagues opposed to delaying the step-fine petition, said aldermen "would be cutting off their noses to spite their faces.

"This city needs this money," he said. "I don't think we should delay this necessary means of increasing revenue."

The step-fine petition will come before the board again on August 11.

NW Hospital needs summer volunteers

NEWTON — Newton-Wellesley is looking for summertime volunteers. Right now, the Volunteer Services Department is accepting applications for summer volunteers. Persons must be 14 years or older to apply, and volunteer duties will vary from person to person.

There are plenty of openings available, not to mention opportunities for personal growth.

As a volunteer at NWH, you'll enjoy a stimulating and pleasant work environment, meet friendly people, and probably have a lot of fun, too. Come be a volunteer at Newton-Wellesley Hospital. For more information, call NWH's Volunteer Services Department at 243-6048, Monday thru Friday, from 8:30 a.m. til 5:30 p.m.

Jewish charities needs volunteers

NEWTON — Volunteer opportunities are available in a full range of agencies and settings through the Combined Jewish Philanthropies Inter Agency Volunteer Program. The Program acts as a clearing house and refers volunteers to jobs in hospitals, community centers, services for the elderly, and educational sites.

Jobs include tutoring and teaching, being advocates for people and issues, job counseling, friendly visiting, and helping with special events.

We have a volunteer job to match your interests, skills and schedule. Call the Volunteer Program at 965-7410, ext. 161.

Trucker charged with vehicular homicide

Highlands witnessed the accident from the south side of Route 9, opposite Henry's car, and described it as "horrifying." She described Riel as traveling "very fast."

"He definitely ran the red light," Gatto said following the closed-door hearing. "The writing was on the wall at that point. I was petrified of walking up to the car for fear of what I would see. It's probably the worst thing I've ever seen in my whole life."

Gatto said she found herself symapathizing with Riel during the probable cause hearing, characterizing him as "a thin little young boy, who is obviously very scared, shaken and upset.

"You do have to have sympathy for both sides," Gatto added. "This boy will have to live with this the rest of his life. That's a heavy load."

But witness Regina Cunningham, of Wellesley, said it is difficult for her to sympathize with Riel and his "reckless behavior."

Cunningham said she was traveling eastbound on Route 9 in the opposite lane of the accident and was stopped at the red light when she witnessed the fatality.

"I looked down for a brief moment while I was stopped and then when I looked up I saw a truck in the westbound lane with a car on its grill plowing through the intersection," she said. "It was the eeriest thing I've ever seen."

Cunningham did not pull over at the scene of the accident, but proceeded to work and called police from there.

"I just needed to know if that person survived the accident. I called the police mostly out of morbid curiosity," she said.

Cunningham said she cannot shake the image of a headlight from Henry's car popping out and bouncing down the road.

"The light is still sitting in the same place today," she said. "I see it all the time on my way to work. It's a grim reminder."

According to Framingham State Police, Riel's truck was in perfect working order and was not overloaded. Authorities said Riel had all the proper licensing to operate the trailer truck.

Riel works for James DiTucci Trucking Company in Byfield. His employer would not comment on the case.

Other witnesses included Newton police officers Paul Bianchi and John Geary. According to Capt. John Bartinelli, Bianchi, off duty, was in a car directly behind Henry's on Woodcliff Road when the accident occurred. Geary, an animal control officer, was on Route 9. Both officers were unavailable for comment.

"Both of them witnessed the accident and said the truck driver ran the red light," Bartinelli said.

Riel's defense lawyer Lawrence Murphy was unavailable for comment.

Cable rates to increase

NEWTON — Continental Cable of Newton has announced price adjustments for three of its cable services effective Aug. 1, 1986.

For the second time in the history of the cable franchise, Continental will be adjusting prices "to position them more in line with the realities of providing quality cable television service to Newton," said Area Manager James C. Sedgewick. "As with any business in the city, increases in our costs must be reflected in our prices," he added. The new prices are not subject to either local or state approval, since rate deregulation is in effect in Massachusetts.

In outlining the changes, Sedgewick reported that Expanded Basic Service (now $10.45) will be $12.95 per month; additional outlets (now $3.50) will be $4.25 per month; and Basic Service (now $5.95) will be $6.95 per month. Premium channel prices and one-time installation charges will not be changed at this time.

Sedgewick emphasized that Continental's prices for Newton compare favorably with other communities throughout greater Boston. Continental, like other companies across the nation, is faced with increasing operating costs. According to Sedgewick, prices must be low enough to compete with alternative informational and entertainment options, yet high enough to enable the system to operate successfully.

In reviewing system activities having a financial impact on the system, Sedgewick included costs associated with the inadequacy of the Newton tower site, including construction and maintenance of direct feeds from area transmitters; increased program suppliers' fees; extensive personnel costs and employee training; vehicle maintenance and replacement; increased copyright fees; and substantial investment in local real estate to house offices and studio facilities at 1349 Centre St.

Four Seasons belts Post 440

Newton's Joe Spagnuolo sails into second with a stolen base

NEWTON — The first three men to come to the plate for Newton Post 440 scored, but for the rest of the game the bats belonged to Four Seasons Sports and the Waltham club captured an 11-4 Bay State League Stan Musial victory at Ferguson Field on Tuesday.

After the shaky start, Waltham used a 15-hit attack — led by Scott LaForest and Neal Larsson with three apiece — and a four-hit, shutout relief performance by Wayne Johnson to turn things around.

Johnson was perhaps the key to the change of fortunes, because it took a while for the Four Seasons bats to catch up with the offerings of John Corsi. Post 440 still held a one-run lead as late as the fifth inning. But in the meantime, Johnson completely shut down the home club, giving Waltham a chance to come back.

Though Corsi gave up six hits and three runs through the first four innings, it wasn't until the fifth that Waltham finally broke through big. Five hits, three Newton errors and a pair of walks contributed to the outburst, but it was a bunt which cracked open the whole can of worms.

Waltham leadoff man Bob Cappadona put one down right down the third-base line on the first pitch of the inning. Chris Pachus, trying to make a desperation play, fired the ball way past first, as Cappadona raced around to third.

When Larry Scafidi drilled a double to left, Four Seasons had a 4-4 tie, but that was only the beginning. The tie was broken on the next hitter, as Scott LaForest singled to center, with Scafidi coming home when Chris Bercury bobbled the ball.

A walk to Dan DiVito, a stolen base, and RBI singles by Larsson and Ed Sweet made it 7-4 by the time the inning was over. The damage could have been even worse, but Scott LaForest was thrown out at home trying to take two bases on a wild pitch.

That was all the winners would need, because Post 440 could do nothing with Johnson in the bottom of the fifth. In the top of the sixth, Four Seasons scored four more times, but the runs were academic, as the game was called due to darkness. Scott LaForest, DiVito and Steve LaForest all drove in runs. Under league rules, no game reverts back to the previous inning no matter what the score when it is called, so all the numbers in the top of the sixth count in the final tally.

Post 440 had its chance at breaking the game open early off Waltham starter Ari Alexenberg. The home club watched Four Seasons score twice in the top of the first, aided by two errors and a wild pitch, but erased that lead four batters into their half.

A walk to Joe Spagnuolo, followed by singles by Chris Bercury and Ralph Berry, cut the lead in half and put runners at the corners. Pachus tied the game with a single and two batters later, Alexenberg untied it himself with a balk that scored Berry.

Alexenberg wiggled out of further trouble by striking out Ray Gladu with runners at the corners to end the inning.

The left-hander only temporarily postponed his own demise, because when Bob Connerney and Spagnuolo singled to start the second, he was gone in favor of Johnson. After a popup, Berry's single and an error by Scott LaForest apparently drove in both runners, but Connerney was called out on an appeal as he missed the plate. Pachus followed with another hit, but Johnson induced Joe King to ground out to end the frame.

As it turned out, that was Post 440's last real chance. The home team did put a couple of runners on in the fourth, but McKinnon started a double play at second to quell that threat.

Waltham goes to 10-6 with the victory, and is back in action tonight at Dennis Field at 8 against Acton. Post 440, 5-13, goes up against the Dudley City Club in a doubleheader on Sunday.

The summary:

FOUR SEASONS SPORTS(11)-Cappadona 4-2, Scafidi 3-2, Scott LaForest 4-3, DiVito 2-2, Steve LaForest 3-1, Larsson 4-3, Fisher 2-1, Sweet 3-1, McKinnon 2-0. Tot. 27-15.

POST 440(4)-Spagnuolo 2-2, Bercury 2-1, Berry 3-2, Pachus 3-2, King 3-0, Corsi 2-1, Ayres 3-0, Gladu 2-0, Caliguri 0-0, Connerney 2-1. Tot. 22-9.

Score by innings:

International League

Daniele drives in five to propel Abruzzi, 11-9

NEWTON — Phil Daniele plated five runs with a double and a single as Abruzzi Club handled St. Bernard's, 16-10, Friday in Newton International League action at Albemarle Field.

Daniele keyed a three-run second inning that gave Abruzzi an 8-2 lead, then came through when Abruzzi needed it most in the seventh inning. St. Bernard's had rallied for three runs in both the fifth and sixth innings, cutting the Abruzzi spread to two, 11-9, but a Danielle two-run single capped a five-run attack that insured the victory.

Lawrence Schuman took the victory on the hill for Abruzzi, and it was Schuman's bat that got things going. In a five-run first inning, man dealt the key blow in the form of a two-out, two-run double to the gap in left-center.

Warriors explode

The Auburndale Warriors broke a 2-2 deadlock in the top of the seventh inning, scoring nine runs and cruising to a convincing 11-2 victory over Albemarle Thursday night at Burke Field.

Doug Micciantuono led off the frame with the first of his two hits in the inning, a single to center. Then, as bizzare as it may sound, Micciantuono would score from first on a Scott Popsuj bunt single for what turned out to be the winning run.

Abruzzi wins

In other action, Abruzzi Club broke open a 2-2 tie with four runs in the bottom of the second inning and went on to take a 7-6 victory over C&K Components Thursday Night at the Newton Highlands' Playground.

Four consecutive walks accounted for the go-ahead run before Abruzzi had to put their bats to work.

With the bases loaded, Manny Ruiz singled home another to make it 4-2.

Leonard tosses no-hitter

There are no-hitters and then there are no-hitters.

In as dominating a performance as anyone could ask for, Post 440's Steve Leonard allowed no hits and struck out 12 in a rain-shortened, six-inning, 15-0 triumph over St. Bernard's at West Newton Common on Wednesday.

The 15-year-old righty walked only a single batter and didn't allow a single ball to get out of the infield, as St. Bernard's didn't have anything that resembled a hit.

Carson grabs first

Carson Post held off a late rally by the Boys' Club at Newton Centre, 9-8, to take over first place in the Copp Division. Carson Post is now 8-4, giving it a one-point lead over the 7-2-1 Boys' Club.

Carson Post seemed to be in control when a four-run second inning snapped a 4-4 tie.

Jason DeGeorge put the winners ahead with a two-ruin single that drove in Chris Edelson (walk) and Dan Tafe (fielder's choice). DeGeorge then stole second and scored on a hit by Steve Lookner. After Lookner stole his way around to third, a ground ball by Mike Fisk delivered him.

C&K hangs on

Tom Donnellan wriggled out of a bases-loaded, no-out jam in the top of the seventh as C&K Components hung on for a 6-5 victory over the Albemarle Club at Cabot Park.

C&K scored what proved to be the gamewinner in the bottom of the sixth when Jim McMillen doubled and eventually scored on an error.

That gave the winners a three-run lead, all of which they needed.

Auburndale rips St. Bernard's

Mike Armstrong didn't need a four-hitter to win, but the 14-year-old righthander pitched one anyway.

Armstrong's pitching heroics shadowed an awesome offensive outburst by the International League Auburndale Warriors, who bashed out 16 hits on the way to a 20-2 landslide victory over St. Bernard's at Del Ryan Field.

McMillen pegs one-hitter

Tom McMillen surrendered only a first-inning single by Joe LaRoche in hurling C&K Components to an 8-0 victory over Post 440.

LaRoche lined a clean single to center to end any premature no-hit thoughts on McMillen's part, but that would be the last hit Post 440 would get.

Troubadour wins

Derek Fergus got off to a shaky start, surrendering six runs in the first inning, but from then on the Troubadour right-hander was unhittable, carrying his club to a 9-7 victory over the Boys' Club at Cabot Park.

The 14-year-old finished with a two-hitter, both of which came in that opening frame. Both did some damage, as Don MacDougall clubbed a three-run homer to center and Dino Leone later added a two-run double.

But even after that shelling, Troubadour was very much in the game, since the winners had scored three times in the top of the first.

Warriors romp

The Auburndale Warriors parlayed four singles, six walks and a hit batsman into nine first-inning runs and never looked back in a 19-5 rout of St. Bernards at West Newton Common.

John Salemme ripped a two-run single to key the frame.

National League

Mosca power dooms Boys' Club

NEWTON — A Chris Pappas three-run double and a Mark Maiocca two-run homer powered an early surge as Mosca Club barrelled over Boys' Club, 12-2, Thursday in Newton National League played at Newton North High.

Mosca scored four times in the first inning and twice in the second to take command early and Ben Burlingame and John Cappadona combined to hold the Boy's Club to four hits and two runs.

Burlingame went four innings for the victory before giving way to Cappadona, who blew past Boy's Club by getting five of his six opponents by strikeout.

Pappas' bases-clearing double in the first inning capped the four-run surge. Maiocca led off with a single before scoring on a Dan Monbouquette double, then was tagged out at third base on a Steve Altman fielder's choice.

Pillan Thirumalaisamy reached on an error, pushing Altman ahead to second, and Steve Stoller walked to load the bases. Pappas followed with his double to center field to unload the bags.

Maiocca homered in the second inning, scoring John Doherty, who had tripled, ahead of him.

Thirumalaisamy got into the act in the third, tripling before scoring on a Pappas double.

Altman had a three-run single in the sixth inning.

Knights tie

Dino Leone's one-out RBI-single in the bottom of the fifth inning proved to be the equalizer as darkness won out in a Knights of Columbus 3-3 tie with St. Bernard's at Albemarle Field.

When Leone plated John Lerman with the game-tyer in the Knights' fifth, the skies had already begun to darken, and after a scoreless half of an inning by St. Bernard's in the sixth, the contest was called a draw because of darkness.

The Knights took a 2-0 lead in the second inning on an error and a RBI-single by Ed Tafe, but St. Bernard's battled back to take the lead, 3-2, after three innings.

Back-to-back doubles by Chris Young and Don Natale powered the three-run inning.

St. Bernard's righthander Tom McGary, who delivered Leone's game-tying single but was not responsible for the Lerman, escaped from a first-and second no-out jam to perserve the draw.

McGary picked Ed Tafe off second base and then threw Leone out at first to unload the bases, then struck out his final opponent to send the game to the sixth.

St. Bernard's improves its record to 4-5-1.

Warriors win

John Biotti tossed a four-hit shutout and Jim Giddon went two-for-two with an RBI as the Auburndale Warriors blanked Our Lady's, 6-0, at West Newton Common.

Biotti, a 17-year-old righthander, struck out six and walked two in going the distance — six innings — for the win.

Giddon tripled home the Warriors initial run, scoring Stu Meltzer in the first inning. Auburndale went up 2-0 on a Rob Ingham RBI-single before Giddon singled and scored a run in the two-run third inning.

Britt Ryan had two hits for Our Lady's.

McGary misses gem

The no-hitter is a rare pitching gem, no doubt about it. But two in a row, well, put it this way: in over 100 years of major league baseball it's been done exactly once.

One ground ball cost St. Bernard's Tom McGary a chance to match that feat. Colin Ryan's bouncing ground ball that found the hole between first and second was the only hit the Boys' Club could come up with in a 15-1 St. Bernard's victory.

In his last outing on the mound, McGary had beaten Mosca with a no-hitter, so he's given up just that one hit in his last 13 innings, as Wednesday's contest was called after six.

McGary wasn't overpowering, striking out five and walking the same number, but the Boys' Club hitters simply couldn't make good contact.

Ironically, that lone safety helped cost McGary what would have been his second straight shutout. Jim Proia led off the fourth with a walk before Ryan found the hole. A sacrifice fly by Chuck Proia scored the run.

The shutout was the only thing the right-hander had to worry about, because by that time his team had given him a 10-0 lead.

Perhaps given is the wrong word, because McGary had a rather large hand in it. By the second inning, he had two hits and three runs-batted-in.

In the first, he singled in Don Natale, who had walked and wound up at third on Jeff Sherman's single.

He capped a three-run rally in the second with a two-run single. Natale had driven in Craig Blay (single) with the first run.

Tom wasn't the only McGary with a hot bat, either. Younger brother Craig slugged a three-run triple in the fourth inning.

Each McGary finished with three RBIs, while Tom and Sherman had three hits apiece.

Knights hang on

Back-to-back triples by Kevin Lynch and Dan Deverix sparked a three-run sixth inning and Thad Frost held off a seventh-inning attack to lead the Knights of Columbus to a 4-3 victory over the Auburndale Warriors.

For the Knights, it was the first win of the season against eight losses, and the victory belonged to Frost. The righthander took a 4-1 lead into the bottom of the seventh inning and, after a Sid Queler two-run double with one out, Frost reached back to halt the rally.

Frost, who walked none and struck out three in going the distance, forced a flyout and struck out the final batter to hold on for the win.

After allowing a single run in the third inning to put Auburndale up, 1-0, Frost shutout the Warriors for the next three frames, retiring the side in order in both the fifth and sixth stanzas.

By that time, the Knights had taken over the lead. A hit-and-run single by Pat Annese plated John Tafe all the way from first base in the fourth inning to tie the score, then Lynch and Devrix combined on the successive triples to put the Knights in front, 3-1. Devrix came home on an error following his triple to make it, 4-1, Knights.

Mosca rolls

Jon Glick retired 15 batters in a row to post his third victory of the season while his Mosca Club mates rallied for a six-run second inning, all amounting to a 6-0 victory over Our Lady's at Lincoln Park.

The right-handed Glick pretty much had his way with the Our Lady's crew, allowing just three singles while walking two and fanning five.

All the game's scoring took place in the second inning. Matt Spengler walked to leadoff, then took third on a Pillan Thirumalaisamy single. Steve Stoller walked to load the bases, and Chris Pappas took some weight off the paths with a two-run single to left field.

John Doherty reloaded the bags when he reached on an infield error and, after Mark Maiocca popped out, Dan Monbouquette lashed a double to the gap in right-center to unload the bases.

Little League Tournament

West basks in sunshine for win over Watertown

WEST ROXBURY — Sometimes the sun doesn't shine the same for everyone. On Wednesday, Newton West was basking in the glow, while Watertown National was cursing the glare after West took a 6-5 victory in the District 17 Little League Tournament at Bunker Field.

It took a throw that was lost in the sun to give the Newton club the decision in the seventh inning.

West had scored in the bottom of the fourth to tie the game at 5-5, but neither club scored in the fifth or sixth to send the game into extra innings.

In the bottom of the seventh, Nick Nicolazzo reached on a one-out infield error and moved to second on a groundout. Next up was David Bourland, who hit a grounder to third. The ball was fielded cleanly, but by that point, the sun was getting very low and the Watertown first baseman lost the ball. When Nicolazzo scored, the game was history.

That play made a winner out of Bourland. The 12-year-old righty pitched the last three innings in relief of Marty Clapton, and didn't allow a run. At one point, he fanned five straight hitters.

Newton jumped out to a 4-0 lead with a pair of runs in the first and second.

In the first, one came in on an error, the other when Ted Dalicandro tallied on the front end of a double steal.

In the second, a Bourland double followed by two walks loaded the bases for Clapton, who singled for a run. Dalicandro's sacrifice fly made it 4-0.

East advances

Bob O'Toole and Stephan Lafer combined for seven hits as Newton East clobbered Newton Central, 27-5, at Lyons Field, to remain alive.

Both O'Toole and Lafer included two doubles in their production for the night. O'Toole just missed a homer, as one of his two-baggers clanged off the top of the fence.

North romps

Doug Gentile drove in four runs on a pair doubles in the late innings as Newton North turned back Parkway Central, 9-1.

Gentile's first two-bagger came in the five-run fifth inning and dissolved a 1-1 stalemate.

Newton North got that rally going when Zach Buell doubled to right and Pat Panaggio and Jimmy DeLuca drew successive bases on balls to load the bases. Gentile drilled a double to left to bring in a pair of runs, and after Joey Blanchard strolled, Dante Mazzola singled in two more runs. A one-baser by Matt McCue netted the fifth run.

In the sixth, Carmen Petrillo and DeLuca walked and were rescued when Gentile slashed a two-bagger to left. Mazzola singled home Gentile.

The first Newton North run in the first inning was the result of walks to Gentile and Jamie Keefe, a passed ball and sacrifice fly by Mazzola.

The only Parkway Central run came on a homer by pitcher Kevin Meegan, a long drive over the left field fence, leading off in the fourth inning. Meegan got the other hit in the second, a single to center.

Newton West bows

Parkway American got a 5-0 jump in the first two inning and romped past Newton West, 7-2, at Albemarle Field. The West Roxbury nine pounded out a dozen hits while Newton West was being held to seven hits by Robert Giaquinto.

Keith Gagnon, Ed Raffoni, Kevin O'Leary, Bob Jones and Valesquez had two hits apiece for the winners.

Neely rescues South

Third baseman Dan Neely broke up a tie ball game with a two-out double in the fifth inning to give Newton South a 5-3 decision over Newton East at Praught Field.

South went into the fifth trailing by a run (3-2). Seth Blumethal walked, was forced at second on Mark Bender's grounder, and Aaron Cooper followed with a bloop single. Beau Burlingame singled up the middle to knot the score at 3-3.

After Jeff Libby popped up to shortstop, Neely delivered a double to right field to settle the contest.

East struck for two runs in the first inning after loading the bases on an infield single by Dan Housman and walks to Chip Vance and Steve Elliot. A base on balls to Bob O'Toole forced in one run and Vance tallied on a wild pitch.

In the third, Housman strolled and was home by Elliot.

DiStefano paces West

A two-run double by pitcher David DiStefano highlighted the explosive fifth inning as Newton West overtook Warrendale, 8-4.

Warrendale had a 4-0 leading going into the top of the fifth when pitcher Ted Brown experienced control trouble. The righthander doled out passes to Nick Nicolazzo, David Stewart and Abe Kline to load the bases.

Nicolazzo scored on a wild pitch, Marty Clapton brought in Stewart on a squeeze bunt and DiStefano tied the score with his two-bagger to centerfield. Three more walks and a two-run throwing error completed the scoring.

Warrendale took a 2-0 lead in the first inning when Matt Hinckley and Bert Campbell drew successive walks and tallied via passed ball and throwing error.

Newton East strolls

Cashing in on the wildness of righty Joe Chiodo, who gave up 13 bases on balls, Newton East strolled past Watertown East, 9-1, at Bunker Field, West Roxbury.

Chiodo gave up eight of those walks in the seven-run first inning, while two errors also figured in the scoring.

Right fielder Chip Vance doubled home Dan Hausman in the third.

Blanchard lifts North

A slick two-hit mound offering by righty Joe Blanchard featured Newton North's 12-0 triumph over Watertown National at Lyons Field.

The Watertown hits came in the fourth inning, singles by Connors and Caruso. The losers had only three baserunners in the game.

Central falls

Matt Foley lost a no-hitter in the fifth inning, finishing with a three-hit game as Dedham whitewashed Newton Central, 7-0, in a first-round game at Praught Field.

Newton's Mike Carroll singled off Foley in the fifth, and Josh Borus and Dave Wolman added the other Newton hits in the sixth.

Dedham scored four runs in the first and three in the fifth to skate away with the victory.

Volleyball champs

American Legion

Medford rally erases Post 440 advantage

MEDFORD — The tables turned Friday on the Newton Post 440 as George Sherman and his American Legion crew watched a 4-1 lead disappear over a three-out span.

Host Medford rallied behind five Newton errors to score seven sixth-inning runs, eliminating a 4-1 deficit and handing Post 440 and righthander Chuck Proia a disappointing 8-4 defeat.

The pitching well had run dry for Sherman, and the Post 440 coach went to Prioa, his sure-handed second baseman, for help. The righthander responded to the test, taking a 4-1 lead into the bottom of the sixth, but the defense behind him fell apart as Post 440 bowed to defeat.

Proia has pitched this summer in the Newton National League but had not taken the hill in Sherman's defense as of Friday. With the loss of righty Tom Casey for a week (sore arm), the Post 440 coach pushed Proia into service.

He walked three and struck out one in six innings, allowing nine hits. Proia was breezing, having allowed a lone Medford run in the first inning, before disaster struck the Newton Post 440.

"We entered the sixth with a 4-1 lead, Chucky was in control, and the defense was playing strong behind him," Sherman said. "Then we went to pieces. Chucky really didn't deserve the loss. He pitched a super, super game — he was in control most of the way."

Proia dug himself a slight hole in the Medford first inning. He walked Steve Monahan to leadoff, then, on the first pitch to Scott Tynn, Monahan stole second base. Tynn grounded out to third, holding Monahan on second, but Joe Sarcia drove a deep fly to right field to advance the runner to third with two gone.

Vinnie Maniscalco came through with the clutch hit, singling home Manahan for the go-ahead run.

Newton took the lead in the fourth, scoring two runs. Jim Giddon (3-for-4) started the rally with his second straight hit, a sharp single up the middle. Giddon moved to second on a Proia flyout, then scored on a Peter Noone single to left field.

Alex DeNucci then doubled to the gap in left-center, with Noone advancing to third, and Frank Battista tied the game with a line-drive single over shortstop to score Noone.

Still with one out, Newton posed a further threat with runners at the corners. Medford starter and finisher Kevin Yianacopolus got Jeff Sherman to bounce back to the mound, then fanned Ed Veiking to end the inning.

Post 440 rallied for two more in the fifth inning on a Giddon RBI-double and a Noone run-scoring single. Dave Grant had singled to open the inning and advanced on a one-out wild pitch. Giddon then smashed a double to right-center, scoring Grant. After Proia struck out, Noone singled to left to cross Giddon.

In the Medford sixth, a single and a pair of infield errors loaded the bases with no outs before Marcus Nickerson singled home a pair for a 4-3 game.

A Bill O'Brien bouncer back to Proia on the mound forced a play at the plate, but Newton catcher Noone dropped the ball to allow the tying run in.

"It was just one of those things," Sherman said of the error at the plate. "Peter was just over anxious, I think. We had plenty of time to make the play and I think he tried to tag him too early."

Yianacopolus sacrificed runners to second and third, and Proia intentionally passed Monahan to stack the bases with one out. Newton had turned two double plays in the game so far, and Coach Sherman had to be looking for a third.

Not so. Scott Tynn smoked a gapper to left-center, clearing the bases for an 8-4 lead.

Newton center fielder DeNucci made a nice play to hold Tynn to a double, but could do nothing to cut down the runners. The speedy outfielder ran down Tynn's blast and made a perfect throw to the cutoff, Battista, who in turn threw hard to third baseman Giddon as Tynn retreated back to second.

He didn't stay at second long though. Proia picked Tynn off second to empty the bases. It was Proia's second casaulty of the game.

Newton threatened in the seventh, putting two men on with two out, but Yianacopolus forced a high pop up to end the game.

On Thursday, southpaw Grant no-hit host Natick for three innings before the roof caved in. Natick scored 12 runs in its final three frames to take a 12-3 victory from Newton.

The home team scored four runs in the fourth, five in the fifth, and three in the sixth to secure the win.

Newton took a 2-0 lead in the first inning on a Prioa two-run single, but it was downhill from there.

In Post 440's previous outing, even an always-optimistic Coach Sherman knew after less than an inning that it was just not his team's day.

Actually, Sherman's premonition hit him right at the outset. Before Newton's American Legion contest with Lowell was even two outs old, Post 440 had dropped a pair of long flies in the outfield. And before Newton knew it, Lowell had jumped ahead with three unearned runs, all on the way to a 12-3 victory at Ferguson Field.

"After the first inning it looked like it would be a long night," Sherman said. "But I realize that some days are our days and some days are not. Tonight was not."

Newton's hard luck began almost immediately. After southpaw Jeff Sherman, the coach's son, forced leadoff hitter Dan Barros on a ground out to shortstop, two fly balls hit to the warning track, one to left and one to center, dropped for errors, extending Sherman's stay on the mound.

Cleanup slugger Rick Walker promptly made Newton pay for its mistakes, lashing a line drive over the fence in right field for a sudden, 3-0, Lowell edge.

Sherman pitched to four more batters with no further damage being done, but the recent Newton Catholic grad should have been out of the frame long ago.

As if a 3-0 lead wasn't enough for starters, Lowell came back in the bottom of the first to show Newton what defense was all about. Post 440's Frank Battista singled off fireballer Bill Janes with one out, but leftfielder Ray Martin charged a short fly by Dave Grant and held Battista at first.

Ron Coppola doubled off the fence in center field, advancing a cautious Battista to third, before centerfielder Bryan Cohen stabbed a Sherman shot to end the inning.

"We didn't make the plays in the first inning which got us down," Coach Sherman said. "Lowell made the plays, which got them up. That was difference."

Newton allowed two more unearned runs in the second inning after Sherman had allowed a walk and single, and a 5-0 lead was all righthander Janes needed to work with.

The 17-year-old three-sport star from Lowell High brought his fastball with him, and Newton was unable to catch up to the blur which has been clocked at close to 90 mph, according to Sherman.

Silver earns All-Star honors

Newton North's Robin Silver captured a spot on the Suburban League softball All-Star team, voted on by the circuit coaches, and she was joined by four teammates on the second squad.

Eight position players, two pitchers, a utility player, and a designated hitter comprised the first team, while nine position players, two pitchers, a utility player, and five alternates were named to the second team.

Silver was named to the first team as a utility player. Second-team members included sophomore first baseman Jen Heesch, junior third baseman Marie Farrar, and junior outfielders Wendy Rogers and Sharon Silva.

Brockton and Waltham dominated most of the first-team slot. The league-champion Boxers had five players picked. Waltham wasn't too far behind, earning four nominations.

Brockton added another member on the second team. The Hawks had two more players on that squad, for a total of six.

The local star:

Robin Silver — Silver was a shoe-in all-star at second base, according to Newton North coach Carolyn Harrington, but was forced over to shortstop this past season because the Tigers desperately needed to fill a hole.

That didn't matter, though, because Silver made the all-star team anyway. Listed as a utility player, Silver sacrificed some individual recognition as the league's best second baseman or shortstop, but she did it for the good of the team.

"Robin's a super ballplayer," Harrington said. "She's a true second baseman — and she would have been an all-star second baseman — but we needed a shortstop. Still, she's definitely a first-team all-star."

Also a field hockey captain and a speedy guard on the basketball team, Silver's energy and enthusiasm makes her "a super leader."

Harrington said Silver will attend Trinity College in Connecticut this fall.

Katherine Simonds and Mr. Frank E. Snider wed

NEWTON — Katherine Marie Simonds, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Simonds of Woodhaven Road, Newton and Frank Edward Snider were united in marriage on the morning of May 17 at St. Philip Neri Church in Newton.

Frank Edward Snider is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Snider of Greenville, North Carolina.

Performing the ceremony was the Rev. Walter J. Doyle. The reception followed at the Hillcrest in Waltham.

The bride chose her sister, Cindi Simonds, as her maid of honor. Attending her as bridesmaids were Cheri Mossman, Wendy Simonds and Patti Simonds, all sisters of the bride.

The bridegroom chose his brother, Paul Snider, to perform the duties of best man.

Fulfilling the duties of usher were: Steve Romberg, Joel Vodola and Terry Martin.

The bride wore a white taffetta gown with a sweetheart neckline and fitted bodice appliqued with alencon lace and seed pearls, ruffled sleeves, and a dropped waistline with full gathered skirt falling to a chapel train with ruffling around the hemline. She wore a crown of seed peals and silk flowers with fingertip veil of french illusion.

The bride carried a cascade of white butterfly roses accented with baby's breaths.

The bridesmaids wore tea length taffetta gowns with pleated bodice and puff sleeves. They carried a bouquet of white roses accented with babybreaths and white ribbon, and the headpiece was of white silk flowers.

The bride is a graduate of Newton South High School and received her bachelor of science from Simmons College in Boston and her MBA from New York University. She is currently employed by General Electric Corp., Stamford, Conn. as a financial analyst.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Amity Regional High School and received his bachelor of science from the University of New Haven, New Haven, Conn. He is presently employed at ATT Communications, Wallingford, Conn.

109th Anniversary

Committee members for Noemi No. 11, United Order True Sisters 109th Anniversary Luncheon, met recently at the home of Jan Wohlberg to formulate plans for the festive event. They are (l to r) Esther Feldman, Ellin Silberg, Cookie Kates, and Frankee Rosser, all of Newton. The luncheon will be held at the Marriott Hotel in Newton, October 28 and will include a fashion show by Cohoes, special raffle drawings, and many boutique tables. Proceeds from this year's luncheon will be used to purchase sophisticated equipment to aid the handicapped child.

Na'amat fights to change bill

BROOKLINE — Na'amat is now fighting a proposed change in a bill that would extend the authority of the Israeli rabbinical courts. Such legislation, if passed, would prevent the civil courts from ruling on matters of food, property and child custody. It would take away the Supreme Court's power to review rabbinical court decisions and deny recognition to civil marriages and conversions not recognized by the rabbinical courts and would also extend rabbinical court jurisdiction to non-Jews.

Sending announcements

The Newton Graphic welcomes announcements of anniversaries, births, engagements and weddings along with black-and-white or good contrast color photographs. There is no charge for printing an announcement.

Jewels & Gems
BY CAROL
THE GOLD LADY
HYPHENATED GOLD
"Solid gold" does not necessarily mean pure, 24-karat gold. It means only that the item is 10 karats or finer and that it does not have a hollow center. The terms "gold-filled" and "gold-plated" refer to a type of "faux" gold in which a film of gold has been bonded onto some ordinary base metal. In the gold-filling process, the layer of gold must total at least one-twentieth of the total weight of metal in the piece. In gold-plating, the quantity of gold may fall below that amount. The term "vermiel" also indicates a bonding process. However, with vermeil, the metal under the gold is nothing less than sterling silver.
For "pure" beauty in jewelry come see the creative displays at CAROL "THE GOLD LADY". We have what you want in fine gold pieces in chains, rings, earrings and bracelets. Many people are remounting their wedding and engagement rings and we can design the perfect setting for you. Artists win state foundation awards

Stephanie Simon
Correspondent

NEWTON — Three local artists have each won $500 awards from the Massachusetts Fellowship Program of the Artists Foundation. William Choi and Paul Quain were both finalists in the photography competition, and Hisham Ashkouri was a finalist in the "Design and the Built Environment" category.

Choi describes his winning entries as "contemporary portraits of everyday people." The black and white photographs are narrative, says Choi, and they capture contemporary moments while evoking "timeless themes." He adds that the photographs are "similar to Renaissance paintings" in that they depict people and landscapes at the same time, and they tell "some sort of a story."

A photograph typical of Choi's work depicts a man and a woman standing outside a modern office building. The people, standing on either side of a tree, are dressed in contemporary styles. But, says Choi, "anyone who is familiar with the story will recognize the scene as Adam and Eve."

Quain's photographs are also symbolic; the meaning of his photos often transcends the scene which they may depict. Quain describes his award-winning photographs as "anima-like," a reference to psychiatrist Carl Jung's ideas. "Most of my photographs have a feeling of intimacy with the subject," says Quain.

While Choi applies for grants regularly to support himself through photography, Quain treats photography as "a serious hobby." Quain teaches high school science and is now writing, with his wife, a book comprised of interviews and photographs he took in his homeland, Ireland.

For the "Design and the Built Environment" category, architect Hirsham Ashkouri entered his design of a large park/playground for handicapped children. According to Ashkouri, the park allows handicapped children a certain amount of independence, as they can manipulate the equipment themselves and play at an equal level with able-bodied children.

Ashkouri's design for the park won a competition in 1977; following this honor, he entered and won a competition to secure a contract to build the park. Completed in 1982, the park now stands in New York.

"I'm delighted that architecture is included and thought of as art," says Ashkouri about the Artists Foundation Competition. "Architects have to try to maintain the thought that their buildings are works of art as well as functional."

The Fellowship Program awarded 45 Finalist Awards of $500 each and 36 Fellowship Awards of $7,500 each in the second round of its 1986 competition. Funding is provided by the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities.

NEWTON — Beginning July 18, The Mall at Chestnut Hill will play host to an award-winning collection of photographs from the archives of The Boston Herald. Entitled "Moments of Boston," the exhibit will be on display until August 1.

The 18 photographs, which make up the exhibit, were taken by Boston Herald photographers on assignment, or on the spot. They range from heartwarming human interest shots to sports action shots, and include pictures which illustrate the top news stories of years past. Each photo won recognition from local and/or national judges for their timeliness and excellence. One shot, taken during the Blizzard of 1978, won a Pulitzer Prize.

All of the photographs have been enlarged to show detail, and are mounted for easy viewing on display screens in The Mall's garden area.

Children's summer camp at Hale Reservation

NEWTON — A unique summer day camping experience is now underway for children of the west suburban communities through the Day Camp program of the Newton Community Service Centers, Inc. held at the R.S. Hale Reservation in Westwood.

Whether it be swimming, boating, fishing, athletics, crafts, hiking, or a variety of other group activities, all await children ages 6-12 at the NCSC Inc. daily program.

The program is designed to provide a happy place for children to be themselves; where stimulating material and equipment are available to facilitate the mastery of new skills; where there is time to make friends; and where there are experiences to challenge one's own skills at one's own pace. In the program, each child is provided with experiences that promote skill and talent development while enhancing feelings of trust in one's self and others.

The program is a comprehensive one, including swimming (instruction and free swim), arts & crafts, hikes, sports, boating, games, archery, etc. In addition, other special activities will be offered, such as cookouts and camp-wide programs.

Some youngsters will want to be involved in a special confidence-building "ropes course" which is aimed at improving coordination and agility while facilitating group involvement.

The private camp site, located at Hale Camping Reservation in Westwood, includes 30 acres of tree-covered land, swimming facilities, cookout accommodations, and 1,200 acres of long, winding nature trails.

For application or additional information, call 969-5906 Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Future shoppers will measure sweetness

By Earl Aronson
AP Newsfeatures

A light meter some day may be used in supermarkets to help shoppers measure sweetness of onions, other vegetables and fruits.

"After a lot of attempts, we found that by using near infrared radiation and special filters we could get the instrument to measure dry matter, which is related to sweetness in onions," said chemist Gerald G. Dull, U.S. Department of Agriculture Research Service.

"Onion flavor is highly complex," Dull said, "involving sulfur compounds as well as several sugars. Yet, without cutting into an onion, we are able to tell with 95 percent accuracy how much carbohydrates or sugars it contains."

Dull and engineer Gerald S. Birth, working on the onion meter at Athens, Ga., since 1973, want to rely on an instrument, rather than taste and sight, to analyze vegetables and fruits. The technology is spectrophotometry.

"A portable meter in a supermarket could possibly analyze the chemical makeup of fruits and vegetables to find out just what carbohydrates, carotene, and other nutrients they contain — like labels on canned and frozen foods," Dull said.

Carotene, a good indicator of maturity, can be measured inside papayas, Dull said, using a meter model being tested in Hawaii. If the carotene level is high, then the fruit is likely to be sweet.

Dull said meters like that used for papayas could help in timing harvesting and shipping fruits and vegetables of high quality.

Unlike the papaya meter which uses visible light to measure pigments — the internal yellow and green in the fruit — the onion meter uses near infrared wavelengths, since sugar has no color.

The onion meter now is available commercially. Two devices on it measure light coming out of the onion for computer analysis.

The meter could screen vast numbers of onions quickly so plant breeders could select and develop sweeter varieties. Packers would know which onions to market immediately and which have a long shelf life.

A few days difference in flowering can cause a whole range of environmental differences in fruits and vegetables, Dull said. "No two fruits — even from the same limb — will have the same sweetness. Some fruits and vegetables are picked when they are too green, which can also influence sweetness. For example, once picked, peaches will not increase in sweetness one bit."

Dull and Birth are working on a meter to measure cantaloupe sweetness. Potatoes are next.

Sumac Potential — The sumac tree which lends its autumn red to brighten the landscape, could be the next raw material for plastics, resins and other substances, a U.S. Department of Agriculture scientist says.

Agronomist T. Austin Campbell says the "milky" sap of smooth sumac, Rhus glabra, contains valuable oils, hydrocarbons, and polyphenol compounds. Campbell, of the Agricultural Research Service, is studying sumac and other plants as potential new crops.

Your home has a past

By Country Home a Meredith Magazine

Where there's a will, there's a way to discover who built your house, who lived there, how well they lived, and how they altered the place.

Using records found in many public libraries, city halls, and local historical societies, you can do some amateur sleuthing to create a family record, aid an accurate restoration, or simply satisfy your curiosity.

Country Home suggests, first look at the house itself; it's littered with clues. You can estimate the age of a building from the style of the main wing and additions, or come up with more precise readings on construction dates based on nails, screws, door hinges, and moldings. An architectural historian "can take one look at a beam and save you years of research," says Marilyn Burke, a house-museum curator who has spent years researching her family's 18th-century town house in Alexandra, Va.

Searching for your house's character can take a few hours or a sizable chunk of your life, depending on how deeply you want to dig into the lives of former residents, their relatives, tenants, and descendants, says historic preservation expert Michael Leccese. Leccese is coeditor of Preservation News and frequently writes about architecture and historic preservation.

Hiring a historian can help. "You might have to invest $50 to learn how to research properly," says Emily Eig of Traceries, a Washington consulting firm that specializes in historic-house research. But that outlay will make the task simpler and the results more accurate, Eig says.

It's also worthwhile to compare notes with a local expert who can place your findings under the light of the area' historical records.

Finding a former resident can also be a research bonanza. When Bob Domnitz of Lexington, Mass., asked about his 1887 house at the local historical society, he learned that the son of the builder was still living in Vermont. Domnitz contacted the 96-year-old son, who said his father, a Boston financier, was an amateur photographer and very fond of his new house.

The son sent Domnitz prints made from his father's daguerreotypes and told him stories about the neighborhood as it was 80 or 90 years ago.

House historians stress that you need more than one source of information. Thorough, balanced research is needed to cancel out the misleading clues, faulty memories, and local legends that can cloud the truth.

"You need a systematic approach," says T. Michael Miller, an Alexandria historian. "Start developing the chain of title so you can get names. Then go to the courthouse, where you can begin to do what I call fleshing out the personality of the house."

Miller worked with Marilyn Burke to find the names of 21 former owners and many more residents of her Alexandria town house. Together, the duo scoured years of newspaper and photograph files, estate inventories, tax and census records, government archives, even letters from a homesick sea captain, to gradually piece together the colorful saga of the house.

Burke found that past residents included three bank presidents, a German family with 13 children, Italian immigrants, a Scottish physician, and a Connecticut Yankee who lived there during the Civil War. She's delved into the lives of the owners' children and servants, and with her husband, a banker who enjoys all this research from the sidelines, she's entertained former residents from as far away as Arizona.

How to control home air pollution

By Better Homes and Gardens
A Meredith Magazine

It's easy to spot air pollution when it hangs in foul clouds over our cities. It's much more difficult, however, to notice poor air quality when it invades our homes.

As we make our living spaces more airtight and energy efficient, we reduce the inward flow of fresh air and increase the length of time of indoor pollutants, such as smoke and fumes, can hang in the air, reports Better Homes and Gardens Home Plan Ideas.

Many of the products that make our lives easy and enjoyable contribute to the deterioration of indoor air quality. The culprits can be fireplaces, carpeting and upholstery that emit formaldehyde fumes, gas appliances that release carbon monoxide into the air, and chemicals given off by household cleaning agents.

Although indoor pollution can make you sick, symptoms such as headache, dizziness, and nausea are so vague and so similar to those caused by other health problems that it's difficult to pinpoint the cause. In general, if you find that ventilation alleviates or eliminates your symptoms, it's likely something in your home's air is adversely affecting you.

The first step in controlling indoor air pollution is a matter of eliminating the most obvious causes. Some changes are simple and low cost; some are costly and complicated. Still other solutions involve revisions in personal behavior. The following list gives you some options for improving the air quality in your home.

— Make sure your gas range is equipped with a hood fan that vents pollutants to the outside.

— Check the tip of your gas range burner flame. Have it adjusted to burn blue instead of yellow or orange.

— Don't ever try to heat your home with your gas oven.

— When purchasing a new gas range, select one with spark ignition rather than pilot lights. Convert older appliances to spark ignition if possible.

— Most gas utility companies recommend a yearly furnace inspection, usually in the fall. Some inspectors check the gas water heater at the same time.

— Stoves and heaters must be vented to the outside. Check to make sure vents are crack free and unclogged.

— Open the fireplace damper before lighting a fire and keep it open until the ashes cool. If you have fireplace doors, make sure they seal tightly to prevent smoke from backing up into your home.

— If you use an unvented kerosene heater, you should burn a low-sulfur fuel, fill the heater outside, and keep it clean and properly adjusted. Never use the heater in a closed room or while everyone is asleep.

— Home Plan Ideas Editors also suggest:

— You can reduce formaldehyde gas by increasing ventilation, by using an air cleaner or heat exchanger, and by covering up sources of the gas, such as particleboard and plywood paneling with coatings and sealers.

— Check with your state or local health department about levels of radon gas in your area. If levels are high, call in an environmental professional to test radon levels.

— Rather than removing exposed asbestos, cover it with plastic sheeting and duct tape to provide an airtight seal. If the asbestos is flaking, hire a professional to solve the problem.

— Clean air conditioners, humidifiers, and dehumidifers regularly to reduce the dust and fungi levels in the air.

— Reduce the amount of cigarette smoking. If someone in your family smokes, refresh the air with an electronic air cleaner or exhaust fan.

— Never leave a car or mower engine running in an attached shed or garage.

— Be sure to read directions and provide adequate ventilation when using home cleaning products, personal care products or hobby supplies. Tighten lids securely before storing and discard any leaky containers.

Stainless-steel screws are best fasteners

By Wood
A Meredith Magazine

After talking with fastener manufacturers, professional woodworkers, and the "always-has-the-answer" man at the hardware store, you may be in for a surprise, according to "Wood" magazine.

Steel screws represent the least expensive and most common type available. They're strong but rust without protection. That's why steel screws normally have a shiny plating of cadium or zinc chromate. Unplated screws start with a blue hue, but eventually oxidize to rust-brown.

When you need high strength plus corrosion resistance, opt for stainless-steel screws. You might have to special order them (your hardware store can do that), as well as pay double the price, but they'll hold up in outdoor furniture and high-humidity situations.

Steel case-hardened screws, originally developed for the manufacture of particleboard products, prove exceptionally tough because they've been heat-tempered. Case-hardened screws have a dull, flat-black finish and a skinny shank. They're used most often with a power screwdriver for driving into hardwood and particleboard. For projects exposed to the weather, you'll want them galvanized or plated.

With case-hardened screws, you can choose from two thread styles. Double-leads, or "hi-lo," have twin threads and work well in hardwoods. One-thread, single-lead styles are best for softwoods and particleboard because they hold.

Brass screws can add a handsome accent when exposed, match hardware, or to endure the elements. But, they're not as strong as steel and may twist off if you drive them into too small a pilot hole. Their slots will also wear if you use them in a situation where they'll be removed and reinstalled often. However, in projects calling for oak, which contains a tannic acid that reacts with ferrous metal, woodworkers normally choose brass to avoid unsightly staining.

Aluminum screws corrode quickly on contact with dissimilar metals and twist off more easily than brass if you apply too much muscle. So, they're an unlikely choice for woodworking, except when your project demands aluminum hardware.

Screw lengths begin at ¼ inch and reach 4 inches or longer, though you'll probably stay in the middle range in your home woodworking. To cover all possible applications, each length comes in three or more diameters. As a rule, the smaller the gauge of the screws, the thinner the wood you should use it in.

Choose flathead screws for general assembly, where you will countersink or counterbore the screw before covering with putty or plugs. When a flush surface isn't important, or when you want a decorative effect, roundhead screws fill the bill.

You use oval-head screws primarily to install hardware, such as cabinet hinges, because their shape matches the machined hole snugly.

Besides differing head styles, screws also come in choices of drive slots to match your tools.

The straight-slot fastens with a standard-tip or cabinetmaker's screwdriver mated to the width and thickness of the slot. This insures positive drive.

The downside of video cameras

By Paul Turner
Scripps Howard News Service

Passing out all those home video camera units last Christmas has had an unexpected side effect. It stems from such gadgets' ability to record voices as well as visual images.

For the first time, countless Americans are hearing — really hearing — the sound of their own laughter. It can be a frightening experience.

There is nothing quite like learning that your laugh makes you sound like an escapee from a padded cell or someone who just rode into town on a load of melons. And that is precisely what is happening across the country.

It is probably safe to say most of us imagine our laughter to be pleasant and good-natured. Some might even suppose the tone and cadence of our giggles and chuckles provide flattering hints about our personalities.

I've got news. It ain't always so.

Home video units are revealing the truth about laughing — a lot of it feels better than it sounds.

Nit-picking? Maybe.

But you do not have to be excruciatingly self-conscious to recoil from hearing yourself emit nearly glass-shattering shrieks. Nor do you need to be overly sensitive to wince at the sound of your own laughter if it is a hiccup-like noise suggesting the opposite of intelligence or sophistication.

Perhaps some people are uninhibited by loud and clear evidence that their laughter is less than music to the ears. Still, plenty of others cringe when they hear themselves.

For more than a few of us, realizing one's laugh resembles the yelps of a wounded animal can be like discovering that you have been celebrating the wrong birthday all these years.

Friends or relatives are visiting someone who found a portable TV camera under the tree last December. In the middle of dinner or at some other equally inopportune time, Mr. or Ms. Video hauls out the expensive toy and zeroes in on people eating mashed potatoes or trying to duck out of sight.

This is usually more of an annoyance than a source of amusement. But if it goes on long enough, there is a good chance one of the victims will say something funny about these '80s-style talking home movies. Everyone will laugh.

Eventually the person operating the camera tires or runs out of tape. "OK, let's play it back," he'll say.

Then, after the device has been hooked up to a television, the group gathers to watch footage of one another eating mashed potatoes or trying to duck out of sight.

The first part of these soundtracks tends to feature a lot of "Bob, Put that away," "Give me a break," "Not now, Susan" or "No, no, don't point it at me — I'm a mess!"

Sooner or later the tape reaches the point where the folks on the TV screen are yukking it up. Amusing? Not if watching yourself conjures up visions of a lobotomized hyena.

Of course, you probably would be the only one who noticed. Your friends and family have heard you howl before. And they still like you, right?

So if your own videotaped guffaws catch you off guard, there is only one thing to do.

Laugh it off.

Active in Newton community groups

NEWTON — A memorial service for Annie May (Williams) Langill, 92, of Newton, who died July 9 in the Newton Convalescent Home, will be held Saturday at 11:30 a.m. in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, 1135 Walnut St., Newton Highlands.

Born in Aiken County, S. C., she grew up and attended school in Aiken and also attended Winthrop College in Rock Hill, S. C. She later moved to Newton, where she had lived for over 40 years.

She was a member of St. John's Episcopal Church at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, both of Newton, the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR), the Massachusetts Ex-Regents of the DAR Club, the Massachusetts State DAR, the Lydia Partridge Whiting Chapter of the National DAR, the Palestine Lodge 114, Order of the Eastern Star, Oppela Temple No. 50, Daughters of the Nile, the Sumner P. Lawrence Rebekah Lodge 177, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Newtonville Women's Club, the Newton Highlands Women's Club, the Newton Book Club, the Newton-Wellesley Hospital Aid Association and for many years she was a volunteer for the Newton Chapter of the Red Cross.

The wife of the late Ross E. Langill, she leaves her sons, Robert Daniels of Brookfield, N. H. and Richard W. Daniels of Newton; her grandsons, Robert M. Daniels of Bangor, Me., Peter K. Daniels of Southboro, Richard F. Daniels and David M. Daniels of Portland, Me.; her great-grandchildren, Peter C. and Christopher K. Daniels.

Donald E. Blakely Sr., 61

NEWTON — Donald E. Blakely Sr., 61, died suddenly July 1 in Portland, Me., where he was vacationing.

Mr. Blakely was born in Kentucky, and had lived in Newton since 1948.

He was a retired conductor with the Boston and Maine Railroad. He was a member of the Brotherhood Railroad Trainmen, the American Legion Post 440, the Brighton Elks and the Masonic Isaac Parker Lodge of Waltham.

He was a U.S. Navy veteran of World War II.

He is survived by his wife, Ann T. (Corsetti); two sons, Donald E. Blakely Jr. and Thomas R. Blakely, both of West Newton; two daughters, Susan J. Niland of West Newton and Deborah M. Blakely of Hollywood, Fla.; a brother, Norman Blakely of Kentucky; a grandson, Donald E. Blakely III and several nieces and nephews.

Funeral services were held on Saturday at 8 a.m. from the Andrew J. Magni Funeral Home, 365 Watertown St., Newton followed by a Funeral Mass in St. Jean's Church, Newton, at 9.

Interment was in Calvary Cemetery, Waltham.

Shepard Herman, 80

Sculptor, inventor and storyteller

NEWTON — A funeral service was held Thursday morning in the Levine Chapel, Brookline, for Shepard Herman, 80, of Newton. Burial was in Sharon Memorial Park.

Born in New Bedford, Mr. Herman was self-educated and had been a heating parts salesman and had worked in advertising and had taught art.

An inventor, who held several patents, Mr. Herman created an air-cushioned heel pad and sold the product to area podiatrists.

In May, 1970, he created a sculpture entitled "Swords into Plowshares" for the Weizmann Institute campus in Israel and at Brandeis University, he created a meditation garden in memory of his first wife, the late Eunice Herman.

Twenty-one years ago, Mr. Herman began telling stories to his first grandchild, Peter, who then brought him to school in Newton for show-and-tell. He was instantly a hit with the children and earned a nickname "Papa Shep".

Eventually he spent three days a week in the Newton school, where he played the ukelele and danced around the room with the children and told stories, including the adventures of Ishkabible, a character based on a Yiddish comic book character of the 1920s.

He leaves his wife, Esther (Osborne) Herman; his sons, Robert of California, Richard of New Hampshire; his stepchildren, Stephen and Paul Osborne and Fredda Gordon; his brothers and his sister, Sol, Iser and Louis Herman, Esther Zaff and 12 grandchildren.

Marion (Levin) Pike, 85

Active in library work, volunteer groups

NEWTON — A funeral service was held Sunday afternoon in the Levine Chapel, Brookline, for Marion (Levin) Pike, 85, of Newton, who had been active in library work and volunteer organizations.

Born in Russia, she was a graduate of Boston University and earned her master's degree from Simmons College.

A correspondent for many years with the old Boston Sunday Advertiser, she also had been a pioneer in setting up mobile libraries for wounded veterans in Boston-area Veterans Administration hospitals and had earned an award from Lady Bird Johnson for her work.

An active hospital volunteer for the Red Cross for many years, Mrs. Pike was a member of the Beth Israel Hospital Auxiliary and the Jewish Memorial Hospital Auxiliary.

A member of the Boston University Alumni Association, she also was a member of Temple Emanuel, Newton, and had served on the temple's board in various capacities.

She leaves her husband, Leslie Pike; her sons, Morris of Rickville, Md., Burton of New York City and three grandchildren.

Paul Joseph Landry, 71

WALTHAM — A mass of Christian burial was celebrated Tuesday at 10 a.m. in the chapel of St. Charles Borromeo Church, Waltham, for Paul Joseph Landry, 71, of Waltham. A private interment service was held at the Veterans Administration National Cemetery, Bourne.

Mr. Landry died Friday evening at the WalthamWeston Hospital, after a brief illness.

Born in Newton, he moved to Waltham from Newton 15 years ago and was a retired sheet metal worker.

During World War II, Mr. Landy served with the Coast Guard.

The brother of the late, Louis P. Landry, he leaves his wife, Katherine (Curran) Landry; his children, Mrs. Edward (Barbara J.) Kasok, Paula Landry, Mrs. Stephen (Ellen) Londo and Michael A. Landry; his brother, Edward F. Landry and eight grandchildren.

Arrangements by Wayne F. Brasco, Brasco and Son Memorial, Waltham.

Maria Nicola Mazzola, 88

NEWTON — In Newton, the Rev. Msgr. Guido Pallotta, Rev. David Bonfiglio and Rev. John Crispo, concelebrated a Funeral Mass with celebrant Rev. William Leonard, at Our Lady Help of Christians Church for Maria N. (Deluca) Mazzolla on June 28, the 25th anniversary of her late husband Gerardo A. Mazzola's death. Among those in attendance were her 10 children, Rose Sirianni of Sancta Maria Island, Florida, Loreto P. Mazzola of Brighton, Elizabeth Lewis of Westminster, Antonette DiGiovanni of Belmont, N. Joseph Mazzola of Dedham, Mary Pallotta of Scituate, Domenic Mazzola of Belmont, Francis Mazzola of Newton, Lucy Olson of Belmont and former selectman Gerard J. Mazzola of Dedham, and her 48 grandchildren. She is also survived by 47 great-grandchildren and her sister Angela Cocuzzo of Brighton. She was born in Italy, the daughter of the late Pasquale and Maria Deluca and was the sister of the late Sarah Dellacandro, Josephine Antonelli, and Giacomino, Salvatore, Pasquale and Antonio Deluco. Music at the Mass was performed by Mrs. Kathy Dagostino. Burial was in Evergreen Cemetery, Brighton.

Sophie (Doucet) Boudreau

NEWTON — The funeral of Sophie (Doucet) Boudreau, 83, of Newton, was held Wednesday at 9:10 a.m. from the Andrew J. Magni Funeral Home, 365 Watertown St., Newton, followed by a funeral mass in St. Jean's Church, Watertown Street, Newton at 10 a.m. Interment was in Calvary Cemetery, Waltham.

Mrs. Boudreau died Saturday at the Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

Born in Nova Scotia, she had been a Newton resident for 68 years and was a member of St. Jean's Church, Newton.

The wife of the late, Theodore Boudreau, she leaves her children, Lorraine Rocha of Newton, Gerard Boudreau of Waltham, Lionel Boudreau of Framingham and Dominic of Dracut; her sister and her brothers, Helen Doucet of Newton, Louis and Joseph Doucet of Nova Scotia; 16 grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren.

Helen (Laganis) George

Taught in Newton, Needham, Westwood

NEEDHAM — A funeral service was held Saturday at 11 a.m. in St. Demetrios Greek Orthodox Church, 30 Brown St., Weston, for Helen (Laganis) George of Needham. Burial was in West Lawn Cemetery, Lowell.

Mrs. George died last Wednesday at Glover Memorial Hospital, after a long illness.

Born in Dracut, she had lived in Needham for the past 30 years.

She attended Dracut schools and was a graduate of Dracut High School with high honors.

Mrs. George earned her BS degree in education, with high honors, from State Teachers College, Lowell, and her masters degree from Boston University, where she was inducted into Pi Lambda Theta Chapter of Omnichron Pi National Honor Society. She later studied at Lesley, Emmanuel and Boston Colleges.

She taught briefly in Westwood, several years in Newton and later for many years in the Needham public schools.

A member of the National Education Association, the Massachusetts Teachers Association and the Needham Teachers Association, she also was a member of St. Demetrios Greek Orthodox Church, Weston.

Arrangements by the Eaton Funeral Home, 1351 Highland Ave., Needham.

Francis J. Callahan, 69

Retired salesman for Dowd Paper Co.

AUBURNDALE — The funeral of Francis J. Callahan, 69, of Auburndale, was held Saturday at 9 a.m. from the Lyons and Hayes Funeral Home, 1479 Washington St., West Newton, followed by a funeral mass in Corpus Christi Church at 10 a.m. Interment was in Holyhood Cemetery, Brookline.

Mr. Callahan died suddenly Thursday morning at his home.

Born in Somerville, he was a graduate of Somerville High School and of Northeastern University, Classs of 1948.

Until his retirement, Mr. Callahan had been salesman with the Dowd Paper Co., Woburn, for 35 years.

A member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery of Massachusetts, Mr. Callahan served as a sergent in the Army during World War II, where he earned the American Theater and African-Mideast Theater campaign ribbons.

A member of the Boston Chapter of the Society of American Magicians, Mr. Callahan was known as "Cards Callahan" and performed magic and card tricks at clubs and private parties throughout Metropolitan Boston.

He also was a member of and an usher at Corpus Christin Church, Auburndale.

He leaves his wife, Elizabeth M. (Keefe) Callahan; his children, Elizabeth M. Callahan of Auburndale, Kevin F. of Belmont, Thomas K. of Groton, Francis J. Jr. of Wrentham, Martin J. William J. Cahill, 61

GLOUCESTER — A funeral mass was celebrated Tuesday morning in St. Ann's Church, Gloucester, for William J. Cahill, 61, of Gloucester, associate editor of the Gloucester Daily Times. Burial was in Beechbrook Cemetery, West Gloucester.

Locally Mr. Cahill leaves his sisters, Elizabeth, Margaret and Ann Cahill, all of Newton, Mary Cahill Skinnon of Sudbury. He also is survived by his wife, Bernice L. (Gibbs) Cahill; his children, William G. and Stephen J., both of Gloucester, Eileen H. O'Connor of Gloucester; his other sister, Ruth Hardcastle of Bellingham, Wash. and three grandchildren.

Born in Gloucester, he was a graduate of Gloucester High School and after serving in the Navy during World War II, he attended Holy Cross in Worcester and was a member of their NCAA championship basketball team in 1950.

Following graduation he returned to Gloucester where he taught English at Gloucester High School and also served as varsity basketball coach. He joined the Times in 1956.

Although he carried a ranking editor's title, and his name appeared on the newspaper's masthead, Mr. Cahill still devoted much of his time to reporting not only general news but also political and sports coverage.

He was associated with the Times for 30 years and had also served for a number of years as Cape Ann correspondent for the Boston Globe.

At one point during his long career with the Essex County Newspapers, which publish the Times, he served as an editor of the Beverly Times.

From time to time, Mr. Cahill would write a column based solely on the nicknames of local residents and would recall through colorful anecdotes how each person gained theirs.

He also attended state and national political conventions to produce "local angle" stories.

Paul Salter, 89

President of Salter & Sons and Salter Mills

SWAMPSCOTT — A funeral service was held Thursday morning in the J. S. Waterman and Sons Funeral Home for Paul Salter, 89, who had owned and was president of Salter & Sons and Salter Mills in Saugus, two textile firms he had purchased from his family in 1935. Relationships for custodial parents pose many problems

Dear Ray:

I have been divorced for a year and was separated for two years before that. My children, Donna, 5 and Brad, 9, live with me. In getting back into the singles' world, I have had several brief affairs. These caused no problem, and I look at them as growing experiences. Now I'm involvd in a serious relationship. Dick is someone who I care for a great deal and the feelings are returned. However, we have a major area of conflict.

When Dick stays overnight, I still have him leave early in the morning before the children awaken. I realize that imposes a hardship on Dick. He has to get up in the middle of the night and then return to his apartment. And, sometimes he is unable to get back to sleep and goes in to work the next day after just having a few hours sleep overall. On the other hand, I feel that if he stays the whole night and the children find him in bed with me that this will give the children the wrong impression of their mother. The issue of morality is one that troubles me, and I feel would cause trouble for the children.

Everything else in our relationship seems to be going along just fine. This one particular issue may be severe enough that it could cause an end to our relationship. I'm unsure just how to handle it or if I should make some changes. R. C. Newton

Dear R.C.:

Your dilemma is not an uncommon one. Many single parents spend a great deal of time wrestling with the same or similar circumstances. Although the issue of children is interjected as a causitive factor, the real issue may rest with you.

What is the source of your guilt? Is it your considered belief that a loving relationship that includes sex is wrong or somehow immoral? Or is it a reflection of what your parents may have believed or what "society" may or may not approve? If you consider your actions as immoral you are destined to be plagued with guilt by extension, you also consider Dick an immoral person because you disapprove of his belief that a complete relationship is moral. Therefore, I could ask why you are doing something wrong and relating to a man who you believe is immoral?

Many therapists agree that the best parents are those who are happy and content. If being with Dick provides you with joy and contentment then your relationship with him will probably be a positive influence on your children. If, on the other hand, your relationship produces endless conflict and moral discomfort for you, then maybe you should end the relationship and resign yourself to secretive affairs.

This latter decision will not necessarily have the most positive influence on your children. Again, children need role models to help shape their lives. If children never experience the role model of two adults conducting a healthy, complete relationship which involves man's aspects of interaction, how will they ever learn what a relationship is all about?

I get the impression that Dick is a decent guy and someone who you respect as a person. It would seem that allowing your children to get to know him as a person would be a positive influence. Further, if your children become accustomed to Dick being in your life and their lives, his being around in the morning will be accepted as quite natural. Although the opinions of neighbors cannot be totally ignored, adulthood requires the making of autonomous decisions. Chances are that what your children will have to say to Dick after he has stayed overnight is, "Good morning. What's for breakfast?"

Meter maid retires after 26 years on police force

NEWTON — Mary Elizabeth Grenier, Newton police traffic supervisor since 1960 and a parking control officer since 1966, retired June 30, 1986.

Mrs. Grenier known to all as Bette came from a service-oriented family, her father is the late Detective Charles C. Feeley and her brother the recently retired, lieutenant Charles E. Feeley of the Newton Police Community Service Bureau. In addition to her father and brother, an uncle was a police sergeant with Newton and five cousins are in police service.

Mrs. Grenier has served at the Hyde, Beethoven (Zervis), Cabot, and Carr Schools and had supervised over a million crossings at these various schools.

In 1966 Captain Thomas Dargan convinced her she should accept an appointment as a traffic control officer (meter maid) and in the intervening years her "ticket issued to violators" production realized over $400,000 to the City coffers.

Mrs. Grenier stated that she wasn't tagging cars at meters for the City Treasury, but to free up meters for other neighbors to have convenient shopping spaces.

Over the years she discovered most violators would complain about the tickets, but it became apparent that they were more upset at themselves than the law or the Meter Maid. However, there were some that were just unreasonable and not at all nice in the way they expressed themselves.

In leaving she said she would miss the association with the members of the Police Force, the traffic supervisors, and the public but that each winter seems to be just a little bit colder on her Traffic Post.

Mrs. Grenier was born and raised in Newton, attended Newton Schools, and when she entered service with the Police Department she was the widow of Michael R. Lally and the children at their various posts knew her as Mrs. Lally. When she remarried the late Henry Grenier it was confusing to her charges at her crossing post so for two years her children continued to call her Mrs. Lally until she introduced herself as Mrs. Grenier to the first and second graders.

She has three grown children, Elizabeth Anne Lupo of Needham, Michael R. Lally of Stoughton, and Faith Lally of Amherst.

Take the law to heart.
Buckle up Massachusetts!

Joe Spagnuolo at signing with mom Julie, brother John, scout Buzz Bowers and Dick Teed.

Ball player hits big times with Dodgers

By Roy LeBlanc
Staff Writer

NEWTON — It used to be every major league scout could tell tales of the pitcher he discovered throwing rocks at squirrels out behind the family barn. "Beating the bushes" was more than just an outdated phrase; it was a scout's life.

With the organization, computerization and communication involved in modern-day scouting, it's hard to believe that stories like that can come true anymore.

They can, and do. In fact, it can even happen within 10 miles of Fenway Park, as Joe Spagnuolo found out this week.

Undrafted and virtually ignored by major league scouts, Spagnuolo happened to be in the right place at the right time on Sunday, and by Wednesday, the Newton resident was a member of the Los Angeles Dodgers system.

"I didn't even know I was eligible," said the shortstop, ticketed for Great Falls, Montana, in the rookie Pioneer League.

Apparently, neither did the scouts.

"I can't believe he wasn't drafted," said Dodger scouting supervisor Dick Teed. "He was only a sophomore, so we didn't think he was 21."

The confusion arose from the draft rules. A player is eligible when he graduates from high school, but if he goes to college he can't be drafted until he's either a junior or 21 years old. Spagnuolo just completed his sophomore year at St. Leo College in Florida, but turned 21 in April, unbeknownst to any of the scouts who watched him play in the spring.

So it was a complete accident, or rather a series of happy circumstances, that brought Teed and Spagnuolo together on Sunday. Newton's Post 440 Stan Musial team was on the road for a doubleheader against the Worcester Ronnies. On the mound for the home club was a left-hander named Kevin Shea.

Shea had been recommended to Teed by Wayland High Athletic Director Buzz Bowers, a long-time bird dog for the club. Bowers was aware of Spagnuolo's talents as well, but even he didn't realize the significant birthday which had just passed.

As Teed told the story: "The first batter up hit a slider about 380 feet and I said to Buzz 'look at him run.' I figured we better have him fill out a card so we could keep an eye on him and that's when we found out his age."

By Monday the scout had Spagnuolo out running sprints and throwing from both the infield and outfield, and by Wednesday the Newton South grad was signing on the dotted line.

Tuesday? Oh yes, Tuesday Teed was busy signing Shea, in baseball's version of a two-for-one sale.

For those who don't believe in fate, that last coincidence might have been the final straw which would convince anyone.

"It turned out lucky this year," said Spagnuolo in an understatement. "I had a tryout with Falmouth of the Cape Cod League but my car broke down on the way home from school and I missed the tryout. Who knows what would have happened?"

> 'I was at the right spot at the right time. He has an outstanding arm and speed, which are two things we look for. Both are better than major league right now.'
> — Dick Teed

Add to that the fact that Newton almost didn't have a Stan Musial team, and the story becomes more and more remarkable. The Fox Hill Road resident was all set to play for Waltham's Four Season Sports until Newton came up with a team just a couple of weeks before the season started.

But then again, if Teed is right, it would simply have been a matter of time before somebody found Spagnuolo. He was just lucky enough to get there first.

"I was at the right spot at the right time," the scout said. "He has an outstanding arm and speed, which are two things we look for. Both are better than major league right now."

Teed, who spent 17 years with the Phillies and inked such major leaguers as Dick Noles, Jim Morrison and Julio Franco, called Spagnuolo "the best player I've seen in a long time. ... He loves the game. He's a winner. His desire is unbelievable."

That combination enabled Spagnuolo to hit better than .300 in both his college seasons, and he added 35 stolen bases as a sophomore, playing both shortstop and center field.

Once he gets to Great Falls, however, both Spagnuolo and the Dodgers agree that shortstop is where he'll stay.

"I'll play anywhere," said Spagnuolo, "but I hope they put me at short. I definitely want to play there."

"He's just learning to play short," Teed said. "He has to get the finer points down, but he has the range and the arm. We're hoping he does well enough to go to the Instructional League in the fall."

Though Spagnuolo said "this is something I've always wanted to do," he knows there is more to life than just baseball. As eager as he was to sign, his contract includes a provision for continued tuition payments as well as his bonus.

"It's important that I go back to school," he said.

The degree will come eventually, but right now Spagnuolo is hoping his studies this fall involve baserunning and turning the double play rather than English literature and history.

Meetings set for La Leche

NEWTON — The Newton Morning La Leche League invites nursing mothers to its series of four informal meetings based on the manual "The Womanly Art of Breastfeeding."

The group leaders are experienced nursing mothers accredited by La Leche League International, the world's oldest and largest breastfeeding support group. Babies are always welcome. Meetings are followed by refreshments.

Our group has a full lending library of books on childbirth, infant care, and breastfeeding, as well as many books for sale. Leaders are available for telephone help at any time. Membership in La Leche League is $20 per year.

Dues pay for a subscription to the bi-monthly New Beginnings and enable the League to provide information and to help many mothers in the community. The group receives no outside funding and is wholly dependent upon dues and contributions. Both are tax deductible.

Meeting topics include, "The Benefits of Human Milk," "Becoming a Mother — Changes, Adjustments, and Needs," "Breastfeeding: Facts and Fallacies," "Breastfeeding and Beyond."

Newton Morning group leaders: Nina Keenan, 527-6340, Ce-Ce Fins 965-3498, Leslie Ostrow, 965-5321.

Morning group meeting schedule is as follows: August 6, 10:15; September 10, Leslie Ostrow's house; October 8, 1724 Beacon, Waban, 965-5321, 9:30 a.m.

If weather is questionable, call a morning group leader.

Please join the group for coffee to help plan the fall series of meetings on Monday, September 29, at 10 a.m. at Nina Keenan's house (20 Lowell Ave., Newtonville). Call Nina for specifics.

The evening Newton La Leche League meets the third Wednesday evening of each month. Please call 244-0547 for more information.

Volunteer opportunities

Interfaith Counseling Service, West Newton, requests fundraising and poster distribution assistance. For information, please call Christina Oliver, for the former opportunity, or Dot Norcross, at 332-3856.

Newton Community Service Center is seeking volunteers for the Parent Aide Program. Volunteers are individuals from the community who provide support to parents on an individual basis. Training, supportive supervision and reimbursement are provided by the NCSC staff. Please contact Kitty Ewart or Ronnie Werner at 969-5906.

Warmlines is a volunteer, nonprofit referral and information center for parents. We help parents with parenting. We are looking for volunteer office workers, social workers, program development, public relations, computers, and newsletter. Keep in contact with what's happening in your community. Use existing skills and develop new ones. Call 244-6843.

West Suburban Elder Services, Inc. is in need of persons who are willing to share their talents (music, theater, art, crafts, etc.) with senior citizens at their senior nutrition sites in Brookline, Needham, Newton, Waltham, Watertown, Wellesley, and Weston. Entertainment would be enjoyed at these sites during lunch time on Monday through Friday, also on Saturday in Watertown, on Sunday in Needham and Waltham, and on Thursday evening in Newton. If you have a talent to share, call Karyn Nystedt or Kim Schwartz at 926-4100.

Jewish Family and Children's Service needs volunteers for a telephone information and referral service. Volunteers will help people connect with resources within the Greater Boston Jewish Community. The Jewish Community Information Service operates on Monday, Thursday and Friday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. from 31 New Chardon St., Boston. For more information, call Nancy Bloom at 566-5716.

New England Baptist Hospital is recruiting volunteers to take the book cart to all patients at the hospital. Library skills are not required, though volunteers should have the desire to reach out to others. For additional information, contact Ruth Abrams at 739-5800, ext. 5173.

Newton Free Library needs volunteers, especially typists, for the main library, the junior library and to deliver books to Newton residents who are unable to leave their homes. Call 552-7145 for more information.

Region West, Inc., a family counseling service and mental health clinic serving Newton, Wellesley, Waltham and six other suburban communities is beginning its 15th annual drive to recruit new volunteers for its highly successful Parent-Child Home Program. Parent-Child Home Program volunteers spend four to six hours a week working with two and three-year-old children from low-income families. Volunteers also work toward improving and enhancing the parent-child relationship. Call Ronni McMillan, LICSW, at 965-6200.

Newton-Brookline Office of Consumer Affairs, located in Newton City Hall, seeks volunteers interested in consumer mediation and available a minimum of three hours for two days a week to work in a local mediation program. Training will be provided. Call Mim Cole or Judy Zohn, 552-7205.

Hospice of the Good Shepherd, Inc. of Newton is seeking volunteer fundraisers to work as part of our hospice team to develop, plan, publicize and implement fundraising projects. For more information, call 969-6130.

Newton Community Schools is looking for people interested in sharing a skill or talent with others, whether it be decorating a room, learning a language or changing a tire. Here's an opportunity to teach kids, adults or people with special needs. Newton Community Schools needs you, so call the office at 552-7117 for more information.

West Suburban Elder Services seeks volunteer companions to visit homebound elders. Persons interested in volunteering as companions to elders may visit one or two clients during the work week. Orientation and supervision are provided. Volunteers can arrange convenient visiting schedules. Call Kim Schwartz or Bernie Connaughton at 926-4100.

Enjoy the rocky road

By Richard Harris

Trail Ridge Road in Colorado's Rocky Mountain National Park is the highest continuous paved auto road in America. It climbs to an altitude of more than 12,000 feet above sea level and traverses remote arcticlike tundra country too high for trees to grow, where mountain sheep graze and snowbanks never melt. It's an unlikely place, one would think, to encounter a traffic jam.

Yet that's exactly what visitors to the park will find during the peak tourist season. The tourist crowds there — or, for that matter, in Yellowstone, the Grand Canyon, Yosemite or any of a dozen other famous Western "wilderness" destinations — have become as dense as those at Disneyland.

That accounts for the growing popularity of a different kind of outdoor vacation park — one where you don't have to wait in line to get away from it all. This year, many families are choosing to head for places like Canyonlands National Park in Utah, Chaco Canyon National Cultural-Historical Area in New Mexico, the ghost towns of Colorado's remote San Juan Mountains or the endless bad roads of Baja California, to mention just a few.

The reason these places aren't crowded is simple: The roads aren't paved. If you try to visit these places in a subcompact economy car, you're likely to demolish your shock absorbers or snap a steering tie-rod. In a bigger, heavier car you may "bottom out" on a bump and bash a hole in the car's oil pan or gas tank. Any of these misadventures will leave you on the roadside trying to hitchhike 40 miles to the nearest phone so that you can call AAA to come tow your car the 100 miles to the nearest repair garage.

That's why a high percentage of new vehicles sold in Western states are four-wheel-drive. Jeeps, which were designed to handle the most primitive road conditions imaginable, became available to the public soon after World War II. They were uncomfortable, difficult to drive, too slow for highway cruising and unable to go very far on a tank of gas. In 1972, International Harvester introduced the Scoot II, the first sport/utility vehicle to emphasize comfort and all-around family car capability. Within two years, each U.S. automaker introduced an equivalent four-wheel-drive vehicle.

Today you can choose from a wide range of rough-country vehicles with power steering and brakes, air conditioning, automatic transmissions and enough room for a whole family, along with luggage, camping gear and a pet or two. Or you can opt for a four-wheel-drive compact, such as those offered by Toyota or Subaru. In town or on the highway, you won't notice the difference between driving a four-wheel-drive vehicle and driving an "ordinary" passenger car.

Most new four-wheel-drive vehicles are relatively expensive, however. They're in the same price range as luxury cars. The offsetting advantage is that they hold their resale value better than most cars.

It's also possible to convert a conventional car (even though it will remain two-wheel-drive) so that it can handle rough, rocky roads easily and safely. The conversion involves installing a heavy-duty suspension system like those of pick-up trucks, raising the car 4 to 6 inches for more ground clearance, and perhaps installing a truck transmission for a lower low-gear ratio. All cars exported to Mexico and Third World countries have heavy-duty suspension as standard equipment, so conversion parts are readily available.

The best way to keep your conventional car alive on a back-country vacation is to park it when you leave the pavement. Jeep rental companies are springing up in towns near most popular four-wheel-drive recreational areas. Or (my personal choice) you can carry mountain bicycles on a trunk or rooftop rack, park and simply pedal away from the summertime tourist crowds.

Lack of car care growing problem

By William Allan
Scripps Howard News Service

Last year on a Colorado highway, a man ignored both audio and visual warnings that his car's oil was low and the engine was overheating.

"He drove the car about 50 miles and completely ruined the engine," said Harry A. Holzwasser, president of Arrow Automotive Industries, a Framingham, Mass., manufacturer of motor vehicle parts.

The incident was one of the more flagrant examples of what Holzwasser terms "motorists ignorant about their cars" that were turned up in a recent nationwide survey of mechanics. Some 91 percent of the mechanics surveyed said that fewer than half of America's motorists are knowledgeable about their cars.

A similar majority of the mechanics surveyed added that many repairs could have been prevented with proper maintenance.

With $10,000-plus automobiles, longer warranties, self-service gas stations and far more sophisticated vehicles, even routine maintenance has become a major problem, and the industry generally is attacking it on several fronts.

Chevrolet is launching a nation-wide series of car care clinics through its dealers. Three separate two-hour sessions are being offered free to anyone who shows up.

We're on the move . . .

And you could be too! If you're energetic, motivated and talented, we need you at our corporate headquarters. Initially you will work in Boston, but soon will move to newly-designed space at Bay Colony Corporate Center in Waltham. We're a diversified Fortune 250 company that offers a stimulating climate in which to work, opportunity for career growth and a strong salary and benefits package. If you are interested in any of these positions, send your resume or call the Assistant Personnel Manager at 423-6000, extension 3105.

Legal Secretary

As a member of the Corporate Law Department, you will work with two attorneys on a variety of projects. We need someone who has legal secretarial experience who can work under deadlines and juggle work assignments while dealing with international time zones. You will coordinate meetings, handle travel assignments and perform other secretarial tasks. The skills we require for this job include excellent typing and a working knowledge of word processing, preferably on the Wang or IBM PC system.

Data Processing Secretary

We need a strong self-starter to provide secretarial support in our busy Data Processing Center. You will work with four managers on a wide range of projects. Personal computer and word processing experience is required, knowledge of Lotus 1-2-3 and Multimate software will be helpful. Since this job also involves heavy phone work, your sharp people skills will be a plus.

Documents Analyst

If you are a detail oriented, organized person who loves research work, this job is for you. As a documents analyst, you will analyze and monitor a variety of documents in our Legal Contract Center. We need a person who has some work experience and light typing skills. We're also willing to train you on the personal computer.

Dr. Charlotte Yeh of Newton-Wellesley Hospital ... serious injuries down

Stats back seatbelts

By John Carpenter
Staff Writer

The Massachusetts seatbelt law has been on the books for six months now and, despite recent state figures showing a 27 percent decrease in serious injuries from automobile accidents, the argument over it is still raging.

But ask Dr. Charlotte Yeh, who patches up accident victims for a living as Emergency Room Director at Newton Wellesley Hospital, and she will tell you that the law is working.

She happily will tell you the number of late-night calls to families of dead or dying victims has decreased.

And she will tell you the number of people walking into her hospital for minor treatment, rather than being wheeled in for a last-ditch life-saving effort, has increased.

She will tell you over and over again that seatbelts save lives.

"The injuries we are seeing since the law went into effect are not as serious," she said in an interview. "I have personally taken care of a lot of people who would have been injured much worse had they not been wearing their

Jaffes' appeal denied

SJC bolsters zoning laws

By Les Orsini
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Some have viewed the case as a classic clash between family values and the lifestyle of modern, upbeat single adults.

The city was seen as a defender of tranquil, family neighborhoods against the traffic and noise produced by young people, many of whom keep long hours and lead fast-paced lives.

Leon and Shirley Jaffe, accused of having a two-family house in a single-family zone, were fighting what they called the city's unconstitutional discrimination against single people. The couple was championing an adult's right to choose whom he lives with and where.

But this was not the true scenario for the state's Supreme Judicial Court (SJC), which last week upheld the Jaffes' June 1985 conviction for zoning violations. The five justices issued a 10-page ruling that all but avoids the issue of who can live in a family zone.

"For their purpose, the Jaffes have tried to style this case as the city versus single, unrelated persons," said Asst. City Solicitor Michael Baseman. "The Law Department and the Building Department have argued this is wrong."

> 'We're not devastated.'
> Shirley Jaffe

Cambridge District Court Judge Arthur Sherman last June fined the Jaffes $12,000 for criminal zoning violations at their 58 Winthrop St. House.

Sherman said he saw a "complete lack" of communal or family-style living among the eight unrelated residents there. The house was functioning as a two-family home, he ruled.

The Jaffes took their conviction to the appeals court, but in January the SJC grabbed the case, leading to speculation it might attempt a definition of "family" that would have statewide zoning implications.

This the five SJC justices did not do.

"In this case, we need not decide the definition ... of the words 'one family' because ... eight unrelated adults who evidence 'a complete lack of communal living' ... (do) not fall within any reasonable judicial construction of the words 'one family,'" the SJC's decision said.

Baseman, who prosecuted the case, has argued all along that the issue is a technical zoning matter. It should be decided by the structure and use of 58 Winthrop St., he has said.

In the city's view, the building has two living units, one on the first floor and another on the second and third floors. Each dwelling has a kitchen, bedrooms, bath and a living room, Baseman said.

Blast threatened neighborhood

By John Carpenter and David Weber
Staff Writers

NEWTON — The cause of a midday blasting accident last week at a Route 9 construction site which propelled pieces of rock more than a half-mile is under investigation by federal, state and local officials and by the contractors involved.

The blast injured 14 men and damaged nearby buildings and parked cars.

Bill Purington, executive vice president of Maine Drilling and Blasting Co., said the cause of the accident would not be known until a full investigation is done.

Building Commissioner James W. Cameron has suspended the building permit for the site until then.

Thirteen workmen were treated for cuts and abrasions and released from Newton-Wellesley and Brigham and Women's hospitals. One man, Scott Remillard, of Kezar Falls, Maine, remained in Newton-Wellesley Hospital last night. He underwent surgery for a severely fractured elbow and was listed in stable condition.

The office and retail building being built on the site by New England Development Co. will have five floors under ground. Blasting has been going on there since January, and Purrington said there are usually two or three blasts each day. More than 270 have already been done.

Heavy 225-square-foot rubber mats are used to contain each explosion. Leonard Rudofsky, one of the developers of the property, said there is "a possibility that the blast got into a fissure in the rock and broke the cables holding down one of the mats."

Ed Wells, a safety inspector for the federal Occupational Safety Health Administration, said there "may have been some kind of void in the rock that caused it to shoot out like a rifle shot."

Most of the injuries involved only cuts and bruises. Stone rubble, much of it the size of baseballs, showered the area southeast of the site.

Windows were shattered in the Hampton Place apartment building directly across Florence Street from the site and marks from the flying rock were left on the brick wall like chalk on a blackboard.

"Everything came this way (toward Hampton Place). If the dump truck wasn't parked here, someone probably would have been killed," said one worker.

The left side of the dump truck was dented from the rock shower. Underneath the truck lay a large rock, at least one foot square in size. More than a dozen men were standing on the other side of truck when the blast occurred.

Newton Water Department worker Vito Soprano was about 150 feet from the explosion, cleaning a sewer pipe. He was cut above his left eye and right knee.

Contruction worker Michael Champagne had just finished closet work in a condo 500 yards from blast when rock cruised through.

Want median closed at Woodcliff Rd. & Rte. 9

By Maureen Azzato
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Newton Highlands residents petitioning the city and state to make the intersection of Route 9 and Woodcliff Road safer are beginning to see some action.

In a meeting last week, the Traffic Commission unanimously voted to ask the state Department of Public Works (DPW) to close the median on Route 9 at that intersection for a 45-day trial period. They are also requesting the state upgrade the traffic signals and signs, install overhead lights and consider putting in right-turn arrows on the lights facing Woodcliff Road should the intersection close permanently.

Over 900 residents signed the petition that was presented to the commission, but Traffic Engineer Roy LaMotte said the city does not have the authority to make changes on Route 9 because it is a state highway. The role of the commission, he said, is strictly advisory.

Newton Highlands residents began their safety campaign after the accident that killed neighbor and mother of four Marcia Henry at that intersection June 13. A tractor-trailer truck allegedly ran a red light on Route 9 and barreled into Henry's car, which was crossing the highway on a green light.

To avoid similar fatalities, Police Chief William F. Quinn proposed the median be permanently closed as soon as possible. But Rep. Susan Schur (D-Newton) said it is a drastic measure that will not necessarily make the intersection safer because Woodcliff Road traffic will still have to make right turns onto Route 9.

"It seems to be the most obvious and easy solution to the problem, but it won't make it safe," she said. "It will always be a major pedestrian crossing because of the MBTA station. In order to protect

51—year tradition of thanks and praises

By Andrew P. McCloy

NONANTUM — They sat on front porches and in front yards. Some watched from the sidewalks. Others observed from second story windows.

They hung Italian and American flags from chain link fences and telephone poles. They rattled the air with fireworks. They ate, drank, and talked about the old times and traditions. But, most importantly, they gave thanks.

Just as it's been done for the past 51 years, the Italian community came out in the Nonantum section of this city over the weekend for the St. Mary of Carmine Parade.

Started by eight Italian men in 1935, the parade drew more than 5,000 people, spanning three generations.

First designed as a festival celebrating St. Mary's apparition at Mt. Carmel in Israel, the parade today serves as a reminder of the great heritage bestowed upon the Italian residents of this city.

Lisa and Antonette Caira enjoyed the festivities, as generations before them have.

Prior to the Italian immigrant wave at the beginning of this century, Nonantum was an Irish community, as evidenced by the Celtic Cross on one of the churches and street names like Murphy Court and Adams Street.

During those years, the Irish worked in the textile mills that once dotted the banks of the Charles River. But, starting in 1915, the last wave of immigrants — the Italians — began moving into Nonantum.

Today, some of the old Irish families still remain, but Nonantum is primarily a close-knit Italian community.

Roger Marracco Jr., whose grandfather, Pasquale Marracco, was one of the founding fathers, carried on the family tradition last weekend as he and his friends led the parade along the three-mile route.

"It's a reminder of our heritage," Marracco said of the parade. "We are all proud of that. And today we can come out and celebrate."

Teachers agonize over 'riffing' fears

By Stephanie Simon
Correspondent

NEWTON— For two months this spring, Joe Kililea had to teach knowing that he might not be rehired.

Kililea has been working in the Newton School System for 10½ years; he now teaches social studies at Day Junior High. In addition, he coaches girls soccer and boys basketball at Newton South High.

A tenured teacher, Kililea received a notice of "intent to dismiss" in April under the Reduction in Force (RIF) program.

Richard Clark was in a similar situation in early spring. A 10-year veteran of the Newton Schools physical education department, and a coach of varsity football and lacrosse at Newton North, he was riffed for the "third or fourth" time this year.

Robert Jampol was also riffed in April. He has been an English teacher at Newton South for 5½ years, and he coaches the boys junior varsity tennis team at South.

Kililea, Clark, and Jampol are three of the 19 tenured teachers who were riffed from the Newton School System because of declining enrollment and the need to maintain the student/teacher ratio.

Only one of these 19 teachers lost his job; the rest were rehired in June as positions opened through retirement and turnover in the system. Director of Personnel Thomas O'Connor notes that the school system has had only five permanent lay-offs in eight years.

"That's a remarkable record for a school system where eight elementary schools and three junior highs have been closed in the past eight years," he says.

Nonetheless, several teachers are riffed each year and they remain uncertain about their future in the school system until June.

"Two months is a long time to be asked every day by your friends, your kids, and your wife, 'Have you heard anything?'" says Kililea, who has two children under the age of four.

"It's a way of life for me," says Jampol. "I just try to be the best teacher I know how to be, regardless of circumstances. Hopefully, that should suffice."

Although he has been "let go" five times when he was not yet tenured, being riffed is a new experience for Kililea. "I think anger is the main emotion you feel," he says.

"I felt surprise, some anger, and a little hurt," says Jampol of the first time he was riffed. Jampol has been "let go" four times and riffed twice.

While all three teachers are angry about the situation, their attitudes toward the people involved differ. Kililea's anger is directed not only at actually being riffed, but at the procedures by which decisions were made and teachers were notified.

"They (the department of personnel) should find a more humane way of telling people. You (the teacher) are swept out the door with an impersonal letter. It's not something that makes you want to push and work harder. They're taking people who have spent at least four years in the system, and showing no regard for performance or extra things. They're not treating us like human beings," he says.

Clark has a similar attitude. "I'm frustrated in trying to deal with some people in the administration," he says. "Instead of trying to smooth out the situation, they grind it in. They stick you in the back. I understand that there's no nice way of doing it, but they treat you like a piece of meat."

Jampol disagrees: "The system takes care to act decently, especially toward tenured teachers," he says. "The principal and Dr. O'Connor both spoke with me personally; the administration legitimately tried to respect my feelings. There is no way to sweeten a bitter pill."

Where Kililea finds fault with the way teachers were told about being riffed, Jampol and Clark disagree with the way in which the "rif list" was drawn up.

"I don't like the fact that because I'm not a minority I get bumped," says Clark. He claims that even if he had been teaching for more years than a minority teacher, he would get riffed first because of the union's affirmative action plan.

Clark also expressed anger because, "Even if you do extra things, it doesn't matter. It brings a bitterness to you. You ask yourself, 'Why am I doing all these extras?'"

Jampol finds fault with the seniority system itself. "I don't want to throw out seniority," he says, "but you should take competence and ability into consideration. Newton should consider lowering its student-teacher ratio to save positions for talented young teachers."

Some of the younger teachers, like Clark, have concluded that "education is a dead-end street in Newton. I am looking for other means of employment," he states.

For those who decide to continue teaching, getting riffed may "undermine what (they) do," according to Jampol.

"Even though you may be psychologically prepared, being riffed is distracting. You worry about your job, your future, your family. And a teacher has to question whether the school system appreciates his work when he keeps being riffed. He has to be insecure."

"You don't get positive feedback from the administration," adds Clark, "and the communication is very poor. They keep you guessing; they won't tell you who's in front of you or what your situation is. It's a harrowing experience."

Hot day, cool jazz

The pool on the grounds of Mt. Ida College was once again the favorite hangout for the crowds drawn to the annual Highlands Jazz Festival. Creator of the festival Mario Boccabello served comestible delights while songstress Rebecca Parris, saxophonist Stan Strickland and others wowed the crowd with their musical wizardry.

Liquor dealer seeking assistance from police

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The owner of Bay State Discount Liquors, a Newton Centre liquor store facing a temporary suspension for selling alcohol to minors, says police should enforce the law before youths enter his store.

"It's difficult when you have kids coming in here with phony IDs," Bay State owner Joel Bornstein says. "We are facing a two-and-a-half week supension, meaning thousands of dollars in lost revenue. The police should make sure the kids don't buy the alcohol instead of waiting outside for them to make a purchase.

Bornstein's store will be closed for 17 days later this year. The penalty, according to Licensing Commissioner Carleton Merrill, was for three counts of selling to a minor and will be spread out over the late summer, fall and early winter.

Bornstein appealed the commission's first decision, calling for an 18-day suspension, to the Alcohol Beverage Control Commission (ABCC). ABCC recommended Bay State shut down for two weeks, but last week Merrill stood by his earlier ruling and ordered the 17-day shutdown.

Despite Bornstein's appeal, Merrill says his commission "did the right thing."

"This decision is not excessive as far as we are concerned," he says. "We looked at ABCC decisions on complaints they brought, and what we did was consistant with that."

Bay State will be closed Aug. 18-23, Sept. 1 and 2 and and nine days in January to be determined.

Bornstein says liquor store owners are "caught between a rock and a hard place" when teenagers come into a busy store.

"They come in here knowing there will be a little confusion," he says. "The kids in question showed IDs to a clerk, but they were phony. I agree that it is wrong to sell to a minor, but they were the ones who, with premeditation, used fake IDs and I am the one who has to pay for it."

As an alternative, Bornstein says police should occassionally go into liquor stores to discourage youths from using phony IDs.

"There are detectives going around checking outside pakcage stores and restaurants," he says. "Instead of waiting outside, waiting for us to make a mistake, they should go inside, because the kids would be less likely to use fake IDs with police in the store.

Chaulk contract on hold until meeting

NEWTON — Chaulk Ambulance officials will have to wait for another Board of Aldermen vote before learning if legislators will allocate $147,000 to extend Chaulk's three-month interim contract with the city.

Last night Alderman Richard McGrath, for the second time in as many board meetings, used a parliamentary procedure to block action on the contract.

Chaulk, which has provided ambulance service to the city for the past five years, has operated under the interim contract since July 1, when the previous contract expired. Mayor Theodore Mann had offered Chaulk a new three-year deal, calling for a total subsidy of nearly $1 million. Led by McGrath, aldermen called for an investigation into the bidding procedures and as a result allocated only $140,000 of the total $287,000 subsidy for this year.

Richard Kelliher, chief administrative officer, said the delay will not endanger Chaulk's commitment to the city, which without board approval will expire Sept. 1.

"Even with the delay, we can still settle this within the time frame of the interim contract," he said. "This should not effect our agreement."

McGrath introduced the charter motion, which delays action until the next board meeting, because "the bids were manipulated."

"I'm convinced the bids were manipulated," he said. "I still want to find out more about the bidding process."

Restaurant cited for no smoking policy

NEWTON — In recognition of the "important contribution being made to the public's health and safety," Public Health Commissioner Dr. Baillus Walker Jr. presented special citation to the Pillar House Restaurant July 14 for its unique no smoking policy.

"The policy being inaugurated by the restaurant today is an outstanding example of a community health promotion activity," said Dr. Walker. "This milestone effort, which makes the Pillar House the first restaurant in the state with a liquor license to become entirely smokeless, should serve as a model for other dining establishments.

"A top priority of the Department of Public Health is education of Commonwealth residents on the health risks associated with smoking. Such action as that taken by this restaurant does a great deal to educate others about the importance of an atmosphere of non-smoking.

"We commend Thomas Larson (owner of the restaurant) for his aggressive stand on a health issue of great concern," added Dr. Walker. "With incidence of smoking-induced lung cancer up in Massachusetts, this action takes on even greater significance."

Campaign round-up

Torchia brochure

State representative candidate in the Newton-Waltham district, Tom Torchia, sent his volunteers out last Saturday with his first "drop"–a brochure indicating his background and attitudes. Among those endorsing Torchia are Sen. Jack Backman and Massachusetts Secretary of Elder Affairs Richard Rowland of Newton. He said, "Torchia will be working for us seniors in the legislature."

Mandile for business

State representative candidate Anthony Mandile will form a "Tenth Middlesex Small Business Advisory Group" if elected in the Newton-Waltham District. The group "would be my informal advisory network of small businessmen coordinated by my office to let me know their views," Mandile, a Waltham city councillor, said. Small businesses with less than 50 employees are "the mainstay of the economic picture in Massachusetts," says Mandile.

Pines anti-Pilgrim

State Senate candidate Lois Pines in the Newton-Brookline district supports "continued shutdown" of the Pilgrim nuclear plant of Boston Edison. "Boston Edison's record of sloppy management raises severe doubts about whether the company can be trusted to operate the facility without endangering the public," Pines said.

Suspended sentence for mail fraud

NEWTON — A Chestnut Hill man was sentenced last week after being found guilty of paying nearly $250,000 in kick-backs in return for a half-million dollar consulting job.

Joseph J. Berlandi of 65 Essex Road was given a one-year suspended sentence with two years of probation by US District Judge A. David Mazzone after being found guilty of federal mail fraud and tax evasion charges. In addition, Berlandi has agreed to 1,000 hours of community service.

Berlandi, a Boston attorney, was hired as a "development coordinator" for development of a building at 45 Milk Street in Boston, owned by New England Rare Coin Galleries.

According to the US Attorney's office, Berlandi was hired by Bruce M. Glinski of Lynnfield, a former salesman for the company, in return for a total of $243,175 in kick-backs.

New England Rare Coins, according to US Attorney William Weld, paid Berlandi "approximately $583,870 between February, 1981 and May, 1982, for coordinating the overall development project to ensure that the design, construction, financing, legal and other related administrative matters are implemented in accordance with the project budget and schedule."

Berlandi, according to Weld, paid Glinski without "the knowledge or approval" of New England Rare Coin owner Alan Hershon.

The indictment against the two men charged that "Berlandi paid Glinski $160,000 as a purported placement fee and $83,175, purportedly for a consulting fee." Glinski, according to the indictment, was not required to perform either of the tasks for which he was paid.

Glinski was charged with 16 counts of mail fraud and one charge of conspiring to defraud the Internal Revenue Service. He was sentenced to two years incarceration on each count, to run concurrently.

In addition to the mail fraud charges, Berlandi was also charged with willfully failing to supply information to the Internal Revenue Service.

Police install drug information phone line

NEWTON - The newly established Police Department Drug Investigation Unit (DIU) has installed a special confidential telephone line so the public can alert detectives of any information they might have concerning drug dealings in the city.

"Dial-a-Tip" is predominantly concerned with drug-related information, but Chief William F. Quinn said it can be used for any crime-related information citizens have.

A 24-hour answering machine will take messages and tips from people. Callers can either leave their names on the machine or leave an anonymous tip, he said. All calls will be confidential.

Citizens with information are urged to call the 24-hour "Dial-a-Tip" line at 552-7282. All tips will be followed up no matter how small, according to police.

Drinking and parking unlikely partners

NEWTON — Drinking and driving do not mix and neither, apparently, do drinking and parking.

Sea Fare, a proposed 70-seat restaurant in Auburndale, may have to open its doors without a wine and beer license because the Building Department has decided plans for the restaurant would not provide adequate parking.

According to Licensing Commissioner Carleton Merrill, one element of any decision to award a liquor license is what effect a restaurant or bar will have on the traffic flow of the surrounding neighborhood.

"The prime consideration right now is whether or not the proposed restaurant meets the parking ordinance," Merrill says. "The ordinance calls for one parking space for every three seats."

Merrill says a letter from Senior Building Inspector Paul Foley "recommended that we not grant the license because the proposal did not live up to the parking ordinance."

The letter, according to Alderman Polly Bryson, says parking calculations presented by attorney Edward Richmond, "do not meet the requirement of the parking ordinance." In addition, Bryson says the Building Department recommended that Merrill not grant the wine and beer license.

Aquino returns

By Ed Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON - The Garden City will help welcome Philippine President Corazon Aquino back to the Boston area in September when she makes her first trip to the United States since coming to power six months ago.

Mayor Theodore D. Mann said Boston Mayor Ray Flynn agreed during a phone conversation Monday morning to coordinate with the city of Newton some of the Hub's reception activities for Aquino.

Neither Flynn nor his aides could be reached to confirm the preliminary arrangement.

The Philippine leader and her family lived here at 175 Commonwealth Ave. from 1980 to 1983 while her husband, opposition leader Benigno S. Aquino Jr., was in self-imposed exile.

After her husband's assassination at Manilla Airport in August 1983, Corazon attended the ceremonies marking the conversion of her former home into a memorial honoring his memory. The blood-stained jacket he wore the day he died is displayed there in a glass-enclosed booth.

In view of the Aquino family's history here, Mann said it made sense for the city to "merge forces" with Boston during her four-day visit to the area scheduled to begin Sept. 20.

Flynn's invitation to visit Boston was hand-delivered to Aquino last month by Allen Weinstein, president of the Center for Democracy at Boston University.

Mann said he also has been in touch with Boston College officials in an effort to plan a reception for Aquino on the school's campus.

Aquino took courses at BC while living in Newton and also frequented St. Ignatius Church, which is located a short walk from her former home. The university also awarded an honorary degree to Jamie Cardinal Sin, the Catholic leader of the Philippines, during its commencement activities in May.

Mann first offered to formally greet Aquino in a letter dated March 4, less than a week after a peaceful revolution toppled the regime of Ferdinand E. Marcos and brought her to power.

In his role as mayor and president of the Massachusetts Municipal Association, he also offered any expertise Aquino might need to establish a democratic government.

Potent alliance could win tax cap

Who gets to spend the money generated by the continuing economic boom in Massachusetts is the dominant question on the November ballot. The choice pits the Legislature against two foremost public interest groups now joined, with Governor Dukakis very much in the middle. It involves the kind of tax-spending cap to be imposed on the state, just as was done in the 1978 Proposition 2 1/2 referendum.

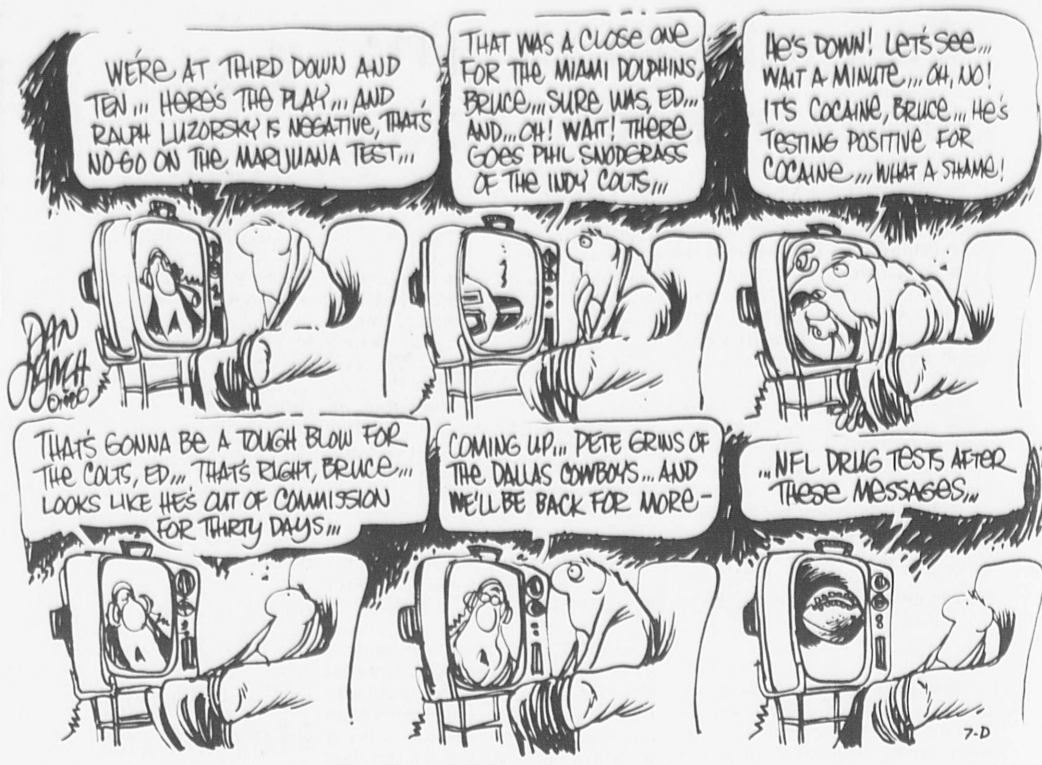
Together again are Citizens for Limited Taxation, originators of 2 1/2 and initiator of the state tax cap referendum, and the High Technology Council. Late last week, the high tech industry linked up with Barbara Anderson's CLT because of inaction on a spending cap of the Legislature and governor. Council leaders had been given assurance by the lawmakers and administration it would be a priority item.

Fumbling around on the matter, the General Court went on its summer recess without making good on the commitment, so high tech is taking the referendum route.

Even with legislative enactment of a bill, however, Barbara Anderson would have been pushing the ballot question just as she had because of a fundamental difference. CLT wants a restriction of growth in state tax revenues based on a percentage of the growth in wages and salaries. The bill making its way through the Golden Dome process would also be linked to growth, but would be establishing what is called a "stabilization" fund for excess tax revenue. CLT says this would give the Legislature continued spending powers. Its ballot question provides for a direct return of excess revenues to the taxpayers.

An undefeated champion in her personal bouts with power blocs on Beacon Hill, Anderson has already scored heavily this year. Her surtax repeal pressure got half a loaf and the prospects are of a total wipeout once the legislators get the sand out of their shoes. Her countermoves on the spending cap have had an effect, confusing the two branches on just what way to go. It appears the decks are cleared for a major victory in November.

An alliance with High Technology could be the clincher. For one thing, the dollars needed to educate the public in what is being offered them will come from industry. As with 2 1/2, the teachers' lobby is swinging into action as an opponent. Teachers will be swimming against the tide, however. Equity demands a tax cap for the state to balance that imposed on municipalities. CLT and High Tech make a powerful combination to bring about one of certain benefit to the taxpayer.



Restructuring long overdue in budget setting process

By George B. Merry

It just would not be July and the start of a new state fiscal year without some kind of a budget crisis in Massachusetts. And this year was no exception.

The record $9.84 billion spending blueprint that finally cleared the legislature late July 3 and was signed a week later by Gov. Michael S. Dukakis spotlights anew the need for budget reform.

Lawmakers should not have needed more than five months to decide how much to authorize for various programs, especially when the commonwealth is hardly financially strapped.

Certainly the fiscal 1987 spending package, which is nearly $1 billion greater than last year's, could have been leaner. That, however, would be expecting too much from senators and representatvies who, turned loose with the budget, are often like small children at a candy store eager to empty their piggybanks.

While some of the increased spending, including higher benefits for welfare recipients, is justified, there is much to suggest the commonwealth's best interests might have been served better were there some kind of a lid on total appropriations. Restrictions would force lawmakers to prune some accounts and perhaps eliminate less essential ones.

This surely could be accomplished in less time if those legislators responsible for crafting the annual budget and supplemental authorizations could devote near full time to that important assignment.

But that's impossible as long as the work is handled by the House and Senate Ways and Means Committees. These panels have to deal with scores of other, often complex matters, many only marginally related to state finances. These items might be better dealt with by a less busy legislative unit.

If lawmakers are interested in making the budget-shaping process more efficient, while coming up with spending plans that better reflect need, perhaps a joint appropriations committee with that single focus should be established.

The Ways and Means Committees would then have more time to deal expeditiously with the broad range of nonbudget measures that they now try to handle with varying degrees of success.

The new House and Senate Appropriations Committees, or whatever they were called, could hold budget hearings jointly. In that way the Senate panel would have pretty good idea what it might recommend long before a House-approved appropriations package reaches it.

To keep the budgetary process moving, an April 1 deadline for House action and a May 1 deadline for Senate action could be mandated through legislative rules change. In this way, conferees from the two legislative chambers would have plenty of time to resolve differences without the current all-too-familiar late-June and early-July frenzied and sometimes marathon negotiating sessions. Best of all, the likelihood of beginning the fiscal year without an approved budget would be reduced.

If such a procedural reform fails to improve things, a change in the state constitution to compel completion of legislative action by the end of June might be in order. Such a measure might provide for automatic approval of the annual budget as submitted by the governor should lawmakers miss the deadline.

"It's certainly something will worth considering," responds Richard Manley, president of the Massachusetts Taxpayers' Foundation. While perhaps interested in looking into the possibility, however, he stops short of endorsing the idea.

It should be noted that the governor is constitutionally required to come up with his spending proposals by the fourth Wednesday in January. Why shouldn't the legislature have a deadline for getting their work on the budget out of the way and back to the state chief executive for approval?

Lawmakers would want no part of such a restriction, since it would prevent their leaders from using the threat of an impending cutoff in welfare benefits, public-employee pensions and state worker salaries to pressure acceptance of a less-than-perfect budget.

Thus any move toward imposing a deadline for passage of the annual state budet would almost surely have to come from civic forces outside government, such as the League of Women Voters. This presumably would involve the initiative petition process.

Short of such a change, there is nothing to suggest that future Massachusetts lawmakers will be any more successful than those in the recent past in coming up with an approved budget by June 30.

The revenue cap, approved by the House July 9, might help hold spending down in future years, but it won't affect the fiscal 1987 state budget, which is loaded with election-year goodies bound to please large segments of voters and their special interests.

Origins of GOP predicament

At this bizarre point in Bay State politics, what should the embattled GOP look for in drafting a candidate to head its ticket this November?

The issue is getting desperate. With two Republican hopefuls (Hyatt and Switzler) who fancied themselves gubernatorial timber having proved otherwise — and departed the scene — time is running out.

Let's examine this predicament. Laying aside specific personalities, just how did the Republican party get in such a fix?

For one thing, leaders of the party have consistently shown more interest in fighting for control of the party than for control of the state. Accordingly, combative ideological wings have crystalized into personal fiefdoms bent mostly, unfortunately, on outmaneuvering each other. Each is more or less vaguely affiliated with a Republican presidential candidacy for 1988.

One must be blunt. This has little to do with grappling with issues concerning Bay State voters. The GOP comes across as an exclusionary sideshow — inside baseball, important to only a few tightly-knit activists. If you're not a true believer of one line or another, you're not wanted.

For another thing, television casts an unhealthy spell over modern-day politics. Voters conditioned by sitcoms, soap operas and Nielsen ratings spill over into politics their appetite for charisma over competence. This entices ambitious neophytes out of the woodwork intrigued by the glamor of running for office but lacking solid governmental experience or professionalism. Indeed, absence of political know-how passes as an asset.

Eight-term Republican state Representative Jonathan Healy of Charlemont makes this point in a recent interview. Healy's first Franklin District in northwestern Mass., is the most rural and with 22 predominantly Democratic towns, geographically the most extensive in the state.

He is one of a rare breed of attractive Republican legislators adept at the fine art of working effectively with Democrats to achieve constructive progress. Forty years old, he enjoys bipartisan respect.

Healy is convinced candidates for high political office need prior basic grounding in working with constituents, dealing with bureaucrats, solving people problems, operating the levers of governmental power, developing cooperative initiatives.

"My beef is that candidates are concerned with what interests them, not what interests the masses. Massachusetts Republicans aren't relevant to the debate. The party should be a vehicle, not an end in itself."

Healy says the trouble with the GOP's present blue ribbon commission looking for a "quick fix" gubernatorial candidate is that it's operating on the top-down, rather than bottom-up, philosophy. It's looking for a non-professional to annoint, someone good-looking on TV with name recognition but not necessarily experienced in complex constituent issues.

"You need two forces in politics," he argues, citing the failure of Republicans to hold up their end of the bargain. "It's balance that is important.

"We Republicans have done a good job stressing efficient government, tax reduction and tax limitation, but we are often unwilling to accept reasonable allocation of tax dollars for legitimate public purposes and unable to reach out to new constituencies." Healy's short list of political priorities makes refreshing sense.

"We have put personalities, egos, ideology and short-term personal gain ahead of a focus on broad Republican principles and the recruitment of hard-working men and women who can articulate these broader concepts to voters."

With prophetic irony, Healy sports on his State House office wall two cherished framed letters to him from the now-discredited GOP gubernatorial candidate (and House Republican colleague) Rep. Royall Switzler (who recently withdrew his candidacy in embarrassment.)

One letter notes, among other things, "...Your naivete is apparently profound..." The other observes, ".... For many years, I have felt that you didn't know what was going on around the House."

As Switzler himself has demonstrated, it is Healy who knows — only too well.

(Loring Swaim is a state columnist.)

GOP needs a time—tested candidate

By J.J. Smith

The Republican Party of Massachusetts is at its lowest ebb in history, and there is one way – and one way only – to repair the shattering damage done this year by its ill-starred candidates for governor. That one way is to nominate as gubernatorial candidate, an individual who can restore instant credibility, to the party.

As possibly the entire world knows now, a 37-member panel headed by ex-Ambassador and Governor John A. Volpe, and comprised of other top Republicans, has been seeking to draft a candidate to oppose incumbent Michael Dukakis for governor.

This search panel unanimously endorsed and drafted Ray Shamie, the Walpole businessman, to lead the GOP ticket but for the second time, Shamie turned down such a bid. There is no question that Shamie would be a credible candidate. However, having run unsuccessfully twice under the party label for United states senator, even he doesn't offer the instant healing process that either of two other possibilities would virtually insure.

There are two men – and two men only – who fulfill that potential. The aforementioned Volpe and former Governor Francis W. Sargent. Volpe noted facetiously recently that "We're going to get a candidate even if I have to do it," quickly adding that he has no intention of running because he is a candidate for ambassador to the Vatican.

In all candor, given the present state of affairs, no GOP gubernatorial candidate, including Volpe or Sargent, stands a ghost of a chance to defeat Dukakis. But, with his party at the nadir, one of these men should permit himself to be drafted if for no other reason than to remove this gubernatorial albatross form the neck of his party.

This is what another former Massachusetts governor, Endicott (Chub) Peabody, is doing in New Hampshire. Peabody had no intention of running for the U.S. Senate in New Hampshire against powerful vote-getting incumbent Warren Rudman, but for the good of the Democratic party, agreed to be a candidate.

The reasons in Massachusetts are even more compelling. The GOP here is in total disarray; literally the laughing stock of the nation as well as the state. Strong measures are needed; great sacrifice is called for. And both Sargent and Volpe do owe a debt to their party.

Each is a sincere man. Each has integrity. Each has been a winner in seeking this same office. Each offers strong name recognition. Each would insure strong support from the party nationally.

Sure both men are up there in years, but that didn't stop a guy named Ronald Reagan. To those who have heard and seen John Volpe on TV in these recent days, they've seen a man vigorous and alert despite being in his mid-seventies. Sargent, ten years younger than Volpe, by all recent accounts is still the same hearty, active extrovert who charmed his way into the little corner office at the State House once before.

With a John Volpe or a Frank Sargent heading the ticket, Mike Dukakis would not enjoy the milk run he now is assured. Things could even get very interesting. As for Volpe's worry about being named Vatican ambassador, if he's going to get that job anyway, surely that other GOP elder statesman, Ron Reagan, would hold it open for a few months until after the election is held in Massachusetts.

What's at stake here is nothing less than the credibility of the Massachusetts GOP. Surely one of these party giants can be persuaded to make the sacrifice.

Menachem Begin: living in seclusion

By Arthur Max

Three years after he abruptly resigned, Menachem Begin lives in deep seclusion.

Friends say he spends his days reading, watching video-cassette movies or looking out at the pine forest opposite his balcony.

Begin, who will be 73 on Aug. 16, lives a reclusive existence and refuses to publicly voice his opinions on affairs of state.

From the generation of Israel's founding fathers, Begin fought in the underground against the British and the Arabs in the pre-independence fight for a Jewish homeland, and in the eyes of many was a terrorist.

As Israel's prime minister for seven years he presided over the making of peace with Egypt but also over Israel's war in Lebanon.

In retirement, he is remembered wistfully at meetings of the Herut (Freedom) Party he founded in 1948 and left in disarray in 1983. Rhythmic chants of "Be-gin, Be-gin" are raised by his supporters even though Foreign Minsiter Yitzhak Shamir is the new leader.

Whenever a difficult question of policy or politics arises, some news columnist is bound to ask, "What would Begin have done?"

A year ago Begin changed his telephone number because journalists called him constantly and at all hours, said personal secretary Yehiel Kadishai. Begin always answered the phone himself and replied politely, although sometimes non-committally.

Begin keeps well informed on events, Kadishai added in an interview. Following a long-established routine, Begin begins the day tuned to the 6 a.m. news on the British Broadcasting Corp. and listens to an hour-long Israel radio newscast at 7 a.m.

He then glances through seven newspapers.

At 9 a.m., Kadishai brings mail that still arrives at the prime minister's office.

"If it comes from people he knows or concerns things that interest him, I take it," Kadishai said. "If not, I take care of it myself."

Begin seldom receives visitors other than close friends and family. Guests have included former U.S. Ambassador Samuel Lewis, who served during the Begin years, and Jeane Kirkpatrick, who fought battles for Israel as the U.S. chief delegate at the United Nations.

Shamir, who succeeded Begin as prime minister and now shares power in a coalition government, does not consult Begin on policy questions but visits him socially every six months or so, a Shamir aide said.

Shamir has been quoted by aides as saying Begin was mentally sharp but seemed fed up with politics and has resisted all attempts to get him involved.

Begin never explained why he suddenly resigned or why he refuses to leave his apartment in the Yefe Nof suburb on the edge of the Jerusalem forest.

"I ask him all the time. He doesn't talk about it," said Kadishai.

Israeli newspapers and former associates have speculated that Begin resigned because of lingering depression over his wife's death on Nov. 14, 1982, and because of regrets over the conduct of the 1982 invasion of Lebanon, which was designed as a lightning strike but turned into a three-year occupation that cost more than 650 Israeli lives.

The closest he came to an explanation was when he told his Cabinet in August 1983, "I can't go on any longer."

Begin leaves his home once a year to visit his wife's grave on the anniversary of her death. He has not appeared on television since he left the hospital after a prostate operation in October 1983.

He lives with his unmarried daughter Leah, 36, and across the street from his son Benjamin, 42, a geologist, who bears a remarkable resemblance to his father. Daughter Hasia, 40, visits once or twice a week.

A maid comes daily to clean and prepare lunch, mostly food that his late wife Aliza used to prepare: soup, boiled chicken and cooked vegetables, according to a profile in the Yediot Aharonot newspaper.

"He eats little, says thank you and goes to rest," the maid was quoted as saying.

Kadishai said Begin spends most of his day reading, ususally biographies, and watching movies on his video-cassette recorder.

"He used go twice a week to the movies. It's one of his greatest pleasures," Kadishai said.

On Saturdays, the Jewish Sabbath, Begin's children and most of his eight grandchildren visit for a family dinner. Transport Minister Haim Corfu, who lives in the same building, and his wife Devorah come later with a cake.

For years before he retired Begin talked about writing a history of Israel's birth entitled "Generation of Holocaust and Redemption."

Kadishai said Begin has been offered $750,000 by a publisher he refused to name. Begin did not reject the offer, Kadishai said, but he made no commitment and hasn't started work.

"I don't know if he ever will," he said.

Chestnut Hill catastrophe brushed off as 'normal procedure'

To the editor:

Concerning the dynamite blast at the Valle construction site on Route 9, the assistant fire chief was quoted as saying "It was normal procedure. It was a routine blast that just went a little bit haywire." What an easy, simple way of brushing off this calamity! No words of sympathy, censure or concern for the danger, havoc and fright experienced by the abutters!

With rocks and boulders flying all over the neighborhood in every direction, it was fortunate that no one was killed. Windows smashed, automobiles damaged, broken glass everywhere, rocks and boulders strewing the area. But the assistant fire chief states that it was a routine blast that went a little bit haywire!

The blasting is done under the supervision and approval of the fire department. Since the permit for blasting comes from the fire chief, that office (paid for by the citizens of Newton) is charged with constant supervision and vigil over each and every blast. How did they allow this "thunderous" blast that had to exceed the allowable limits (Richter scale.)

We had been complaining right along that many of the preceding blasts were frightening in their intensity. But no one seemed concerned. Long ago, when the building plans first became known, fears were expresssed to city hall concerning what will undoubtedly be a horrific traffic situation. It was pointed out that at the present time it is almost impossible for cars to exit on Boylston Street onto Route 9. And now, five underground floors for parking 950 cars were going to be allowed to be built!

No one was concerned at city hall. The answer was: "The site is commercially zoned and they can do whatever building they wish, as long as they obey rules and regulations. If our fears and predictions of an upcoming traffic maelstrom proves correct, the developer will have to figure something out. The city of Newton is not responsible. Asking about the possibility of more exits onto Florence Street (to avoid Route 9) we were told this would be impossible and would never be allowed.

Even though an inspection by a safety specialist of OSHA (Occupational Safety Health Administration) found one serious and several minor safety violations, I presume blasting will be resumed eventually and construction will be completed. And then the impending traffic nightmare will begin!

It seems to me that the city should appoint a responsible individual to be on the site, supervising each and every upcoming blast. If a fatality should occur, someone should be held repsonsible. Not a man who tosses off the calamity with the words, "It was just a routine blast that went a little bit haywire!"

Her family celebrates Susan Silverman's 'Swan Song'

To the Editor:

There's good news today, of the kind that may have escaped your attention because it's not weighty. One of our kids just phoned to let me know the Susan Silverman character will disappear from the TV series Spenser: For Hire next fall. The word around our house is "yippee!"

Do you know Susan Silverman? If you don't read Robert C. Parker's mystery novels or watch the TV series, you don't. She's a wildly over-dressed social worker. She spouts jargon, talks about "sharing, caring relationships," stuff like that. One kid insists the only time Susan is remotely tolerable is when she's away. "Of course, she only goes away for some loathsome reason like 'finding her own space.' And then she mucks up." Another says there should be a hit squad ready to run in to gag her before she can open that mouth. "The woman's a menace."

So much complaining about Ms. Silverman went on around here that I felt sorry for her and I went on feeling sorry for her until I watched a couple of episodes of Spenser: For Hire (anybody know what the colon's for?) and read a Spenser novel, "The Catskill Eagle."

It's no exaggeration to call her the villain of The Catskill Eagle and, in her TV persona, she's so sanctimonious even I felt an urge to shoot the set, hoping to put a bullet through her throat.

Now I feel sorry for the woman who had to play Susan in the TV series. Poor soul, I wish her better luck next time.

What really gets us, every single Weaver, and some married ones, is that Hawk will put up with Susan for a minute. Put up with her? He'll do "most anything for her." We're baffled. Hawk's a fine fictional creation, in the books and on TV. He's untroubled by moral ambiguities; he's honest. His dialogue with Spenser in The Catskill Eagle is faultless and very funny. We think it's an inexplicable flaw in an otherwise wonderful character that he doesn't just carry Susan over to the Charles River and drop her in.

We suppose his loyalty to Spenser keeps him from doing the right thing.

The kids want to celebrate by having some of Hawk's favorite champagne when Susan disappears from their TV series next fall. But what about the books? They tell me she's not disappearing from the books. That being the case, I vote we have some of Spenser's favorite beer and save the champagne for when, and if, she disappears from the books.

Seatbelts save lives

their seatbelt. I had one man vividly describe to me the feeling of flying through the air toward his windshield and then having his seatbelt pull him back. There is no question, I have seen the seatbelt law work."

These stories of the effectiveness of seatbelts have all been heard before. Yeh, however, said she believes the new law is working because it is actually getting people to buckle up.

"We have been trying to educate people about seatbelts since 1966 and they still don't wear them," she said. "It is the law that makes them do it now."

Newton Police Lt. James M. O'Donnell agreed.

"I think people have been buckling up more now that we have the law," he said. "They do it once and then they get in the habit."

Waltham Safety Officer Steven Fogg also concurred.

"I think the law is getting them to use seatbelts for the first time," Fogg said. "Hopefully it will become second nature."

If what Yeh, O'Donnell and Fogg say is true — that the law is getting people to wear the safety belts — then the figures released earlier this week by the Executive Office of Public Safety appear to speak well of the seat belt law.

There were 1,572 serious accidents in the first three months of last year. The state figures show there were 1,145 in the same period this year. This is 427 less, or a 27 percent decrease, according to Jeffrey Grossman, a spokesman for the public safety office.

The improvement is even greater — a 32 percent decline — when this year's figures are compared to the average for the first three months of the past two years.

Only non-visible injuries, things like bumps and whiplash, increased, and there at a slow one percent. These injuries, according to Grossman, are more common when one wears a seatbelt.

The state figures are based on police accident reports supplied by the Registry of Motor Vehicles.

"No matter how you look at it the figures show that the seatbelt law is doing its job," Grossman said.

Even many opponents acknowledge that it saves lives. They maintain, however, that the issue is one of personal freedom and the government should not be able to make them buckle up. Yeh called this argument "short-sighted."

"I don't hear anybody talking about personal freedom when they are lying in the emergency room with a broken neck," she said. "I don't hear family members say 'he was against the seatbelt law so it's OK he died.'"

"My point is," she continued. "Those are the people who aren't wearing their seatbelts and they are the ones I end up taking care of. And I don't hear anyone talk about personal freedom from six feet under the ground."

Yeh is also conducting a study comparing health care costs for people who were in accidents without seat belts to those who were in accidents but were wearing restraints. After studying more than 200 patients she has determined that the average hospital bill for a person who wore a seatbelt is less than half that of a person who did not wear one.

Yeh noted that it takes 200 people to care for the victim of a serious accident. "So it really does have implications for other people," she said. "And that's to say nothing of family and friends. About the only benefit I can see to people not wearing seatbelts is that we would have more organs for donation."

But no matter what the numbers say, or what the doctors say, it will still be up to the Massachusetts voters to decide if they want the seat belt law to stay. And there is no doubt that the debates in the barrooms and coffee shops will continue through the summer and right up to the November election, when the seatbelt question will be on the ballot.

Nonantumites observe a time—honored tradition

Back in 1935, with the country still rebounding from the Great Depression, Marracco's grandfather and friends walked door to door collecting money to buy the statue of the Virgin Mary, still used in the parade today.

"In a time when money was scarce, the Italian community in Newton banded together to support the purchase of the statue," he said. "And through the years, on the third Sunday of every July, we have celebrated and given thanks by bringing the Madonna through the streets."

With money draped over it, a group of men and women pushed the statue through the streets, singing Italian hymns and waving to family and friends. Occasionally, a man would walk up to the statue and pin a dollar to the lengthy string of bills that wrapped around the Virgin Mary.

For everyone who came out to watch, the parade reminded them of the traditions in the Old Country and of those immigrants who paved the way for the generations of Italians that would follow.

Paul Scrooc sat atop the railing on the front porch of his friend's house on Middle Street with a drink in his hand and a smile on his face. The 23-year-old couldn't remember the first time he came out to watch the parade.

"I've been to every parade since I was born," he said. "I grew up in Nonantum ... I've lived here all my life."

For Scrooc and his friends, the parade culminated a week-long celebration of his heritage. "We've been partying all day," he said. "We're all having a great time."

But, despite the partying and all the hoopla, Scrooc knows the real meaning of the celebration.

"I feel proud to be Italian," he said. "Today is important. It makes you remember the old times ... my grandparents. And it brings everyone in Nonantum together. All the people around here help each other out ... we're like a big family."

To that his girlfriend, Stephanie Belli, added, "It's a symbol of peace, freedom and the American way."

Zoning confirmed

Among other things, the SJC cited the home's separate mailboxes and the Jaffes' lease, which says one tenant may be evicted while the others remain, to show the use is not single family.

Some courts have ruled zones should not be restricted to blood-related groups. But this was not the issue in the Jaffe case, he said.

"What if you had one married couple on the first floor and three upstairs?" he said of 58 Winthrop St. "You'd have plenty of blood, but you'd have multiple dwellings."

Only at one point did the justices touch on the issue of family, hinting perhaps that family zones are meant for blood-related people. The Winthrop Street home, the SJC said, does "not achieve the permanency and cohesiveness inherent in the notion of a single housekeeping unit."

Like Baseman, Mayor Theodore D. Mann viewed the SJC decision as a victory for local zoning. City ordinances protect property values, which illegal dwellings "downgrade" by bringing too much traffic and unsafe conditions into a neighborhood, he said.

"For most people, the equity of their homes is the major property value of their lives," Mann said. "This then is something the homeowners of the city have a stake in."

Since their conviction last June, the Jaffes have been attempting to show the city selectively enforced its zoning laws against them.

Shirley Jaffe has been combing assessor records, real estate ads and Building Department documents to prove the city is speckled with illegal apartments. In one instance, she adopted the alias of Susan Pearlman to gain entry into a home she suspected violates zoning.

While she has issued over 300 complaints alleging zoning and state building code violations, Leon Jaffe has appeared before the Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA) to demand it enforce the law.

He declined to comment on the SJC decision. His wife seemed undaunted. "We're not devastated," she said. "We have no plans to sell Winthrop Street."

The city since January has taken around two dozen alleged zoning and building code cases to court, Baseman said. Another dozen have been "remedied" without legal proceedings, he said. Some of those cases have been inspired by Jaffe complaints.

The Jaffes, however, have charged the city with not acting quickly enough. Officials are not making a sincere effort to rid the city of illegal dwellings and building code violations, they have said.

Alleged violators have been allowed to request zoning variances from the ZBA or special permits from the aldermanic Land Use Committee. They can also try to convince Building Commissioner James Cameron that their extra apartments existed before zoning and should be "grandfathered."

Baseman denied the Jaffes' charge, saying these options are due process. "The point is people do have rights, whether the Jaffes want to admit it or not," he said. "We told them they have these rights."

The city used the same care in proceeding against the Jaffes. West Newton residents complained about 58 Winthrop St. in August 1984. After a couple of months of legal research and several inspections, the Law Department filed an application for a criminal complaint in January 1985, Baseman said. The city received a court date in April and the case was tried in June, Baseman said.

"It takes time. We didn't immediately hop on Shirley," he said. "We tried for months to negotiate a resolution in which they would remedy the violation."

Blast investigated

"It was just like someone shot a big shotgun at me," he said. "My first thought was to just dive."

The Farm condominium building, under construction across Florence Street about 500 yards away, looked like it took two cannon shots in its west wall at the fifth and sixth floors.

One of those rocks crashed through the brick wall into a closet where a workman had been only minutes before. The other hit the top of the wall, shattering the brick and cinder block.

Three minutes before the blast Michael Champagne had been on his knees scraping the floor of the closet. He left the room for a moment and was coming back in when he heard the crash and saw pieces of brick sliding across the floor. He looked into the closet and it was covered with pieces of brick, mortar and insulation.

Louis Pomerantz is the caretaker at The Farm and lives in the complex. He heard two explosions, "one from the blasting and another from a transformer that apparently blew up when a rock hit it. One rock came threw the kitchen window and missed my wife (Bonnie) by a few feet. I heard the explosions, there was a short delay and then rocks began raining down. The workers here started running for cover. Some of them jumped into their trucks."

One rock the size of a typewriter was thrown from the hole at the site over an eight-foot fence and onto the lawn of the Imperial Towers apartment building 100 yards away.

More than 60 cars were dented or had windows smashed by falling rock, said police.

Construction worker Bill Nunan, of Biddeford, Maine, found that a grapefruit-sized rock had smashed his windshield and landed in the driver's seat. Ten minutes earlier he had been in the car to grab his lunch, which he decided to eat under a nearby tree.

Most of the men hurt had gathered at the east side of the rim to watch the blast during their lunch break. One worker said, "This blast had a crack to it. We've heard some other blasts with that tonal quality, but not quite like this. It was totally amazing."

Police said at least four apartment buildings and about 12 houses in the area were damaged by the blast.

Charles Spezzano, who lives in a new house at 107 Florence St., about 400 yards east of the site, said the percussion from the blast cracked the ceramic floor in his greenhouse. The showering rubble also damaged the shingles on the house.

Mayor Theodore D. Mann met with department heads and representatives of the developer and contractors in his office. He said the building company agreed to repair any property damage caused by the accident.

He also said preliminary reports indicated the blast was within the seismic limits set by the state.

Mann praised the work of emergency medical technicians, who he said were on the scene within two minutes, and the fire department, which arrived about a minute later.

Police cordoned off Florence Street while three more smaller charges were set off. They had not blown when the big blast occurred shortly after noon.

Beaver Construction Co. is the general contractor at the site and Cianbro Co. is doing the excavation for the blasts.

Median closing sought citizens both driving and walking we need to have speed enforcement out there and we need to upgrade the traffic lights."

Schur asked if Newton police could patrol the intersection more regularly to "nab" speeding cars and those who run the red light on Route 9 instead of solely relying on state police.

"We will supplement enforcement at that intersection, but our top priority is the city streets of Newton. We have a very big city," Quinn said. "We'll try to do what we can, but we can't be out there every day."

In past years, the DPW has recommended the city close the median at that intersection, but the city has remained noncommital because residents living on the south side lobbied against it because of the inconvenience, LaMotte said.

"The state has already said they are in favor of closing the median. They're just waiting for our guidance and recommendations," Quinn said. "I believe closing that intersection is essential as the first step in making it safer."

Concerning the safety of pedestrians, Quinn said, a foot bridge over Route 9 could be considered. Schur said Quinn's option is both costly and takes years to implement.

"We want something more expedient done," she said. "If we had more patrols out there to stop people violating the speed limit and the red light, I think it would have a great affect because people won't do it if they know they're going to get caught."

Alderman Rodney Barker agrees with Quinn that the median should be closed. Barker, a Woodcliff Road resident, said he is willing to put up with the traffic inconvenience the barrier might cause and hopes other people will bend too. But Alderman George Mansfield said such an extreme measure will create a traffic hazard off Route 9 at both Parker and Center streets.

"Presently both intersections are bottlenecked and would become a turn-around," Mansfield said. "I can see rather wild traffic patterns developing there already and they would only increase. The repercussions will be felt elsewhere if the intersection at Woodcliff is cut off."

Although Schur said she did not come to the meeting with the intention of agreeing to close the median, a compromise was reached to do it on a trial basis.

Calcagni earns 'Star honors

Brockton High's baseballers made quite an impact on the Suburban League. So what else is new, right? But the Boxers' waltz through the league this past spring was special — they did it without suffering a single loss. It was only in the finals of the Division I EMass Tournament that the Boxers tasted bitter defeat.

So, for their efforts, the circuit's coaches recently stacked the league all-star squad with seven Brockton ballplayers, bestowing the Most Valuable Player Award on none other than Greg McMurtry.

McMurtry, heading to Michigan on a football scholarship, once again proved he can compete with the best in any sport. So much so that the Boston Red Sox gambled and drafted the Brockton superstar in the first round of this summer's amateur draft. McMurtry balked at the offer (to no one's surprise) and decided to get an education and play a little football instead.

A young and inexperienced Newton North squad struggled and, along with Brookline and North Quincy, placed only one player on the roster — outfielder Aldo Calcagni.

The local star:

Aldo Calcagni — Newton North's senior co-captain led by example, and a .393 team-leading batting average wasn't a bad example. An intense competitor, Calcagni was forced to make due on a subpar baseball team, but he flourished.

"Aldo wants to win," Newton North coach Dick Walker said of his sleek left fielder. "He's the type of individual that, as a coach, you'd want a whole team of. Aldo's got a lot of desire — a lot of pride — and he was motivated to win."

Calcagni's average, up three points from his .390 clip as a junior, and his tremendous speed made him an attractive table setter. He spent most of the season in the leadoff or number two spot in the batting order — running up a total of 15 stolen bases in 16 attempts — but was pushed back to third to boost North's offensive production.

The team:

Pitchers

Howie Rosen, Brockton; Troy Sousa, Brockton; David Brown, Waltham; Jim Gangi, Waltham; Jamie Holloway, Cambridge; Larry Taglieri, Quincy.

Catcher

Mike Puntonio, Cambridge.

First Base

Tom Logan, Quincy.

Second Base

Mike Flammini, Brockton.

Shortstop

Jim Caeran, Brockton.

Third Base

Jason O'Connell, Cambridge.

Outfielders

Chris Riccuitti, North Quincy; Joe Borelli, Cambridge; Jeff Lazaro, Waltham; John Logue, Waltham; Greg McMurtry, Brockton; Mike Riccardi, Brockton.

Stan Musial

Post 440 sweeps 4 Seasons

WALTHAM — If you had told Waltham Four Seasons Sports coach Al Scafidi that his team was going to lose both ends of a Stan Musial doubleheader Sunday against Newton Post 440, he probably would have doubted it.

Scafidi's men were winners of six straight and had clawed their way into second place in the Bay State League because of it. Newton was floundering, playing only on weekends, and then not so hot.

Still, what makes competition interesting is the fact that anything can happen on any given day. Newton's given day was Sunday, and Post 440 rattled Waltham's hopes of catching first-place Natick with a doubleheader sweep, 10-5 and 7-1, at Jake Dennis Field.

The two Newton victories, coupled with a pair of losses on Saturday to Acton, leave Post 440 at 7-16, while Waltham is 14-8.

Both teams invloved Sunday at Dennis Field had proved that hitting is not really a problem. Waltham, however, had to be given the edge in the pithing department. Not so.

Although Four Seasons did hit the ball hard off Newton winner David Boule in the first game, righty Craig Lennon five-hit Waltham in the nightcap, losing a shutout on a two-out home run by Bob Cappadona in the bottom of the seventh.

Waltham pitching, on the other hand, suffered. Bentley College's Ari Koufos was bruised for 13 hits in the opener, walking six, while Ron Petkis was rattled for eight hits, three for extra bases, in the second loss.

"We didn't do anthing right," Scafidi said after the losses. "Our pitching was awful, we didn't hit. ... Even our fielding wasn't satisfactory. Today just wasn't our day, we should have stayed home."

Newton Coach Ed Murray, who also suits up for Post 440, couldn't have been happier.

"We weren't thinking about sweeping them (Waltham)," he admitted Sunday night. "We're kind of a laid back team, we just wanted to go there and play good baseball. We were just going to give it our best shot."

Despite the poor record, Murray's club has played the spoiler. Waltham ripped Post 440 earlier in the season, but the payback was Sunday. Newton has also beaten Natick, one of only three teams (Waltham and the Warriors are the other two) to do so, and lost two one-run games to the Worcester Warriors.

Post 440's Joe Noone slides in safely under Four Seasons catcher Dave LeLievre

"We're in almost all of our games," Murray said.

It didn't take long for Newton to get in the groove Sunday. RBI-singles by Ralph Berry and Mike Morris (3-for-6 with five RBI on the day) put the visitors up 2-0 before Waltham rallied for three runs in the home second to take its only lead.

Newton went to work on Koufos in the third, scoring five runs off the former Watertown High pitcher.

Norm Young and Chris Pachus sandwiched singles around a Joe Noone walk to load the bases with no outs, and a Joe King sacrifice fly tied the score, 3-3.

Waltham second baseman Roger McKinnon threw away a Colin Ryan grounder, allowing Noone to score with the go-ahead run, before Chris Bercury walked to reload the bags.

Murray sacrificed Pachus home and Morris followed with the killer — a two-run double to left-center for a 7-3 lead.

A Steve LaForest solo homer to lead off the Waltham third and an Ed Sweet RBI-single later in the frame put Four Seasons right back in the game.

Boule and Koufos battled scoreless for three innings before Newton clinched the victory with a three-run seventh.

A Bercury two-out, two-run homer sparked the inning, and Norm Young made it a five-run lead with a bases-loaded single to score Murray, who had walked.

Lennon was the story in game two, five-hitting Four Seasons and shutting them out for eight and two-thirds. Nobody dominates Waltham, never mind shuts Four Seasons out.

If it wasn't for Cappadona's moon-shot to left-center with two gone in the seventh, Lennon would have had himself the whitewash. Still, the righthander from the University of Tampa got the win — the convincing win.

"He's pitched well for us in the past, and today he just pitched real well," said Murray. "He wasn't overpowering, but he's a low ball pitcher and it got him 12 fly outs."

Scafidi was all praise, too. "He (Lennon) pitched a damn good game. It's the first time he's really given us any trouble, and he pitched well."

It was Morris who got the Newton offense rolling, taking Petkus' first offering of the game to left-center for a home run. Morris put Newton up, 2-0, in the second with a sacrifice fly to score King.

King singled in a run and Ryan walked to force in another to key a three-run third inning that put Post 440 up, 5-0. Back-to-back doubles by Murray and Young keyed a two-run seventh.

Saturday, Bob Rhodes hurled 14 innings and earned two wins as Acton dropped Newton, 11-2 and 4-0.

Rhodes went the distance in both games to make the most of the afternoon. The righthander did not strike out a single batter in 14 innings worked, lofting an offspeed fastball at the Newton bats and settling for fly outs and line outs.

"We hit some shots," Murray said of Saturday's doubleheader. "But we hit them right at people."

Post 440 lined out six times in the first game and four times in the second. "That's not including the one-hoppers," Murray added.

The summaries:

NEWTON POST 440(10)-Morris 3-2, Berry 5-3, Young 5-3, Noone 4-0, Pachus 3-1, King 3-0, Ryan 4-1, Bercury 2-2, E. Murray 3-1. Tot. 32-13.

National League

Mosca clinches crown with win

NEWTON — Mosca Club jumped out to an early 3-1 lead and never looked back, taking a convincing 8-5 victory over St. Bernard's and clinching first place in the National League Thursday night at Lincoln Field.

St. Bernard's scored the initial run in the bottom of the first, but Mosca's booming bats were not to be denied after that.

Mosca tied the game in the top of the second on John Doherty's sacrifice fly to center field. The inning was keyed by a John Cappadona double, which followed a walk to Jon Glick.

Then, in the third, Dan Monbouquette started things off with a single. Steve Altman followed with a fielder's choice and Steve Stoller singled Altman to second.

Altman and Stoller executed the double steal, making it second and third for Matt Spengler, who singled to center to drive in both runners.

In the fifth, Mosca exploded for five more, with Ben Burlingame and Mark Maiocca collecting RBI singles along the way.

St. Bernards would chip away at Mosca's 8-2 lead in its half of the fifth.

Pinch-hitter Mark Loughlin came through with a two-run single to highlight the rally.

But Mosca pitcher Peter Cappadona, in relief of starter Bob Blouin, mopped up the rest of the way.

Warriors win

A third-inning surge put the Auburndale Warriors in the drivers seat, and Stew Meltzer drove them home in a 7-6 victory over Boys' Club at Ferguson Field.

Meltzer, the victim of two costly errors and three untimely walks, allowed just four hits in his route-going performance.

The Warriors gave the pitcher a 5-1 lead after three innings. Meltzer, himself, started a strange third inning that saw the Warriors send six straight batters to the plate without an out, score three runs in the process, then go down 1-2-3 to end a potentially awesome inning.

Meltzer walked and came home on a Steve Colela triple to right-center before Tom Casey singled home Colela for a 4-0 lead. A single and an error later, the Warriors had the bases loaded, still with no outs.

Sean O'Brien singled home Casey for a 5-0 lead before losing pitcher Mark Cadman struck out two and forced a fly out to end the inning.

The Boys' Club pulled to within one run in the fifth on an Alex DeNucci three-run homer. Cadman walked and Joe Proia reached on an error before DeNucci launched a missile to left field.

Battista blinds Knights

Frank Battista used his blazing fastball to strike out 14 hitters in seven innings as Our Lady's took an 11-2 triumph over the Knights of Columbus.

The right-hander allowed only four hits, all singles. Mike Ryan was the only Knights hitter who really had Battista's number, as he went 3-for-3. It was also a Ryan single in the fourth with the bases loaded that accounted for both K. of C. runs.

Battista got even stronger after that inning. He struck out nine from the fourth inning on, getting the side on strikes in the fourth, fifth and seventh.

Meanwhile, his teammates gave him plenty to work with by scoring four times in the third.

Glick tosses one-hitter

Jon Glick tossed a one-hitter for his fifth straight win of the season and the Mosca Club bats came alive in a 19-2 victory over the Auburndale Warriors.

While Glick was cruising along on the mound, his first-place Mosca teammates were pounding Auburndale pitching for 18 hits and 19 runs, starting with an eight-run first.

Glick didn't need to be superb, but he was nonetheless. He struck out seven and walked six, and the only hit he allowed was a single by Mark Dezotell in the second inning. That scored Rob Ingham, who had walked. Auburndale tallied again on a grounder that plated Sid Queler, who also drew a free pass.

But that was the sum total of the Warrior offense for the night. Glick used his sharp curveball to strike out at least one batter in every inning but the third. He also went 2-for-3 and drove in a couple of runs.

Though no Mosca player had more than two hits, Steve Altman made the best use of his, as he drove in four runs on a pair of triples. One of those three-baggers knocked home a pair of runs in that first inning. Chris Pappas had another two-run triple in the frame.

Our Lady's comes back

Ron Coppola roped a two-run single in the bottom of the fifth inning to power an Our Lady's, 4-3, come-from-behind win over St. Bernard's at Cabot Park.

As darkness settled, Coppola lined to right with the bases full, scoring pinch-runner Kenny Kazarosian and Chris Bercury for a 4-3 lead. Immediately after the two-run single, the game was called because of darkness.

St. Bernard's had scored two in the top of the fourth to take a 3-2 lead. Winning pitcher Anthony Calcagni struggled through the fourth, the only inning the righthander couldn't find his groove. He walked three in the frame, including a bases-loaded pass to Don Natale to score one of the two runs. An infield error scored the other marker.

After Calcagni knocked St. Bernard's down scoreless in the top of the fifth, Our Lady's came through with the winning effort.

Eddie McAvinn took a Tom McGary pitch off the left shoulder to open the inning and Kazarosian came in to run for McAvinn and promptly stole second base.

One out later, Bercury reached on an infield error to move Kazarosian to third and Greg Larson loaded the bases with an infield hit, setting up Coppola.

Club starts fast

The Boys' Club scored three runs in the bottom of the first inning and went on to take a 9-6 victory over the Knights of Columbus at Newton North.

Steve Fontano started things off, reaching on an error, before Jim Proia double him home. Then Mitch Nash singled, scoring Proia, Joe Proia walked and Chuck Proia drove in Nash.

In the second, Fontano led off with a single before Alex DeNucci smashed a two-run homer to make it a 5-2 game.

A single, two errors and a sacrifice fly by Chuck Proia would account for another Boys' Club run in the third.

Then, in the fourth, after Fontano walked, Colin Ryan blasted a two-run job over the left field fence to give the home club an 8-2 advantage.

The Knights would make a run at it in the top of the sixth, scoring three runs to chip away at the Boys' Club lead.

Mike Ryan, who went 4-for-4, singled, and Neil Stolzenbach reached on a throwing error by the shortstop, making it second and third and setting the stage for Garrett Flynn, who promptly delivered home both runners with a single.

Then, after Thad Frost reached second on another error, John Tafe sent him home with an RBI single to cut the lead to 8-6.

Waltham dumps National All-Stars

WALTHAM - There's always something special about a Waltham-Newton game, even when there are no schools involved. In baseball recently, Waltham has had the best of it, and that continued on Sunday when the Connie Mack League Traveling Team dumped the National League All-Stars, 7-2, at Dennis Field.

Newton tallied with the initial run in the top of the first, but Waltham's Embassy Trophy exploded for five in the third and went on to take a 7-2 victory.

Dave Brown singled to start things off for the home club. Mark Driscoll followed with a bouncer to second and Newton forced the lead man.

Then Tony Massarotti put down a sacrifice bunt, and the fun started for the Connie Mack League team.

After an out, Carl Anderson's fielder's choice scored another run.

Then, with two outs, Lee Wilcox singled to load'em up again, this time for John Logue, who ripped a bases-clearing double off the center-field fence for a 5-1 Embassy lead.

In the fifth, Embassy made it 7-1.

Jeff Lazaro drilled a double off the fence, went to third on a grounder and scored on a Wilcox single.

Wilcox went to third on Logue's third hit of the day and scored on a sacrifice fly to right by Glenn Cort.

Britt Ryan reached first on a swinging bunt.

Wild pitches allowed Ryan to go to third before Dave Boule drove him in with a grounder to first.

Then, in the sixth, Dan Monbouquette doubled off the center-field fence, went to third on a passed ball and score on a Boule sacrifice fly to left.

Pitcher Paul Beninati went three strong innings for Embassy, allowing only one hit and striking out four.

The summary:

EMBASSY TROPHY(7)-Lazaro 3-1, Anderson 3-0, Wilcox 3-2, Logue 3-3, Cort 1-0, Finnerty 1-0, Fuller 1-0, Brown 2-1, Gangi 1-0, Driscoll 1-0, Massarotti 1-0, O'Toole 1-0, Beninati 0-0. Tot. 21-7.

American Legion

Chelmsford rips Newton

CHELMSFORD — It didn't take long for the Newton Post 440 American Legion squad to realize that Chelmsford was not the place to be on this overcast Sunday.

Before Newton starter Andy Lyons could shake out the kinks in his right arm, Chelmsford had ripped him for two doubles and a triple on the way to a four-run first inning. The day would get worse — and longer — for George Sherman and his ball club. Chelmsford would take both games of a doubleheader, winning 19-2 and 7-3.

The double loss spoiled a Friday night victory at home over Medford which broke a five-game losing streak. Sunday was like last week revisited.

In the Sunday opener, Chelmsford took a 7-1 lead after three, surely enough to secure victory, but the home team (playing the role of visitors in game one) wanted more.

A single run crossed in the fourth and three more in the fifth. Finally, Chelmsford unleashed 13 men for eight runs in the sixth, putting an end to any Newton thoughts of a comeback.

Dan Parent walked and Dave Markham scored both Parent and Robinson on a long triple to right field.

Winning pitcher Jeff Hamel did everything in his power to hold Newton off, and he contributed in more ways than just pitching. The fastball hurler had a double and a triple in the big sixth inning.

Despite going down, 1-2-3, in the second, third, and fourth innings, Newton did put runners on base. Post 440 loaded the bags three times and twice had them unloaded with double plays.

A George Maxcey single and walks to both Ron Coppola and Jeff Sherman loaded the bases in the first inning and, following a Chuck Proia sacrifice fly to bring home Maxcey, David Grant grounded into an inning-ending 6-4-3 double play.

Maxcey doubled home Jim Giddon with Newton's only other run, that coming in the seventh inning.

Newton stayed close in the nightcap, pulling to within one run after four and a half, but Chelmsford stayed a step ahead with two runs in both the fifth and sixth innings.

A three-run third powered Chelmsford. A one-out roller back to the mound by Kevin Aucoin caused problems for Newton starter Mark McGrath, who overran the dribbler for one of six Newton errors on the game.

Ball hit into the second Post 440 error, and Ray Talbot hit into the third. When the scene was over, Chelmsford had crossed three runs for a 3-1 lead.

Ball singled to right field but Grant overthrew the cutoff, allowing Aucoin to score and Ball to move to third. Coppola followed with a miscue in center on Talbot's single, scoring another run.

Newton had taken its only lead of the game, and its only lead of the day, in the top of the third on a Giddon double to center that scored McGrath with one out.

Newton pulled to within one, 3-2, with a crazy run in the fifth. Ed Veiking was hit by pitcher Tom Rayne to start the inning, and McGrath retaliated in an odd sort of way.

McGrath lined a pitch back to Rayne on the mound and the ball bounced off the pitcher's leg and rolled between first and second for a bizzare single.

Two outs later, Coppola made up for his miscue in the outfield with a run-scoring single, plating Veiking.

Friday night at Burke Field, Alex DeNucci made his first mound appearance since his Little League days, hurling a complete-game victory for an 8-3 win over Medford.

DeNucci, 18, struggled with control at times as he walked seven, but a six-year layoff was more than a good excuse for his mild wildness. The righthander did fan three.

Newton was forced to forfeit its previous contest against Malden when the game's home plate umpire stopped play following his ejection of Newton coach Sherman.

Sherman was ejected and told to leave the park following a brief but heated argument over balls and strikes with home-plate umpire Ed McDonald in the visitor's third inning.

Sherman said he left the park and sat on the hood of his car in the parking lot to continue watching the game, leaving his assistant Scott McAdams to coach the team.

Three pitches later, a second dispute over balls and strikes ensued, and Sherman said he voiced his opinion and McDonald called the game a forfeit.

Defense killed Newton in its previous outing — or maybe it would be safer to say lack of defense.

Post 440 stumbled, committing seven total errors in losing its fourth straight game, this one a 6-5 mishap against host Lowell.

Adding to Newton's problems was the hard-throwing Joe Grygiel. The southpaw allowed just two Newton hits in going the route for the win.

Grant's two-run homer and Frank Battista's two-run double were the lone hits off Grygiel, and Sherman said Newton began to catch up to the speedy pitcher later in the game.

International League

Swope preserves Abruzzi's triumph

NEWTON — Dan DeDoming roped a two-out single in the fifth inning to break a 1-1 tie and righthander Matt Swope retired the last nine men he faced as Abruzzi Club knocked out Carson Post, 3-1, in Newton International League action at Highlands Playground.

DeDoming singled home Adam Ford with the eventual game-winner, but the real story was the pitching battle between Swope and Mike Fiske.

Boys' Club rolls

Adam Cedrone drove in five runs to pace a 15-2 Auburndale Warriors rout over the Boys' Club in an International League contest at West Newton Common on Thursday.

Cedrone's triple knocked home the first run of the game in the first, when the Warriors scored a pair. The winners added five more in the second to go on their way to the romp.

C&K wins

C&K Components rallied for five runs in each of the final two innings to insure a 14-9 victory over Troubadour in a game at Albemarle Field.

Trailing, 5-4, after three, C&K exploded for 10 runs over the next two frames to skate away with the five-inning victory.

David Annese drove a deep single to right field with the bases loaded to score all three runners to start the fourth-inning rally. Annese scored on a Rob Pang single, and Pang scored on a Jim McMillen double.

Oak Hill romps

The Oak Hill Cubs pounded out 25 hits in beating St. Bernards, 24-1.

Bert Santucci led Oak Hill with four hits, and Brian White pitched a solid game, allowing the visitors only five hits. He also struck out six in going the distance.

Leonard paces Post 440

Steve Leonard struck out 11 in pitching a five-hitter and stroked a couple of safeties himself as Post 440 held off Albemarle, 6-4.

It was Leonard's day from the start, as he tripled to lead off the game. When P.J. Melanson and Nino Tramontozzi followed with doubles, Leonard had a 2-0 lead before he stepped on the mound.

He never let it go, watching it grow to 6-1 before Albemarle made a run at him.

DeNucci leads Club

Joe DeNucci, a 15-year-old right-hander, fired a four-hitter as the Boys' Club built a 5-1 lead and rode it to an 11-2 decision over the Abruzzi Club at Highlands Playground.

The winners unlimbered their bats in the first with a pair of runs. George Maxcey drove lin the first marker with a single, and Joe Spataro added a sacrifice fly.

Troubadour rallies

Down 3-2 in the bottom of the third, Troubadour rallied for two runs and never looked back, taking a convincing 7-3 victory over Abruzzi Club at Lincoln Field.

Derek Fergus led off the inning, reaching first on a error by the shortstop.

Then Fergus stole second, before Peter Hinteregger sacrificed him to third, setting the stage for Brian Berlandi, who bunted to score Fergus on a perfect squeeze play to tie the game at 3-3.

But that wasn't it. The inning would continue, as Joe Russillo doubled and Sam Gottlieb singled him home for what turned out to be the winning run.

C&K starts fast

C&K Components jumped out to a 6-2 lead with a five-run second inning and went on to pound St. Bernard's, 12-3, in an International League contest at Ferguson Field.

The winners used only two hits in their big inning, taking advantage of some lackluster St. Bernard's defense.

Warriors hold off Carson Post

Adam Cedrone drove in four runs and Scott Popsuj went 3-for-3 as the Auburndale Warriors held off a late Carson Post surge, winning 12-10 at at Del Ryan Field.

The Warriors cushioned a 5-4 lead after three innings with two scores in the fourth, then seemingly put the win on ice with four more runs in the fifth inning.

Albemarle rallies

Albemarle Club broke open a 2-1 game in the top of the second inning, scoring six runs and cruising to a convincing 21-2 victory over St. Bernard's.

RBI singles by Sam Webber, Michael Robertson, Mike Bower, Arthur Magni and Stephen Frail scored five of the runs while an error accounted for the other.

C&K ties Post 440

Steve Leonard laced a double and two triples, but it wasn't enough to make the difference as Post 440 had to settle for a 13-13 tie with C&K Components.

A two-run double by C&K's Brenden Moyer in the bottom of the fifth knotted the score 13-13 with one out.

Boys' Club comes back

The Boys' Club stormed back from a 6-4 deficit with five runs in the sixth inning to take a 9-6 decision over the Oak Hill Cubs.

With one out, Joe Spataro walked, Vinnie Lipoma reached on an infield hit and Tom Burked walked to load them up for Joe DeNucci, who drilled a single to score Spataro and make it 6-5.

Then, after another out, George Maxcey singled to drive in two more.

Little League Tournament

McCue pitches North to berth in finals

NEWTON — The bells have rung and the trumpets have sounded — it's going to take more than a one-hitter to beat Newton North.

Parkway National's Dennis Regan threw a one-hitter Newton's way Wednesday in the District 17 Little League Tournament, but North capitalized on seven walks for a 3-0 victory.

Newton has now won four games in the double-elimination tourney and remain the only unbeaten team. North was to meet Parkway National for the district crown earlier this week. Parkway would have to win twice, with Newton only needing one victory for the title.

Regan battled with Newton southpaw Matt McCue, who didn't throw half badly himself. McCue won his second tourney game with a two-hit shutout (a no-hitter until the final inning) that included nine strikeouts.

Newton started the scoring — and finished it — in the second inning. After having left the bases loaded in the first inning, Newton took advantage of Regan's mistakes in the second frame.

Chris Ford, Mike Mahoney, and Jim DeLuca all walked for Newton in the second to load the bases with no outs. Carmen Patrillo forced home the eventual game-winner when he took a Regan pitch off the head.

Doug Gentile walked to force in the second run, then a Jamie Keefe sacrifice fly plated the third run.

Joe Blanchard had the lone Newton hit, a two-out infield single in the fourth inning.

McCue surrendered both hits against him in the sixth inning, the only frame in which the 12-year-old lefty allowed more than one baserunner.

In that inning, Greg Morrow reached on a swinging-bunt single and, following two straight strikeouts, Chris Arthmann walked and Paul Driscoll dumped a bases-loading single to short left field.

McCue escaped with the shutout when Bill Kinny flyed out to center fielder Mike Mahoney to end the game.

McCue at one time retired seven batters in a row and retired the side in order in the first, third, and fifth innings.

In its previous outing, North exploded for a 25-0 shelling of Newteon South.

Blanchard pitched a one-hitter in going the distance, striking out 10, while walking only one.

West ousted on no-hitter

Newton West tried to make it an all-Newton final, but was bounced out on a no-hitter by Parkway American's Ed Raffoni last Thursday.

The southpaw Little Leaguer allowed just four baserunners in eliminating Newton West, 10-0.

Newton leaves the double-elimination tourney with a 2-2 record.

Raffoni had some early offensive help — Parkway scored five runs in the top of the first inning — and then the lefty went to work. He struck out six, walked two, and hit a batter. Behind him, the Parkway defense committed just one error.

Mark Bazer got hit by a Raffoni pitch in the second, Dave Stewart drew a leadoff walk in the fifth, and Newton put two men on base for the only time in the game in the last inning.

Vinnie Antonellis walked to start the sixth and went to third two outs later when Nick Nicolazzo reached on an error. Both runners were stranded as Raffoni forced a soft ground out to end the game.

Parkway beat up on Newton starter Ted Dalicandro early, knocking him out of the game before it even was one out old. Six straight hits followed a game-opening error, powering a five-run first.

Raffoni singled and Kevin O'Leary doubled, followed by consecutive singles by Luis Velasquez, Mark Pryor, Bob Jones, and Bruce Higgins.

Reliever Marty Clapton settled the Parkway bats a little, allowing three runs in the second inning and single runs in both the fourth and fifth innings.

O'Leary was Parkway's big gun, batting 3-for-3 with a home run, a double, and two RBI.

West advanced to that level with a forfeit victory over Newton South.

Newton South was unable to field nine players and was forced to award the game to its Western rivals.

In West's previous game, with elimination just one loss away, David DiStefano decided he wanted to play baseball just a little bit longer.

DiStefano took matters into his own 12-year-old hands, hurling a no-hitter to spark West past Dedham, 10-2.

DiStefano, who struck out 13, allowed only eight base runners all game (six walks and two hit batsmen), and was pitching under pressure most of the way. It wasn't until the fifth inning that Newton pulled away from the Dedham club.

Parkway eliminates East

Parkway Central scored three times in both the third and fifth innings to oust Newton East, 6-2, at Bunker Field.

Steve Elliot allowed allowed only seven hits in going the distance for Newton East, but he was victimized by his defense in those two innings, as his club made three errors. Elliot fanned three in the game.

East did take an early lead when Dan Housman opened the game with a double and scored on Chip Vance's single.

Parkway battled back for three tainted runs in the third on only two hits.

Newton pulled within a run in the top of the fifth when Dan Finkelstein and Elliot both singled and Chris Mensoian and Steve Lafer drew consecutive walks.

Your Home

Give your home a summery look

By Barbara Mayer
AP Newsfeatures

Summertime, and the living is easy, especially if you have reorganized your living space to provide an airier environment and make upkeep chores simpler.

To give your home a summery look, follow the same guidelines you use in putting together a summer wardrobe, advise two interior designers.

Light neutrals such as white, cool pastels and bright colors look best in warm climates, so if your winter habitat is dark, brighten the scene with summery slipcovers and accessories, they suggest.

Bill Florio, director of the design studio at the Bloomingdale branch in Stamford, Conn., suggests white china accessories and white lace or linen mats and tablecloths and inexpensive white window shades and white wicker furniture to take the place of darker winter decor.

"A white soup tureen with greens in it looks summery on the dining room table. A white basket with green lemon leaves looks great in the fireplace. Drape dark mahogany tables with a summery white fabric, and, perhaps, put a chair or two away and replace them with some white wicker."

He also advises picking up rugs for cooler, easier to care for bare floors. "Or cover the floors with inexpensive straw rugs. Put the draperies away and replace wintry window treatments with sheers," adds Florio. In the bedroom, put the winter-time comforters and blankets in storage and replace them with white sheets and light summer blankets. Instead of spreads, choose seersucker blanket covers.

For the ultimate in summer decor, cover dark furniture with white slipcovers. An inexpensive way to do this is to drape the furniture with white sheets which you can tie or otherwise secure with cotton roping.

The summer sheet approach is not for the compulsively neat and tidy individual, however, since a drawback to this treatment is the inevitable slipping, wrinkling and mussing of the "slipcover."

Florio says safety pins or adhesive tape sewed unobtrusively in the right places can minimize the problem. But "you really have to consider the wrinkles as part of the summer look — sort of like the fashionably wrinkled linen summer suit."

Lyn Peterson, president of Motif Designs, New Rochelle, N.Y., suggests replacing dried floral arrangements and other wintry accessories with fresh flowers and even "weeds."

Each summer, she says, she makes use of an inexpensive and easy way to bring the outdoors in by collecting lawn grasses for each room in her home. Those pesky weeds, when collected individually in a vase, are quite attractive, says Peterson.

Like Florio, she advocates paring down the decor to the bare minimum. To maintain a dressy but still summery atmosphere, try swagging a window with a vintage lace tablecloth.

The summertime yard and tag sales that proliferate may be a source of inexpensive lace and linen, she adds.

Incidentally, there is an added reason to put away textured pillows, fiber wall coverings, and even extra furniture to create a bare space. Not only will the room look and feel cooler, but by eliminating dust catchers, you will minimize the time needed for dusting and vacuuming.

Peterson practices what she preaches. Every summer she removes one piece of her sectional sofa from the family room to provide a direct route and unobstructed view of her terrace.

Some summer effects that she says require more than simple rearrangement (but are worth the greater expense, in her opinion) include adding a skylight or ceiling fan. A skylight may cost from $500 to $1,000 to install, according to Peterson, but the sunlit feeling may be worth the cost many times over.

Warm weather is the best time for installation since the process requires cutting a hole in the roof. Peterson has two skylights in her own kitchen, one in the appliance area to help with task lighting and another over the dining room table.

It's hard to enjoy the bright light of summer if it's making you sweat. One way to minimize summer's heat is with a ceiling fan which keeps air circulating while also cooling the skin naturally. Furthermore, the decorative appeal of ceiling fans — with their hints of the South Seas and the Caribbean — is great during the summer, she said.

Don't abuse your furniture

By Barbara Mayer
AP Newsfeatures

If your furniture could talk, would it ask for better treatment?

According to two authorities, it's unfortunate that wood pieces can't speak up to defend themselves, since many people abuse them out of ignorance or carelessness.

They let the cat lie in the sun — in the middle of the heirloom mahogany dining table. They put their greasy heads against the cherry wood headboard - — every night. Or they drag a piece of furniture up from the basement and apply a paste stripper that removes the old finish — and the patina, thus probably rendering a real antique almost valueless.

Or they may decide to paint it all white which is currently in fashion or to cut the finials off a clock and then lose them.

John Stair, head of the restoration department for Sotheby's, the auction house, tells of the woman who sprayed a Josef Hoffmann chair, circa 1900, red. In its original condition, the chair might have brought between $8,000 and $12,000 at auction. "It cost her $800 to get the red paint removed," he said.

When it comes to old furniture, a good rule is to find out what you have before proceeding. You'll do well to avoid aerosol spray waxes which contain silicone, says Stair, since the substance forms a film. Also avoid oils such as linseed oil and lemon oil for two reasons: not only do they darken a wood finish as time goes by, they also attract dust. Furthermore, once you've applied oil the first time, you've permanently changed the furniture since it will not easily come out, and therefore breaks the cardinal rule to do no harm.

Opt instead for colorless paste wax. You can remove it with mineral spirits, if necessary, and it will penetrate the wood to protect it and keep it from cracking. It's not necessary to wax furniture frequently. Stair suggests a schedule of approximately three times a year.

"After that you can use a slightly damp cloth to dust and clean the furniture," he said. The greatest hazard for fine old furniture is not dirt, he adds; it's lack of humidity. Whereas the average humidity in England is from 55 to 60 percent, in New York which has the worst climate for furniture, it's more like 22 to 28 percent in the winter.

Actually, says the restoration expert, furniture does adjust to the climate in which it finds itself. "The only time you have to worry is if you move to Florida from Maine, or make another extreme change."

Nowadays, much wood furniture comes with a transparent protective nitrocellulose lacquer sealer. The coating actually seals off the wood, so when you apply furniture polish, you are really just cleaning and polishing the exterior sealer, according to Carol Hanson, consumer affairs director for Johnson Wax.

Exhibit is featuring Shaker crafts

By Edward Frost
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — The Shakers retired from the world more than 200 years ago, hoping to create Utopia, but they left instead timeless designs for furniture, tools and other common items.

Schedule

An exhibit, made possible by the United Technologies Corp., will be at the Whitney Museum of American Art through Aug. 31. It will travel to the Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington from Sept. 26 through Jan. 4.

The members of the religious sect, who took a vow of celibacy, lived an austere life marked by communal living and hard work. An exhibit of re than 100 examples of their furniture and other crafts, titled "The Shakers, as Utopians, were not materialists, were not consumers, were not interested in having a lot of things," said June Sprigg, guest curator of the exhibit. "They were interested in spirituality. They created a very simple environment for themselves."

A Shaker bench is a simple thing. A carved pine seat rests on four turned legs, and a slat of birch supported by a row of dowels serves as a back.

But the dowels are tapered slightly at the top, giving the feeling that the back is floating effortlessly. That same feeling of weightless grace exists in Shaker chairs, stands and tables, a function of the attention the makers paid to the proportions of their designs.

Other wordly

"The most appealing thing about Shaker design is its optimism. Those who would lavish care upon a chair, a basket, a clothes hanger or a wheelbarrow clearly believe that life is worthwhile," Ms. Sprigg wrote in the 227-page catalog to the exhibit.

"It is no exaggeration that Shaker design is other worldly. In freeing themselves from worldly taste, the Shakers created a purity of design that endures," she said.

The sect, formally known as the United Society of Believers, was founded in 1774 by Ann Lee, a 39-year-old woman who came to New York from Manchester, England, with eight followers, hoping to form a world free of greed, violence, poverty and lust.

By the time of her death 10 years later, groups of converts were living together in a dozen communities in New York, Maine, Connecticut and New Hampshire. During the 1840s the sect was at its height with 4,000 to 6,000 members in 18 communities that stretched from Maine to Kentucky.

The members devoted their lives to work and celebrated God in dance worship that earned them the nickname Shakers.

Mother Ann, as she was called, "believed the outward appearance of things revealed the inner spirit," Ms. Sprigg wrote. Shakers were taught to avoid needless luxuries, the women relinquishing jewelry and the men their stylish clothes.

Her teaching laid the basis for Shaker life. Their built-in cabinets and cupboards, some with more than a dozen drawers in various sizes, were designed to provide a place for everything. No objects were left out to catch dust.

She insisted on cleanliness and order, recalling the Manchester slums where she was raised.

"Clean your room well; for good spirits will not live where there is dirt. There is no dirt in heaven," Mother Ann wrote.

Benches and chairs were light and easily portable, and could be hung on pegs set into walls in order to clear a floor for dancing.

However, in rejecting the world outside, Shakers found the world rejected them in turn. The designs that now seem to shine with a simple elegance then differed sharply from popular styles that were upholstered, carved, painted and decorated.

Grim clock

When Charles Dickens visited the Shakers in New Lebanon, N.Y., in 1842, he wrote that he entered "a grim room, where several grim hats were hung from grim pegs, and the time was grimly told by a grim clock."

Decline hit the sect by the late 1800s, and by the turn of the century there were about 2,000 members. Today fewer than a dozen members remain in two communities, one in Canterbury, N.H., the other in Sabbathday Lake, Maine.

But their creations have lived beyond them, as Ann Lee intended.

"Do all your work as though you had a thousand years to live, and as you would if you knew you must die tomorrow," she said.

Choice of right tool, woodworker's dilemma

By Wood
A Meredith Magazine

Choosing the right tool for the job presents one of the oldest dilemmas for the home woodworker.

In the case of power tools and cordless tools, you can make a convincing case for both consumer and commercial machines, according to Wood magazine. In most instances, the commercial tools are recommended for quality.

But if a tool won't be used extensively or precision isn't critical, a consumer model may make the most sense when you compare prices.

Consumer tools can cost less than half as much as their commercial counterparts, but their limitations can make them frustrating to use. Consumer screwdrivers, for example, may lack the power, precision and removable battery and clutch featured in the quality commercial models.

In the case of cordless drills and driver-drills, the less-expensive tools may not cause as much aggravation for the home woodworker as they would in precision cutting tools such as routers. Yet, you have to consider the risk of running completely out of juice and having to wait for three to 21 hours to use your tool again.

Changeable batteries featured in commercial tools let you keep one charging while you use the other. By only using one or two sizes, you can purchase tools from the same manufacturer in the same voltage category and use the same charger and batteries.

Consumer tools have built-in power packs. Because the replacement cost isn't much less than the cost of the tool, you can consider consumer tools disposable in this respect. In some instances, it may be wise to buy two or three consumer tools for the price of one commercial unit. The consumer tools won't work as well or last as long, but you can have the convenience of always having one charging.

Community gardens gain in popularity

By S. J. Guffey
Associated Press writer

Got a green thumb and no ground? Consider community gardening.

In vacant lots and on rooftops, in schoolyards and at least one abandoned baseball stadium, thousands of garden spaces are being used this summer for those who want to grow their own food.

The plots come cheap — often under $20 a season, water and tilling included — because sponsoring groups and governments believe a neighborhood gardening effort gives back far more than gardeners take out of the earth.

According to the National Gardening Association of Burlington, Vt., last year saw 91,758 acres in community gardens across the United States tended by more than 126,000 people.

The federal Urban Garden program sponsors gardens in 21 cities. In Boston, 5,000 low-income families will reap the bounty of a vast network of Urban Gardens stretched in and near 40 low-income housing projects.

On a smaller scale are countless swatches of land opened up by churches, clubs, companies or individuals.

Helping low-income families stretch food dollars sparked much of America's community garden fervor. But money is not the only reason such projects thrive.

In Cleveland, where gardening classes were dropped from public schools during the 1981 budget crunch, the drive is on to restore such studies.

A desire to improve science education helped bring school gardening back to Cleveland, according to the Larry Sommers of the National Gardening Association.

Sommers heads community gardening efforts for the nonprofit association, which helped with a one-year project to develop new indoor garden space — using artificial light — for Cleveland's schools.

Kansas City Community Gardens has had 800 garden sites for the last decade. This summer, the city is making its old 11-acre Municipal Stadium available in 1,000-square-foot plots, with water and tilling provided for as little as $5. Those who can afford it will pay $20 for the land's use.

"It's amazing how, over the last five or 10 years, this has grown," says Gary Gilbert, head of Kansas City Community Gardens. "It's the old concept of the victory garden."

(At the height of World War II, backyard and vacant lot efforts to supplement food supplies were growing about 40 percent of the produce America needed.)

Gilbert plans to supplement his own small backyard garden this summer by working an infield plot at Municipal Stadium.

In San Francisco, where the Urban Garden project doesn't mind being known as "SLUG," the Board of Supervisors recently passed a resolution recognizing the importance of community gardens. Director Jay Kilborn himself didn't start gardening until he'd worked with SLUG.

In Boston, where "Boston Urban Gardens" is preferred over "BUG," director Charlotte Kahn says the gardens and accompanying programs built since 1976 "are a very important factor in many people's lives."

Boston Urban Gardens offers training programs for landscape construction and interior plant care. Community beautification projects unite neighbors who have met in the shared gardens.

The National Gardening Association says the typical vegetable gardener last year produced $356 worth of food for a $32 investment in materials.

Repellents that work on bugs

By Better Homes and Gardens
A Meredith Magazine

If fending off mosquitoes, gnats, and other insect pests makes you look as if you've joined a "swat" team, switch strategies and try chemical warfare instead, advises Better Homes and Gardens.

But choose a repellent suited for the job. Any number of products will let you enjoy the outdoors without being pestered.

Entomologists believe that repellents work because the chemicals they contain confuse the insects' sensors — blindfolding them in a way — making it difficult for the bugs to land and bite. The most common chemicals are ethyl hexanediol and N,N-diethyl meta toluamide ("deet"). Either will repel biting insects, but extensive research has shown deet to be the more effective of the two.

The product label lists the major active chemical ingredient (or ingredients) and how much of the active ingredient the product contains. Labels promise anywhere from a few to as many as a dozen hours of protection. These claims may be accurate under certain conditions, but perspiration, evaporation, water and wind all diminish a repellent's effectiveness.

Products with high percentages of deet tend to stay on the job longer than other products. Insect repellents are marketed under a large number of brand names; check labels for lists of ingredients.

Repellents are sold as aerosol and pump sprays, lotions, sticks, and towelettes. When applying, follow these simple steps:

— Cover all exposed skin; hungry insects will find even the smallest unprotected area.

— Hold an aerosol repellent container as upright as possible, about 6 to 8-inches away from the skin, and spray with a sweeping motion until the area is slightly moist. When applying to face and neck, spray into the hand and rub the product onto skin.

— Avoid inhaling the spray and don't spray indoors.

— When using a lotion or liquid repellent, pour product into palm of hand, rub hands together, and then spread product lightly.

— Wash hands before handling food or cooking utensils.

— Keep repellent away from synthetic fabrics, plastics or paint. These materials may become stained or damaged.

— Discontinue use and consult a medical professional if a skin rash or swelling starts after applying repellent.

— Cover an infant with lightweight clothing or a blanket rather than applying repellent. Infants may spread the repellent to their eyes and mouths.

If you can't use an insect repellent, don't give up and stay indoors. Protect yourself by avoiding facial cosmetics, hair spray, and perfume. All of these attract insects. Wear light-colored clothing, which is less attractive to insects than darker colors. Avoid vigorous swatting or arm waving and move away from people who are slapping at bugs. These actions tend to advertise there's a meal handy.

Police, court briefs

Taken for a ride

NEWTON — A gas station attendant was taken for a ride Friday after a woman allegedly refused to pay for some gas and the attendant jumped on the hood of her car as she was leaving the station.

According to police, the woman stopped at the Leahy Exxon station on Beacon Street in Newton Centre and asked for $3 worth of gas. She gave the attendant her credit card, but as he was making out the purchase slip, he noticed the card expired in August 1985.

The woman reportedly told the attendant that the card was good anyway, so he telephoned Exxon and was told that the card expired last August, just as it said on the card. The woman also called Exxon to argue that the card was good, but to no avail, police said.

She then announced that she was leaving and wasn't going to pay for the gas, according to police reports. The attendant stood in front of her car to block her way, but she drove ahead anyway, and he jumped onto the hood of her car.

The attendant told police that the woman accelerated as she headed east on Beacon Street. The attendant said he demanded that the woman stop to let him off, but she didn't. Meanwhile, he managed to kick out one of her windows, according to the report.

He was finally able to jump off the car at the Hammond Pond Parkway intersection and he said he hitchhiked back to work.

Police said they would obtain a complaint against the woman in district court.

School vandalized

WABAN — Vandals broke into the Zervas School on Beethoven Avenue July 15 and damaged a soda machine, two tables and threw eggs on the walls throughout the building, police said. The vandals gained entrance into the building through a skylight, police said.

A clean get away

WEST NEWTON — A man had 13 shirts stolen from a washing machine at West Newton Coin Laundry on Washington Street while he went shopping at CVS for 10 minutes last Wednesday night, police said.

Camera, lens stolen

NEWTON CENTRE — A Minolta 35mm camera, zoom lens and assorted women's jewelry were stolen from a Albion Place home that was broken into Sunday morning, police said. Among the jewelry stolen were a set of emerald and diamond earrings. Entrance was gained by removing a storm window and raising an open window, according to reports.

Arrested for theft

NEWTON — A 32-year-old Boston woman was arrested for shoplifting Friday afternoon at the Heartland Drug Store on Watertown Street, police said. Police said the woman tried to conceal a number of items while she was in the store.

Teen found guilty

NEWTON — Andrea Watson, 18, of Newton, was found guilty in district court recently of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, being a disorderly person and malicious destruction of city property over $100, according to court records. Judge Monte G. Basbas gave the defendant one year's probation and ordered her to pay $570 in restitution. Watson will appeal her case to a Middlesex Suerior Court jury of six on Aug. 6.

Watson, a Newton North High School student, allegedly assaulted another student with a hammer in the school hallway April 14, police said. When officers responded, Watson reacted "violently and hysterically" to their interrogation, police said. She was arrested and brought to the Newton City Jail overnight where she kicked a one-foot hole in the cell wall and clogged the toilet with the matress stuffing that caused flooding, according to police reports.

Indecently exposed

WEST NEWTON - A man indecently exposed himself to a Newton woman at the intersection of Chestnut and Washington streets while she was walking toward the Bay Bank Monday afternoon, police said. The suspect is described as a 30-year-old white male, about 5-feet-10-inches tall with a medium build. He fled the scene of the incident in what the victim believed was a black Bronco truck, according to reports.

Cassette deck taken

NEWTON — An Alpine AM-FM cassette deck worth $250 was reported stolen out of a car parked on Grove Street Saturday morning. Police said the thief smashed a window in the car in order to get inside.

Detector stolen

NEWTON — A 1981 Jaguar parked on Fuller Street was broken into and an Escort radar detector worth $250 was stolen, according to a report received by police Saturday. The driver's side window in the car was smashed by the thief, police said.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Bonica Jr.

Linda Sauro is married to Stephen Bonica Jr.

NEWTON — Linda Sauro, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Sauro of Cook Street, Newton and Mr. Stephen Bonica Jr. were united in marriage on April 27 at Our Lady Help of Christians Church in Newton.

Stephen Bonica Jr. is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Bonica of LaFayette Street, Waltham.

Performing the afternoon double ring ceremony was the Rev. William F. Sharkey Jr.

A reception following the ceremony was held at Lizabeth's in Westboro.

The bride chose her friend, Janine Stewart of Newton to be her maid of honor. Attending as bridesmaids were: Rose Marie Bonica of Waltham, sister of the bridegroom; Deborah Sauro of Cook Street, Newton, cousin of the bride; and Kari LaCamera of Dudley Road, Newton Center, friend of the bride.

The bride wore a fitted gown accented with pearls and trimmed with re-embroidered alencon lace, a natural waist and high neck, cathedral length train and long puffed sleeves with points.

She carried a cascade of white roses, stephanotis and baby's breaths accented with English ivy.

The bridegroom chose Steven Smith to perform the duties of best man. Fulfilling the duties of ushers were: Stephen Sauro and Richard Sauro, both of Cook Street, Newton, brothers of the bride; and Skippy Salvo of Arlington, friend of the bridegroom.

The bride is a graduate of Newton North High School and Aquinas Junior College. She is presently employed as an executive secretary at Seidman and Seidman.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Waltham High School and Bentley College. He is currently employed as a programmer/analyst at Blue Cross Blue Shield.

After a cruise to the Caribbean, the couple will make their home in South Shore.

The Kesher and Business & Professional Chapter, a group of young working women, will hold a pool party on July 30 from 5 to 8 p.m. at the home of Ruth Whitman, Blake Road, Brookline.

Women interested in getting acquainted with the group are invited to attend. Bring your bathing suit, a towel and a bag lunch, dessert and coffee will be served.

Collections of $5 per person will be required at the door. Proceeds to benefit the Na'amat USA Scholarship Fund. For reservations call Ruth Whitman at 277-7946 or the Greater Boston Council office at 731-8378.

Golda Meir Park

Na'amat USA will be a major participant in a new Jewish National Fund project: Golda Meir Park at Nahal Revium, Israel. Na'amat USA is undertaking the development of a special section of the 450 acre park, which will include a main parkway, a network of foot paths, an area planted with 40 different species of arid-zone trees and vegetation, watered by drip irrigation. Na'amat USA members are urged to become part of this exciting and ambitious project. To assure proper credit, specify that your tree or order any other type of JNF contribution is being made through Na'amat USA.

Na'amat Executives

Na'amat USA eastern area coordinator, Deborah Weiner and eastern area director, Judy Dill are coming to Boston on Thursday, July 17 at 7:30 p.m. and they will meet with the officers of the newly formed Kesher Business & Professional Chapter. On Friday, July 18 at 10 a.m. a special meeting will be held for all the presidents of the Greater Boston Council's Chapters. The meetings will be held at the council office.

Membership

Judy Spivak, life membership chairman of the greater Boston Council, Na'amat USA, has arranged an easy way for the many annual members wishing to become life members: the council office will accept payments, by the week or month, from the annual members to be applied towards a Life Membership. Please call 731-8378 to plan a payment schedule. Life members do not pay annual dues, the membership is for life.

Entertainment

Superstar performance

Arts in the Parks will present "Jesus Christ Superstar" July 31, Aug. 1 and 2 at 8 p.m. in Day Junior High School. Cast members include, from left, Rebecca Boswell, Jo Louie, Pally Armsby, Tim Bogart and Jael Wanger.

Arts Camp plans supper and festival

NEWTON — The Creative Summer Arts Camp of the All Newton Music School will have a potluck supper and festival day July 24 at 6 p.m. on the school grounds, 321 Chestnut St., West Newton.

The camp, under the direction of Mikke Krasin, is an introduction to all the arts. The children, ages 4 to 8 years, are involved daily for three weeks with art, music, movement and drama. On festival day they will share with parents and each other their total camp experience.

The first week, the older campers presented an improvised play "The Magical Musical Boy." The second week the children enhanced their production by making the set, props and even costumes under the supervision of artist Joanne Baker.

The children experienced movement with dancer Tom Krushnick. "They are just beginning to realize body language and recognize deliberate movement and it's great to see their enthusiasm," Krushnick said.

Janet Fuchs plays rhythm instruments which help the children with expression and coordination. "Fun games and new songs were learned here which the children are sure to use in play with old and new friends long after summer camp has ended," Krasin notes.

Krasin continued, "This is the second year of Creative Summer Arts Camp at ANMS and it is very successful. We have expanded the number of campers to 28. The staff are professionals, living and working in their fields. Gina Bowler, registered nurse and program coordinator, insures the smooth transition of activites along with four great assistants: Kathy and Willi Graef, Leah Wolf and Jesse Rudner.

"It is wonderful for children to have such a positive experience. Time has been spent each week making sure the children have a balance of work and play and summer fun.

"Swimming at Crystal Lake was a great field trip and the children have been commended on their good behavior. The music school grounds provide a lovely natural setting for outdoor play and picnic lunches. Each Wednesday special guest musicians and storytellers further touched the youngsters imaginations."

All Newton Music School Creative Summer Arts camper Jonathan Taylor of Newton and Arts instructor Joanne Baker working on wood sculpture.

All Newton Music School is a community music school which offers a wide variety of excellent musical instruction and programming for children and adults throughout the year to residents of Newton, Boston and the surrounding communities. You are invited to visit the music school or call for for information 527-4553.

Peanut Butter and Jelly dancers stick to basics

By Laura Shucart
Correspondent

NEWTON — Mark, a member of the Peanut Butter and Jelly Dance Company asked, "What do you have when you put peanut butter, jelly and bread together?"

"A sandwich!" immediately shouted the audience of Newton Center Acres campers and young children with their parents and grandparents who were gathered at the Tyler Terrace Park last Wednesday.

Mark continued, "What do you have when you combine an artist with an athlete?" to which the group responded, "A dancer!"

This dialogue was part of an educational/performance program by the Peanut Butter and Jelly Dance Company. Company members had illustrated and related the artistic and athletic components in dance movement with a delight, youthfulness and simplicity that was refreshing.

Despite a sultry day, defective sound system and the enticement of nearby playground equipment, the dance company created a magical space in which they engaged the young audience in their discoveries.

A blue curtain hung from a wooden frame and a lime border on the grass defined the boundaries of their space. Costumes and props were simple.

Nicole, Mark and Susan consistently connected the energetic focus, skill and grace of athletic and dance movement, whether warming up with head rolls, waist stretches, lunges and leg swings, portraying the competition in Aesop's fable, "The Tortoise and the Hare," or contending for position in their piece, "1-2-3- Go!."

They skillfully isolated the elements of time, space and quality, in dance. The contrast of Nicole's slow, steady back kicks and side stretches to Mark's abbreviated tuck jumps and frantic runs in the fable, was striking.

The performers explored movements involving a hand shake, leg kick and head roll. With simple rhythmic changes and syncopation, the movements were transformed. By connecting them, they had created a "combination."

In "1-2-3- Go!," the dancers clad in white T-shirts, shorts and sneakers, uniformly stretched at the start line of an apparent track meet; however, differently-paced running evolved into other forms such as a tug o'war and back flips.

Having explored the element of time, one of the dancers posed the question, "What about creativity?" After all, artists create "pictures full of shape." As Nicole held up a poster with a triangle, circle, square, parallel lines and squiggly lines, the children identified each form.

Eager volunteers were sculpted into original small and large free form works. The children laughed when the dancer's contorted their bodies into these shapes for a subsequent skit.

Yet, shapes take on different qualities depending upon how they are formed. The sharp striking of a drum, the irresolute shaking of a rattle and the melodious flow of a harmonica stimulated different shapes, demonstrated with the dancers' arms.

Arms shot up with a clenched fist, were waved and shaken or floated upward.

The Company members incorporated each of the basic elements of movement in their fanciful, yet life-like piece, "Buddies." Nicole, Mark and Susan became players abandoning themselves to their activities. Nicole and Susan crouched and darted to escape being tagged by each other when blindfolded while all three leapt and rolled over each other in turn as if being juggled.

Within a variety of interesting structures, the Peanut Butter and Jelly Dance Company depicted and articulated their ingenuity and skills as performers and educators. Is a dancer an athlete or an athlete a dancer?

Kid's concert at North

NEWTON — An event that promises to be a highlight of the summer for Newton residents of all ages — the Rosen/Shontz concert sponsored by the Arts in the Parks program of the Newton Parks and Recreation Department, July 30, will be held at the Newton North High School football field.

Making personal work

By Raymond J. Cabot

Personal ads are about the best and most inexpensive way of meeting new and compatible people. For some, this has proven to be true. Others have been disappointed. Why? The key lies in both how ads are worded when published and how one responds to an ad. Some of the following suggestions will greatly improve one's success ratio.

In both publishing and responding to ads, some basic information is mandatory. When you meet someone at a dance or party or any kind of social gathering, you immediately have a pretty good idea of the person's height, weight, age, and any distinguishing features. These items should be included in an ad or response; it's basic information that is obvious upon meeting so why skirt the issue, or worse yet, be deceitful!

What is your marital status? Some people will not date anyone who is separated or widowed. Some will only date people who are divorced or who have never been married.

Most people will say religion is immaterial. Yet, nearly everyone has had some kind of religious training grouwing up that influences their personality and lifestyle. Chances are that a fundamentalist and a Unitarian Universalist are not going to create a relationship that is free of basic conflicts. The same can be said of philosophical and world views that touch upon ethics and universal morality. Those who favor the inherent madness of nuclear proliferation are not going to be compatible with those who favor peace. Those who have been conditioned to believe that abortion of a fetus is murder and are unaware of the fact that abortion was allowed by the Roman Catholic Church for 1500 years will not be free of conflict with those who favor the right of free choice.

Many words sound nice, but impart little insight into personality. Everyone believes that he or she is "sincere", and "honest", and has a "Good sense of humor". Are you amused by slapstick or wit? Do you find Joan Rivers funny or does she stimulate your gag reflex? Would you pay to see George Carlin and protest a performance by Don Rickles?

There are few people who do not attend movies at times. Would you rather see a "chainsaw massacre" film or an "Out of Africa" type movie? What is you education level? What are your hobies? What is your goal in meeting someone new? marriage? a long-term relationship? a few laughs and a little fun with no involvement? People have many goals and those who hare similar ones will probably enjoy one another more.

There are endless points that can be covered, but the substance revolves around specificity of personality on the one hand, and generality on the other. To specify that someone should be between the ages of say, 32-36 implies that if the perfect person were 37, he or she would be unacceptable. Wouldn't an age range of "30's" accomplish the same goal, but leave room for flexibility? Lastly, the stationary one uses reflects a level of sensitivity. A lined page torn out of a notebook may bring your message to someone, but how does that impression compare to note paper that you could pick up for $ .79 on sale? Even a plain sheet of paper imparts a much better impression that yellow-lined paper. A little objective thought can reap huge benefits and lead to much happiness.

PRAYER TO ST. JUDE

"May the sacred heart of Jesus be forever adored, glorified, loved & preserved throughout the world now & forever. Sacred heart of Jesus pray for us. St. Jude, worker of miracles, pray for us. Luggage lighter as time went by

By Barbara Mayer
AP Newsfeatures

The first person to take his home with him undoubtedly was Noah.

Later voyagers traveled lighter, but not necessarily much lighter. In 1715, for example, the third Earl of Burlington arrived at Dover, England, after less than a year abroad with 878 pieces of luggage, according to a catalog from an exhibition of designs for travel at Cooper-Hewitt Museum.

The catalog (the show was on through July 13 at the New York museum) also observes the history of luggage has been from heavy to lightweight, from complex to simple and from elegant to plain.

One reason for this progression has been changes in transportation. Another is the relaxation of dress codes. But standardization of comforts has also helped. The catalog tells us that an early 19th-century writer advised carrying sheets, pillows and blankets, a mosquito net, medicine chest, eating utensils and pistols, among other supplies.

Today, travelers tend to go for durability and light weight when it comes to selecting a suitcase, according to the Luggage and Leather Goods Information Bureau. The trade group recently offered some tips for purchasing luggage for summer travel.

They note that vinyl, nylon, leather and injection-molded suitcases are readily found.

Nylon, a strong abrasion-resistant material, is graded by denier. A high denier indicates strength and a minimum for luggage is 400 denier, woven in a tight construction. If less than that, the nylon should be backed by another material such as vinyl or nylon taffeta. Stain-repeller treatment is also recommended for nylon luggage.

Though costly and heavy, leather luggage is currently popular. When shopping, be aware that top grain or full grain leather is the only kind which can be labeled genuine leather. It is most desirable because it is strongest, wears best over time, takes finishing best and distinctive markings make each piece unique.

The underlayers of the hide are known as splits because they are split off from the top grain. Split leather is more likely to show wear and isn't as durable as top grain leather. You may find the words "processed leather" on some luggage. Processing makes one type of skin look like another: for example, calfskin with alligator markings. Such a product should be identified as alligator-embossed or alligator-grained calf.

Duty-free shops offer big bargins

By The Associated Press

Asians are sophisticated duty-free shoppers. Americans are the least duty-free conscious buyers.

That's the assessment of David Bernstein, president of the International Association of Airport Duty Free Stores.

"While smart Asian and European travelers have realized substantial savings for years by shopping duty-free stores, Americans need a greater awareness of the benefits," he says.

Duty-free stores are open only to international travelers who are departing a country, and diplomats. There are no duties or taxes on the products they sell.

Duty-free shops can be found at many border crossings; on cruise ships; certain local markets — such as St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands, and at most airports that have international flights.

The largest duty-free outlet in the world, Bernstein says, is at the Honolulu International Airport, followed by Anchorage Airport, then J.F.K. Airport in New York, Los Angeles Airport and Miami Airport.

Expo visit is like trip around the world

By Joy Stilley
AP Newsfeatures Writer

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Foreign travel may be lighter than usual this year, but those who want to see the sights of other lands can take a trip around the globe at Expo 86 here.

They can view the scenic wonders from Australia to Yugoslavia in slides and films, taste such ethnic foods as musk-ox steak and Beijing duck, buy native handcrafts, and even have their souvenir "passports" stamped as they visit the pavilions of more than 50 countries.

Photographs, slide shows, videos, Imax and 3-D films, along with 360-degree screens, seem to put the viewer right in the midst of the mountains, waters and cities of the far-flung lands.

These international travelers can make their way from Great Britain to the Yukon, from Brunei to Costa Rica or from Cuba to Kenya by monorail, rather than by plane. And, with a comfortable pair of shoes, much of the "world" is accessible on foot.

The festival, which runs through Oct. 13, focuses on transportation and communication. The theme is carried out not only by such diverse on site transportation as the monorail, ferries, gondolas, sky trains, France's people mover system, and Japan's High Speed Surface Transport, but also through display of vehicles ranging from far in the past to the future.

China, for instance, has a replica of a bronze chariot dating from about 200 B.C.; Korea shows a model of a 16th-century turtle ship, the first armor-plated ship; while Indonesia features a copy of a 500-year-old Javanese chariot.

In the Japanese area, brief rides are offered on the experimental HSST, an electromagnetic train that floats above the rails. At the U.S.S.R. pavilion the public can go through a Soviet space lab.

On "Highway 86," crossing the fairground, examples of every form of locomotion are immobilized in a gray coating that makes them look like victims of Mount St. Helens ash fallout: vans, trucks, bicycles, motorcycles, ships, tanks, skates, snowshoes, planes, helicopters, wheelchairs, and even running shoes.

A few of the actual bricks from the Great Wall of China are on hand in the pavilion of the People's Republic of China, with visitors invited to touch them as they go by a model of that imposing structure.

Exotic foods abound: riesenbockwurst in the Munich Festhaus, served along with oom-pah-pah band music; salmon grilled by Salish Indians at the First Nations restaurant; sate — skewers of chicken and beef dipped in peanut sauce — at the Malaysian pavilion; eel and octopus, along with Japan's sushi; and bannock bread washed down with drinks cooled by glacial ice at the igloo-shaped Northwest Territories spot.

The Caribbean pavilion offers guava, mango, papaya and coconut ice cream. At Foodlife, there are daily cooking demonstrations and samplings of international foods.

Works of art normally seen only in distant museums are on view, including priceless Inca gold artifacts in Peru's pavilion, an original Goya painting of King Charles III of Spain in that country's space, and the Ramses II and His Times exhibit containing artifacts from the reign of the Egyptian pharaoh.

There are plenty of indigenous items and keepsakes to take home: carved wooden masks from the Ivory Coast; curry powder and teas from Sri Lanka; jewelry made from Singapore's national flower, the orchid, coated with 22-karat gold; batik cloth and pewter from Malaysia; fans from Spain, hand-knotted rugs from Pakistan, brimmed digger hats from Australia; Swiss army knives.

And, while they are not exactly cash and carry, cars from Yugoslavia, Romania and many other countries are on view.

Have home, will travel

By Prudence Heller
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Have home, will travel.

That is what millions of Americans do. They travel and take home along with them — "home" being a recreation vehicle, or RV.

The Recreation Vehicle Industry Association quotes a survey indicating that nearly 10 percent of all U.S. vehicle-owning families own an RV. That means 7 million households. In addition, 18 percent said they were likely to buy or rent one in the future.

Like people, RVs come in all shapes and sizes, with more or less dollars attached. They range from motor homes with all the amenities, including bathrooms and modern kitchens, in the range of $30,000 to $50,000 or more, to folding camping trailers costing about $4,000.

Some, like motor homes, are all of a piece with what propels them. Others, like folding camping trailers, are hauled by the family car or truck.

People of all ages use them. But statistics quoted at the 1985-86 Travel Outlook Forum indicated that the 55-59 age group is especially keen on this mode of travel. Eighteen percent use it — more than use airplanes.

RV travel is relatively cheap.

The Go Camping America Committee reports that a study finds RV travel on average costs only half as much as car-hotel vacations, one-third as much as bus-hotel and train-hotel trips, and one-quarter the price of air-hotel vacations.

Also, there's the idea of camping itself. Some RVs are so elegant — with stereo and air conditioning — that they hardly suggest sitting around an outdoor fire roasting hot dogs and slapping mosquitoes. But one can always step outside and try it.

Providing campgrounds for these millions of travelers is a business in itself. The Go Camping America Committee puts the campground total at 13,000, some private, some public; some free, some with a price tag. The federal government is one major provider.

There are also "CampResorts," where the RV aficionado can buy a lot, using the site whenever he wants. Or he can become a resort member for a one-time fee and have unlimited access to all campsites connected with the resort on a space available basis.

RV travelers don't have to give up their favorite mode of travel when they go abroad. Providers will have an RV waiting for them in Great Britain, Germany, Italy and some other countries.

And one cruise line allows travelers to take their RVs with them on the boat if they're headed for Alaska or the Mexican Riviera.

The RV crowd has its own clubs, sometimes with their own publications. Some clubs take in all RV aficionados. Some, like the Cortez Motorhome Club, are devoted to one particular make, in this case the Cortez, which hasn't been made since 1979 but can still be seen on the road by the hundreds.

A career opportunity currently exists for a team oriented individual to supervise our housekeeping function on the evening shift (Monday-Friday, 3pm-11:00pm). Responsibilities include acting as a liaison between hospital staff and the housekeeping department, setting cleaning and project priorities, establishing and adjusting staffing schedules and participating in the evaluation of staff. The qualified applicant will be an effective communicator with knowledge of basic cleaning procedures, equipment, and floor and carpet maintenance program. Supervisory experience, preferably in a healthcare setting, is required.

Secretary
President's Office

Reporting to the Executive Assistant, this position is an excellent opportunity to begin or develop your professional secretarial career. Do you have an interest in greeting and assisting hospital staff, physicians, officials and the public? Do you possess excellent typing and transcription skills? We invite you to apply to join the President's support team. We require superior organizational and secretarial skills. Previous word processing experience is strongly preferred. An Associate's degree in secretarial science or equivalent required.

Communications and Coordination Clerk

Our Plant Services team, including general maintenance, clinical engineering, grounds and utilities, is seeking an individual to coordinate a variety of departmental clerical activities. Responsibilities include answering phones, coordinating and dispatching work orders, data entry, maintaining files, records and logs, and assisting the department secretary as needed. The individual will use a computerized system to perform some of the above tasks. Previous clerical experience, excellent telephone skills, and typing are required. Familiarity with computers and data entry as well as experience in a maintenance environment is a plus.

We offer a competitive salary and a full range of benefits including Earned Time, dental insurance and free parking. NWH is a 350-bed teaching hospital located near the Woodland MBTA station on the Riverside Line. Newton-Wellesley Hospital, 2014 Washington Street, Newton, MA 02162.

WITHOUT ADVERTISING EVEN THE BEST IDEAS TAKE AGES TO CATCH ON.

Every now and then, a new product becomes popular by word of mouth alone. But that process usually takes many months. Sometimes years. By then, the company that makes the new product may be in serious trouble—if they're around at all.

Advertising is the surest way to get an idea to the public. By advertising a new product or service, more people are able to try it more quickly than if it were allowed to "catch on" by itself.

Good ideas become popular right away and bad ideas...well, who needs a square wheel, anyway?

BC kicks off 10—year plan

$14 million in new construction

By Les Orsini
Staff Writer

CHESTNUT HILL — Within the next two weeks, Boston College will begin razing Alumni Hall as part of its 10-year program to house more students on campus, upgrade facilities and create more parking.

The university has already leveled Philomatheia Hall next door on Commonwealth Avenue. Two dormitories housing some 380 students will replace those buildings. The $14 million construction should be completed by January 1988, according to Dr. Laurence Barton, director of BC's office of communities affairs.

The new dorms will have an English Tudor and Gothic look with bay windows and slate or clay tile roofs. BC trustees spent an additional $1 million for design and materials so the two buildings will blend with nearby Gasson Towers and St. Mary's Hall, Barton said.

"When people drive by and see us, they will see a more aesthetic campus," Barton said.

Since the university is holding enrollment at 14,400 students, the dorms will enable more students to stay on campus, he said.

At present, BC has living quarters for approximately 5,400 of its roughly 8,000 undergraduate students. In all, it hopes to add 1,100 beds.

"Most of them want to live on campus," Barton said. "If you come to college you like to be at the center of the action."

BC's trustees next year will likely discuss replacing roughly a score of small apartment buildings on five acres of BC's Boston campus.

"The students are living in two-story, pre-fabricated units," Barton said. "They were built to last six years. They've lasted 16. We'd like to build three or four modest- sized dorms five to six stories in height."

Newton and Brighton residents have asked BC to build more on campus parking because students' cars - especially during athletic events - often take up spaces on surrounding streets.

The university has hired Sasaki Associates of Watertown to study and design a possible new garage for 400 to 700 vehicles, Barton said.

The 10-year program began last year with the construction of a garage over an existing lot resulting in 300 additional spaces.

BC athletics will be a direct beneficiary of the program.

'Secret' meetings criticized

Debate 'laced with expletives'

By Les Orsini
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A Finance Committee discussion of budget expenses for the city clerk's office touched off charges Monday night of secret meetings and infringement by the city's Executive Department on the Board of Aldermen's domain.

Aldermen Richard McGrath and Richard Bullwinkle alleged board President Michael Malec arranged secret meetings to discuss the contract of City Clerk Edward English.

All municipal department heads are scheduled to receive a 5 percent raise except English, according to Bullwinkle and McGrath.

FinCom Chairman Paul Coletti said the city clerk missed time from his job because he was being treated for a medical problem at an out-of-state hospital.

"We wanted to deliver the message that we wanted stability (in the city clerk's office)," said Coletti after the meeting. "In no case were any of us not supportive of Ed."

The city clerk and his assistant, Grace Lennon, are employed by the board, which determines the conditions of their contracts.

McGrath and Bullwinkle also charged Malec and Coletti engaged in discussions with members of the Executive Department over new equipment that could add work to the clerk's office.

During Monday night's meeting Coletti vehemently denied those sessions violated any rules of the board. They contained no standard agenda and were informal advisory gatherings as are often held between the mayor's office and aldermen he said.

Neither Bullwinkle nor McGrath volunteered their advice as difficulties with the city clerk's office surfaced earlier this year, Coletti said.

"When there was a problem, that was the time for people to rally around and come up with an answer," Coletti said.

Traffic whizzes by the recently closed median on Rte. 9

Fatal crossroad closed

By Maureen Azzato
Staff Writer

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — The state Department of Public Works (DPW) closed the median on Route 9 at the Woodcliff Road intersection for a 45-day trial period Monday, and, despite the traffic inconvenience it may cause, many residents support the action.

About 10 years ago, the state recommended closing the median strip to make the intersection safer, but Woodcliff Road residents on the south side of Route 9 lobbied against it. It seems the tragic death of a Newton Highlands resident at that intersection in June has caused a change of heart in the Woodcliff Road neighborhood.

"This intersection has always been horrendous," Louis Frank said. "I can't even tell you how many accidents I've seen there because of people running the red light on Route 9. It's unreal.

"I think this median closing is a good idea, but I'm afraid it may result in more speeding and more blatant disregard of the lights on Route 9 since people will soon realize traffic won't be crossing there any more."

Frank said the traffic inconvenience is minimal. He said there are many pros and cons to the strip closing, but it's a good idea that should be carefully studied and monitored.

"We're caught in between two evils. I'm not sure what the solution is," Frank said. "This is a step in the right direction and maybe after the trial period they will be able to find what can really be done to make it safer."

The state's action at this intersection was a result of angry residents who gathered over 1,500 signatures on a petition that was given to the city's Traffic Commission several weeks ago.

The commission, with the help of Rep. Susan Schur (D-Newton), requested the state close the median temporarily. Last week, the state posted a sign warning residents of the upcoming median closing.

Public beach planned along Charles River

By Lauren McFalls
Assistant News Editor

NEWTON — For the first time in 40 years, a public beach may open in August along the Charles River in Waltham, Newton or Wellesley.

Julie O'Brien, Metropolitan District Commission chief planner, said the agency is involved in "in-house discussions" on opening a public beach in one of the communities situated along the "mid-Charles," and has been testing water quality and the river bottom.

Although a public beach opening is not definite, she said MDC representatives will be meeting with community members about the prospect within two weeks.

According to Rita Baron, executive director of the Charles River Watershed Association, the beach will open in August.

"We asked them to set it up at the beginning of the summer," she said, but "bureaucratic delays" held up the opening.

She said this will be the first of 10 beaches to reopen since they were closed 40 years ago because of pollution.

"The river is swimable," she said, except in the rain, when dirt from the street is washed into the water. Contributing to the cleanliness of the river is better environmental controls over what is discharged into the Charles, said Baron.

In addition, she said, active landfills are no longer located along the river, and new treatment plants have reduced sewage problems. The federal Clean Water Act of 1972 has been an "enormous help," Baron added.

In fact, the watershed association has held six annual swims in the Charles since 1979. But prior to last year's swim at Novitiate Park in Newton, two cars were pulled out of the river. "So we say, if you

Mixed housing ... a mixed blessing

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — There is a serious shortage of housing in this area even for those who can afford to shell out six or seven figures to purchase a piece of God's little green acre.

For those who cannot come up with the cash, the problem is even more acute. One solution has been to combine low-income families, elderly, handicapped and market-rate tenants in one facility.

While this interdependence on socio-economic backgrounds can create a more financially sound method of developing new housing, according to Mayor Theodore Mann, other questions have been raised about the compatibility of bringing together such diverse groups under one roof.

Newton has two mixed-income facilities, the Weeks House and New Falls, with a third, on the site of the former St. Jean's School, soon to be opened.

> 'I love children, but you don't want them around you all day long when you reach a certain age.'
> Nonantum resident

A few months ago, quiet doubts about mixed-income housing's feasibility came out in the open during a heated city hall meeting between the Newton Centre Neighborhood Association and tenants at the Weeks House. Complaints about families with young children and loud parties pestering seniors served to draw battle lines between those who believe mixed-income housing is a viable solution to the housing crunch and those who do not.

One Weeks family, according to Newton Community Development Foundation (NCDF) Executive Director Richard Bohn, is undergoing eviction proceedings "for having wild parties and serving alcohol."

The incident highlights resident's concerns about senior-youth "turf wars."

"I love children," former Weeks House Tenants Association President Marian Cohen said about the noise complaints. "I just don't know if it is a good idea to have children and seniors living together like this."

The Weeks, with 71 seniors, eight families, 13 handicapped persons and market-rate tenants who pay as much as $850 per month in rent has been hailed by some as a prime example of the creation of housing from an otherwise abandoned and decaying school house.

"Mixed-income housing helps Newton to meet one of the social obligations in our environment today," Mann, a long-time proponent of mixed-income housing, says. "Because of high building costs, inflation and the high cost of land, it is virtually impossible for the young and old alike, even if they are of moderate income, to find reasonably priced housing in any major area of the United States."

The affordable housing crunch, according to the mayor, is even worse in the greater Boston area.

"Newton has recognized this obligation to provide affordable housing so people of modest incomes can have the opportunity to live here," he says. "Therefore, we have embarked upon a program to creatively use and reuse existing properties owned by the city and we will continue to look for opportunites for housing as more buildings become available. We want to expand the base of affordable housing in the city."

Others, however, see the Weeks and similar facilities as a constant battle ground.

Even before the problems at the Weeks surfaced, there has been opposition to a proposed mixed-income facility at the former St. Jean's School in Nonantum. One neighbor, who wishes to remain anonymous, cites complaints similar to those raised by Cohen as reason for opposition to the proposal.

"I don't know anyone who would want to move in there," the source says of St. Jean's. "It appears to me that children and elderly are not going to get along in the same building. I love children, but you don't want them around you all day long when you reach a certain age."

The source adds because the St. Jean's proposal calls for housing seniors just out of nursing homes, their precarious health makes it even less appealing to have "children running around, making a lot of noise," according to the source.

In addition to senior-youth disputes, there is also concern about the mix of elderly and low-income families living in subsidized housing.

Joseph DePasquale, the former ward alderman for the St. Jean's neighborhood, says he led a fight three years ago to have the scope of the project reduced from the original proposal.

"The original proposal called for 10 family units," he says. "We thought that was too many and we asked that it be reduced. The city agreed to a compromise of six family units, which is more along what could be put in there according to the 10 Percent housing ordinance if it were built by a private developer."

According to DePasquale, subsidized family housing would be easier for the neighborhood to accept on a smaller scale.

"The people in the neighborhood considered 10 units too many to intergrate into the area," he says. "On a broad scale, large-scale family units don't work. The way to do it is on a small scale, like the compromise."

The problems at the Weeks, the Nonantum source says, have raised even more concern about St. Jean's.

"The problems at the Weeks prove our concerns are not unfounded," the source says. "Those kind of problems between the elderly and the children are what this community has been against all along."

The source adds "it is up to the city now" to make sure things run smoothly at St. Jean's.

"We did not want this, but we will live with it. We will be willing to meet the people who move in there halfway. It is up to them, and the city, to make sure this works."

According to Mann, the city does not move people into a facility and walk away from it.

"There is a mix of people in every environment," Mann says. "There are people of the same age who don't get along and people of different ages who don't get along. It all depends on the people involved.

"We do have agencies prepared with programs to deal with these problems," he adds. "Human Services, the Newton Housing Authority and private agencies like the NCDF, which puts aside money to deal with the human concerns of mixed-income housing."

While Mann downplays the problems, Kerry Mangan, management officer for the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency (MHFA), says tenant troubles similar to those at the Weeks are nothing new.

"This is a topic people have been having fun with for years," Mangan, whose agency oversees subsidized housing in the state, says facetiously. "Four years ago, a New York City commission did a study on elderly-youth turf wars in mixed-income sites, not only subsidized, but any kind of apartment development where the elderly and young cohabitate. This really has become a problem in housing developments across the country."

The tensions, Mangan says, come when young people "infringe" on senior "turf."

"Maybe some of the older people are upset if the kids are hanging out in the community room or sitting on the front porch," he says. "Also, what young people do for recreation is not necessarily compatible with what the elderly want in terms of a place to live."

Mangan says architects and sociologists have been aware of this for years.

"Architects have become concerned with creating spaces for each individual," he says. "This has been something people in housing have been concerned with for a while."

Another altenative, he says, is for a building's management team to provide for separation of elderly and young.

"Mangagement has to pay close attention to the problems and address both side's needs," he says. "Management should set aside separate time and space for children's and elderly activities. To get folks together, it would be a good idea to have a crafts fair or building picnic, but it is also important to have separation. The elderly need a place they can go to be by themselves. That can help to reduce tensions."

Elderly needs study in works

By Les Orsini
Staff Writer

NEWTON — When Cooperative Living of Newton Inc. (CLN) set up its home for "shared living" on Newtonville Avenue 3½ years ago, its leaders thought that was just the beginning.

Bolstered by $20,000 from the city's Community Development Program, CLN expects to begin an 18-month study of Newton's elderly housing alternatives in October.

"Our original plan was to set up a house like this in every village in Newton," said Virginia Robinson, CLN co-president.

But they later discovered that shared living — bringing primarily elderly people together in one home — was not the housing answer for every senior citizen.

CLN must raise around $40,000 more for the study, but it already has received a $20,000 grant from a foundation, as well as funding from 13 churches and synagogues and four banks, Robinson said.

To get the remainder of the money, the Planning Department is applying to the state's Executive Office of Communities and Development for a $12,000 Strategic Planning Grant. CLN also will hold two fundraisers in fall.

A project coordinator will be hired to oversee the study. And CLN may sign a contract with a local university to do the grit work — interviewing around 550 Newton elderly residents to find out what type of housing they need.

The study also includes eight educational workshops, each to be held in a different Newton neighborhood, Robinson said. The goal will be to show senior citizens what housing alternatives exist and to discover the ideal options for them and their neighborhood.

In addition, the study will inventory the existing resources for developing elderly housing. The project coordinator will eventually compile the information in a booklet that will contain recommendations. The study should give the city, private nonprofit housing companies like CLN and developers a handle on the city's elderly housing shortage.

One "barometer" of the existing need is the 120 elderly people waiting for Newton Housing Authority rental units, said Elizabeth Ruben, senior planner for the Planning Department. A person on that list may have to wait as long as 2½ years before an apartment becomes available, according to the authority.

Another indication is the city's apartment vacancy rate, which is around 1-percent. Just about all of the Garden City's dwelling units are occupied.

"Anybody looking for rental housing is in a bad spot, whether economically disadvantaged or not," said Ruben. "If supply does not keep up with demand, then you obviously have people in need."

The city and nonprofit housing organizations such as CLN are working to narrow the gap between demand and supply. But they also need to know what types of housing options to develop and this is where CLN's study would help.

Interviewers will be asking the elderly how well their present dwelling arrangements are working and what housing needs and desires they have.

"We've had about 20 years of elderly high rise as the primary kind of housing that was developed," Robinson said. "Although that has produced some very nice housing, it hasn't been the choice for everyone. And it's extremely important that people have choice."

The Newtonville Avenue site provides one alternative. The "inter-generational" home — usually three of the 10 residents are not elderly — brings people together to share housekeeping responsibilities and for companionship.

But shared living is not for everybody, Robinson said. "This is a sort of family of choice," she said of the Newtonville Avenue residents. "You need to be a venturesome person."

Some elderly people want to live alone or remain in a house they shared for years with a now-deceased spouse, Robinson said. They need to know there are ways to hold onto a home they may have difficulty affording or maintaining.

One method is a reverse equity mortgage, an idea which started in Marin County, California around a decade ago. Under this concept, the bank pays the homeowner a specified sum of money, which will be repaid years later or taken out of the estate after his death.

A sale-leaseback also is possible. In this case, the homeowner in effect "sells" the home to a younger person or couple, who pay a small amount of money up front, then a sum each month. The original owner continues to live in the home, possibly sharing space with the buyer.

The Newton Housing Authority will continue to make dwelling units available and more shared living homes can be built if the study determines that is what elderly people need.

"Some options are not right for some people. Others may be," Ruben said. "The point is there needs to be some education."

Malec favors mixed housing

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — With his perspective as both a Boston College sociology professor and president of the Board of Aldermen, Michael Malec says the concept of mixed-income housing is basically a good one.

He does, however, acknowledge some problems. While some residents of mixed-income housing in Newton say age differences are the main reason for tension, Malec says income differences can create bigger problems.

"It is very difficult for people who are of disparate economic means to be put together," Malec says. "Like the title of J. Anthony Lucas' book about Boston's school desegregation in the 70s, it can be hard for these people to find a 'Common Ground.' Much of what Lucas said in his book can be seen in many housing projects as well."

Unlike the post-WWII military, where Malec says intergration "has been relatively successful" due to common socio-economic backgrounds, forced desegregation, where socio-economic backgrounds differ, can be a more difficult adjustment.

"If you attempt to integrate through housing two groups that are very different, it is more difficult to make the transition, and this goes along with what Lucas said in his book."

Malec refers to Lucas' description of desegregation at Charlestown High School and its effect on that city. While Lucas wrote about a school, Malec says the same principles can be applied to housing.

The major difference, and one reason Malec uses to express optimism about Newton's mixed-income housing, is this city's leadership.

"There is another factor involved here," he says. "There is the psychology of inevitability. In Charlestown, the leaders did not want desegregation, and it did not go smoothly. Here, in Newton, the mayor has come out in favor of mixed-income housing, which will make it easier to implement. When people perceive something as inevitable, change is easier."

In addition, Malec says in many communities, multi-generational living is the norm.

"Look at the Lake section of Newton," he says. "There are sometimes three or four generations living under one roof. I suspect that the disparity in age is not as great as some people make them out to be.

"There are conflicts between the old and young in these multi-generational situations," he adds. "Grandchildren will fight with grandparents over changing social values. There are also examples of the old helping the young and vice-versa. I just don't think age is as great an impediment to living together as economics."

The solution to problems like those experienced by some Weeks tenants, according to Malec, is mutual understanding.

"Groups should look for areas where they can find themselves helpful to the other," he says. "I don't know if it is something as simple as having the younger people mow lawns or wash cars for the elderly, but they should work out some kind of relationship. Interdependence is one thing to grab hold of to reduce tensions."

Aldermen to vote on Warren School plan

NEWTON — The long saga over what to do with vacant Warren Junior High School may be coming to a close and not everyone is happy about it.

The aldermanic Real Property Reuse Committee has voted to recommend the building be sold for no less than $2 million. Under the committee's proposal, the Warren would house no more than 75 apartments or condominiums.

The full Board of Aldermen is scheduled to decide the building's fate August 11. The city declared the school surplus in 1981.

The vote came after architect Anthony Tappe assured aldermen the city can locate a new library at Homer and Walnut streets without a great deal of extra expense.

Residents and some aldermen had insisted the board make no decision on the Warren — located on Washington Street in West Newton — until it was certain a library could be built at the Homer and Walnut parcel across from City Hall.

Tappe estimated that subsurface water — five to six feet beneath the ground at some parts of the Homer/Walnut parcel — would boost library construction costs only between $150,000 and $200,000.

The proposed three-story building could rest on a nine inch concrete or steel slab which could be further supported by pilings sticking into the ground "like fingers poking down in a pie," he said.

"If we're talking a $10 million building, we're talking 1.5 percent because of the foundation at the worst," said Tappe.

He presented a report from soil engineers documenting the results of test pits and borings and stating they did not anticipate unusual problems with the site.

Two West Newton community leaders were skeptical about Tappe's conclusions.

"Nine inches of slab with all that water, it doesn't make sense," said Bertha Gentile, co-chairman of the Joint Advisory Planning Group (JAPG), a committee of residents that studied the reuse of the Warren.

If the city sells the Warren and then discovers the Homer/Walnut site will be too expensive, there may be no place to put the new library.

BC considering incinerator construction

NEWTON — Boston College is considering the construction of a "trash to energy" incinerator. But the university has made no final decision on the facility and has not applied for any of the necessary permits.

Dr. Laurence Barton, director of the university's office of community affairs, recently offered this update on the incinerator, which was the subject of rumor and controversy among some Chestnut Hill residents last winter.

The university is looking into such a facility because landfills for trash dumping are becoming more scarce and those that remain are more expensive to use, Barton said.

BC has asked scientists and consultants to comment on the safety of the incinerator, which would burn trash and convert it to energy for campus use. The university has hired Energy Management Inc. of Chestnut Hill to study the idea.

Two residents this winter said they feared the university had secretly decided on constructing the trash burner. They feared the incinerator would emit a foul odor and spew pollutants.

At the time, Barton angrily dismissed the rumors, saying BC had made no decision on the incinerator, but had compiled some information to show it can be safe.

"According to scientists and consultants, it is what is called a 'clean burn,'" Barton said of the type BC is considering. "Your trash is burned at such a high degree, all you have left is a little ash."

The facility BC is considering would be about 1,200 square feet, or roughly the size of four standard bedrooms, he said.

The burner would produce no odor, Barton said.

Senior volunteer program gets a grant

NEWTON — The Retired Senior Volunteer Program was awarded an annual federal grant of $48,500 to continue its programs that both employ and service elder citizens in Newton, Wellesley and Weston.

According to Anthony Bibbo, executive director of the Newton Community Service Center, the volunteer program places over 550 elders in both the public and private non-profit sectors.

It costs approximately $83,000 to run the program, with federal money covering more than half, Bibbo said. The federal grant is contingent upon ascertaining a local contribution of $34,000.

"This portion of funding is secured from fund raising and contributions from the communities we service," he said. "This is the 15th year we've been running the senior program and it has been a great success."

Senior citizens volunteer to work at local nursing homes, public schools and to visit elders at home. They visit English and history classes and share their experiences with students through the Living History program. Rather than students simply reading about history, they hear about it from one who has lived it.

Retired college professors and teachers also volunteer their time to teach classes to other elder citizens through Lifetime Learning. Every year the classes are offered in different areas of study.

City's surplus 'parallel' to last year's

NEWTON - The official tally is not available yet, but Mayor Theodore D. Mann has indicated this year's budget surplus will run roughly "parallel" to last year's $7.9 million figure.

"It indicates the city is in good shape," Mann said of the figure at his weekly press conference.

Last year's surplus was the cause of political controversy as some - particularly members of the Newton Taxpayer's Association (NTA) - argued the city should return much of the money to taxpayers. A municipality should not be in the business of making a profit, they said.

But Mann challenged that reasoning, saying budget surpluses and free cash are not what they seem to be. "It's nothing to be ashamed of," he said. "It's not free and it's not surplus."

Critics need to take into account the difference between budgetary surplus, gross free cash and net free cash, Mann said.

A budgetary surplus is only a hypothetical figure, since it includes money owed to the city, but not collected, the mayor said.

Gross free cash - the amount of actual money a city has left after it has met all its budget obligations - should be spent on programs and projects a municipality would not otherwise be able to afford, Mann said.

"That's a one-time injection into the fiscal bloodstream," the mayor said.

Net free cash is the figure that remains after the city has funded necessary programs and projects.

Of last year's $7.9 million surplus, the city had $5,066,000 in gross free cash and ended up with $300,000 net free cash, according Stephen Cirillo, the city's chief budget officer.

Street and building repairs, the planned upgrading of the city's sewer system and computers for the city's school children are items that can and should be funded by free cash, Mann said.

"We own something like 100 buildings in the city," Mann said. "You could spend the entire net free cash just in repairing the roofs. We intend to use some of the money for that."

Mann likened the situation to a homeowner who receives an unexpected sum of money. He can use the money for a vacation or for badly needed roof repairs, the mayor said. "The consequence of not fixing the roof is further damage," he said.

The NTA has called on the mayor to return $4.8 million of last year's surplus. Mann, however, continued his analogy to show it would have been fiscally irresponsible to do so. "If you gave that back, you wouldn't be able to fix the roof," he said.

Stop work order lift possible at blast site

NEWTON — The Building Department this week could issue a limited lifting of a stop work order that would allow Beaver Construction to continue safety and maintenance operations at its Rte. 9 site.

Beaver, according to Assistant City Solicitor Michael Peirce, was issued the stop work order by Building Commissioner James Cameron, pending investigation of the July 15 dynamite explosion that sent rocks and other debris flying through the air. Fourteen persons were injured in the accident as they, surrounding buildings and cars, were hit by shrapnel-like pieces of rock.

Neither the state Fire Marshal's office nor the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) have completed their investigations, Peirce says.

The limited lifting of the stop work order, he adds, would allow the company to secure the site.

New health commissioner to step in

NEWTON — After six years as health commissioner, Bernice Joyall will retire this fall. Taking her place on September 2 will be Boxboro resident David Naparstek.

Currently, Naparstek is working as the director of public health for the Neshoba Association Boards of Health. The organization, based in Ayer, services 14 towns.

"I'm very excited, pleased, and honored to be chosen for the job," says Naparstek, who was selected from a field of 40 applicants. Naparstek decided to accept the postition on July 15.

"I have not yet set priorities or made assesments of what needs to be done," he sad, "but I have clear mandates from Mayor Mann."

One of these "mandates" is to keep food service establishments safe and sanitary, says Naparstek. "I hope that anybody who eats in a restaurant in Newton will be able to enjoy full confidence that the restaurant is top-notch," he adds.

Another issue Naparstek will face as health commissioner is the safety of facilities that burn waste material and convert it to energy.

Frank campaigns for a fourth term

By Ed Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Democratic Congressman Barney Frank officially cranked up his campaign for a fourth term with a pledge to address regional public transportation problems, the spiralling federal deficit and arms control.

Frank, 46, of 114 Floral St., formally announced his candidacy during a 20-minute press conference at his office in West Newton Square.

This year's 4th Congressional District race represents the second consecutive election in which Frank faces only minimal opposition.

There are no Republicans on the ballot. The other Democrat in the race, William F. Rosa, 60, of Fall River, is a retired pilot from a working class background who has no previous political experience.

A second potential contender, Thomas DeVisscher, 28, of Attleboro, failed to qualify for the ballot as an independent. DeVisscher went to court earlier this year in an unsuccessful attempt to change his name to Jesus Christ.

Frank's constituency extends southward from Brookline, Newton and Wellesley to Natick, and along the Rhode Island border to encompass Attleboro, Fall River and Westport.

He said his goals include beefing up federal funding for public transportation, creating stricter environmental controls and regulating the imports threatening the garment industry in the southern half of the district.

On the national level, Frank said he would work on reducing the federal deficit in a "socially responsible and equitable fashion."

He admitted that the deficit did not have the short-term negative impact on the economy that many feared, but said a "long-term drag" on economic growth is inevitable.

Frank said he would slice the debt by "applying fiscal reality to the Pentagon," not by supporting cuts in social programs.

He also promised to "force the President to take arms control seriously," arguing that, although the Soviet Union stance has not encouraged real progress on the issue, "there is an overwhelming sense in the world that the American government is the biggest obstacle to arms reduction."

Frank called the administration's policy in South Africa "a disgrace," describing it as "one of the worst things Ronald Reagan has done."

He said he finds it "degrading" and "painful" for the President to celebrate the Statue of Liberty's 100th birthday, while failing to condemn South Africa's apartheid regime.

"Reality and Ronald Reagan are badly out of touch here," he added.

As for his opponent, Frank recalled how Rosa accused him of being a "KGB agent" after he returned from accompanying Soviet dissident Yelena Bonner to Moscow.

At the time, Rosa was linked to ultra-conservative Lyndon LaRouche, whose beliefs Frank described as "so militantly implausible that ... they degrade the political process."

Rosa has since said that he had only "a brief brush" with LaRouche's supporters and is no longer affiliated with the movement.

Frank attributed his lack of significant, well-organized opposition this year to his incumbency, staff, performance and his perception that "the Republican in Massachusetts is in a state of total collapse."

"I happen to be in accord with my district on the major issues," he said.

Frank's campaign headquarters will be set up in a small office on the first floor of 437 Cherry St. He said the political committee formed in his name has collected approximately $90,000 for the race.

Campaign round-up

Pal Joey

The friends of State Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci, the endorsed Democratic candidate for state auditor, will host a "Pal Joey Celebration" at the Newton Marriott Hotel on Weds., Aug. 13 from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30. Tickets are $100 per person and can be obtained by calling DeNucci Headquarters at 964-8866.

D'Amico: Nuke Free

State Sen. Gerry D'Amico, a Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, is calling for a nuclear-free Commonwealth.

During a recent press conference, D'Amico said the Seabrook nuclear power plant should not be activated and criticized the proposed evacuation plan for the Seabrook area.

"Our long-range energy future should be planned without any additional nuclear power plants. Our goal should be a nuclear-free Commonwealth," he said.

Murphy: No Nukes

Evelyn Murphy, a Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, is calling for the closing of the Seabrook, Yankee and Pilgrim nuclear power plants.

During a recent press conference, Murphy outlined five areas in which she believes the nuclear power industry will be unable to meet the test for safe delivery of power to the people of Massachusetts.

"I believe it is our responsibility in government to go beyond shouting slogans calling for the closing of nuclear power plants. We need to set public policy that will actually insure the safety and health of people and to present a specific strategy to achieve that policy," she said.

Shotwell Endorsed

Massachusetts Fair Share, the state's largest citizen's action organization, has voted to endorse Jo Ann Shotwell for attorney general.

Officials of the 140,000-member group cited Shotwell's strong stands on environmental hazards and nuclear energy as the reason for its support.

"Jo Ann Shotwell is committed to prosecuting polluters. We need a 'people's attorney' as attorney general, someone who isn't afraid to put illegal dumpers behind bars," said Mass. Fair Share official Janice Nadeau.

Opinions

Activists can achieve rare results

It's made up of some old, orange barrels and a "one way" sign and it looks pretty makeshift ... even tacky ... but the barrier across the median on Route 9, at the corner of Woodcliff Road, is a monument to what can be accomplished when neighborhood activists work in concert with their elected representatives.

The two parties, more often than not, seem to be at odds as to what kind of improvements should be made in the Garden City. Any public hearing of the aldermanic Land Use Committee will produce a string of epithets referring to the gap between "the people" and their representatives. The constant repetition of such criticism eventually tends to put it in the "trite but true" category.

So it is doubly refreshing when we see that residents of Woodcliff Road, reacting to a tragic accident at a dangerous intersection, mounted a campaign to change things and actually get some action out of the state Department of Public Works in less than two months.

The state DPW, in case you did not know it, is notorious for coming up with reasons why something can not be done until next week ... or next month ... or next year.

It is testimony to the commitment of Albie Walton, the Woodcliff Road resident who rallied his neighbors to the cause, that corrective action which was recommended ten years ago finally was taken. Also praiseworthy were the reactions and the efforts of Walton's elected representatives, namely State Rep. Susan Schur and Alderman Rodney Barker.

Rarely will we see community activism yield official action in such a direct way. But the battle of Woodcliff Road should give heart to all those who have been beaten into thinking, "You can't fight City Hall."

We need to pull up our Sox, again

Darned if the sagging Red Sox aren't the same old heart breakers we've been putting up with for years. Just when it looks like a romp to the divisional throne room, pitchers collapse and sockers drive the air out of the park. In a week's time, a first place margin keeps melting away.

It is not enough to say that the team was playing over its head and a retreat to the anticipated .500 mark was inevitable. Here was a Fenway club that proved most of us wrong until a late June swoon, then came back nicely enough before the All Star game break.

Injuries to Hurst, Nipper, Rice, and Boggs took a toll and left the young man with stardust, Roger Clemens, as the lone stopper. Rich Gedman's personal slump hurt, while Baylor and Armas haven't given the power needed.

Always, when a team hits the skid it is easy to find reasons. Tom Seaver, the Hall of Famer to be, blames himself for some of the decline, but Seaver would have fared better if the bats were making contact. More than anything, perhaps, the latest sad episode in the self-destructive career of Oil Can Boyd has cut the guts out of a team that was riding high and pulling together.

His tantrum over non-selection as an All Star was bad enough, but the subsequent involvement in a neighborhood drug situation with police and voluntary hospital stay had to be disruptive. Then to top things off, he gets nailed for an outstanding traffic warrant. When it rains...

A young talent so promising being wiped out is one of professional sports' tragedies. A stable, disciplined Dennis Boyd could make a difference in the latter stages of the season.

We like the Seaver approach to the distressing happenings of the past fortnight. "You can't expect to go through an entire season and not go through some down period. But it's something this club will ride out. The thing we have to try to do is make the down period as short as possible. That's the mark of a good club." Tom should know. He's been through the mill with teams that have done just that.

So don't give up on the Home Town boys just yet. They come back to friendly Fenway this week, with a shorter casualty list, pitchers who are saying they are ready to round back into form, and, hopefully, some good news on Oil Can Boyd for a change.

Pressure to divest mounting

News analysis by
Les Orsini

Their victory might be best described as a tiny, symbolic gesture. But the triumph, which will force the City of Newton to get rid of its $3.5 million in South African-related holdings, could not have been better timed.

Last week, Gov. Michael S. Dukakis signed legislation that will force Newton to strip its pension fund of investments in American companies doing business in South Africa.

The governor's signature culminated a four-month effort by state Senator Jack Backman, D-Newton, state Rep. David Cohen, D-Newton, and Alderman Matthew Jefferson to force divestment on Newton's reluctant three-member Retirement Board.

Even as the governor signed the local legislation, a Congressional furor erupted over President Ronald Reagan's refusal to impose economic sanctions on South Africa, whose white minority denies equality to blacks, mixed-race Coloreds and Asians.

And on Beacon Hill, word surfaced of a public pension bill containing a little-known section that would ban most municipal pension funds from making future South African-related investments.

There can be little doubt that the movement to break America's economic ties to South Africa is gaining momentum.

Around 75 U.S. cities have divested and 22 states have either done the same or are operating under rules restricting South African-related holdings, according to David Barenberg, aide to Backman.

California is in the process of divesting its $38 billion pension system, Barenberg said. New Jersey, whose public employees retirement fund holds $9 billion, has already done so.

Nationwide, public pension funds holding $220 billion in assets are being managed free of South African-related holdings, Barenberg said.

It almost seems as if Reagan is resisting gravity by refusing not to increase economic sanctions against South Africa.

Last week, prominent Capitol Hill Republicans — among them senators Richard Lugar, R-Indiana, and Nancy Landon Kassebaum, R-Kansas — blasted Reagan for not imposing stringent economic sanctions against that nation.

Massachusetts Senator Edward Kennedy and Senator Lowell Weicker, R-Connecticut, threatened to introduce legislation that would restrict the flow of American cash and goods to South Africa.

And Senator Joseph Biden, D-Delaware, lashed out at Secretary of State George Shultz for criticizing South African Bishop Desmond Tutu's attack of Reagan's policies.

A movement that began with local religious groups, college students and labor organizations has finally reached the American political summit, Backman said.

Backman and then-state Rep. Mel King, D-Roxbury, authored the bill that forced Massachusetts in 1983 to become the first state to divest its public employee pension system completely.

"We've come a long way when leaders of the Republican Party disagree with the president of the United States," said Backman of the situation in Washington D.C. "So you see it is moving at an ever increasing pace.

"President Reagan with his charisma and charm and his fantastic ability to deal with human beings could perform a miracle," the local senator added. "I always have hopes. He certainly believes himself to be an average American. Let's see if he becomes that."

The Rev. Howard Haywood, pastor of the mostly black Myrtle Baptist Church on Curve Street, agreed with Biden, who said he was "ashamed" of Reagan's South African policy.

"I felt that too, not as a black man, but as an American," Haywood said. "As a black man, I felt as angry as Bishop Tutu."

City Comptroller and Retirement Board member Lawrence Marino, who has questioned whether divestment will actually help South African blacks, sees the recent events as demonstration that leadership in America no longer comes from Washington D.C.

"What's happening in Congress is a result of what's happening in cities and towns like Newton," he said.

America used to be a "top-down country" — that is, policy and issues would emanate from Washington to the states and finally to communities, Marino said.

But since the communications revolution beginning with the widespread use of the radio, the ability of citizen movements to influence Washington has grown steadily, he said.

Cohen agreed, citing citizen pressure to halt the Vietnam War and the nuclear arms race and to clean up the environment as examples of community pressure affecting the federal government.

"Initially people looked to Washington for leadership," Cohen said. "When Washington leadership fails, local advocates take advantage of the power vacuum. If people in outlying areas pressure local officials, then can bring about the kind of changes Washington didn't consider."

Slim chances of beating this heat

By Ed Cafasso

Good afternoon, my name is Heat.

I will play a major role in your lives today and much of the next six weeks.

Scientists say I am just a form of energy produced by the accelerated vibration of molecules, but I like to think of myself as Nature's way of saying, "You can ride, but you can't hide."

I am an ageless warrior. The sun is my stallion and clear skies my allies.

Welcome to my world.

From this moment until I decide to give you a break, major traffic jams have the potential for violence. Going outside for any reason, except in search of water or a tan, will be as appealing as your first vaccination.

I will make your hair turn frizzy. Waiting a minute for something now takes an hour. Patience skips virtue status on its way to impossibility. Hassles become nightmares. Tempers flare. The Dark Side stages a coming-out party.

I pity those who make a living in unair-conditioned conditions, for they know not what they do when overcome by me.

Measure me anyway you want. Fahrenheit. Celsius. I am the sweat in your eye, the dust in your mouth and the tossing and turning that robs you of sleep.

You complain to your friends about me, use me as a topic of conversation.

You expend energy trying to defeat me, but all your machines and machinations only make me stronger. Electric fans produce more of me. Ice cubes wither at my touch.

You can't stay in the pool forever. I even help make the water you use to fight me.

I surround you, turning air to steam. Appreciate my presence.

Winter would be meaningless without me. The lemonade and iced tea industries would go bankrupt in a second. Antiperspirant magnates depend on me. Beach resorts pray for my arrival.

What would cotton be worth without me? Or the color white? Or a cold beer?

Consider yourselves lucky I only stopped by for a visit. In a few months, you'll be begging me to come back.

Still waiting for Bishop Muzorewa

By Don Graff

When I visited South Africa a few years back, the talk was often of black leadership.

Not in South Africa but in neighboring Rhodesia, then in the late stages of a prolonged guerrilla war aimed at ousting the ruling white government. The British and American governments were brokering a settlement that would open the way to majority black rule.

The big question was who would emerge as paramount black leader. The logical candidates were the guerrilla chiefs, Robert Mugabe and Joseph Nkomo. Avowed Marxists, they were unacceptable to whites. Either would be a worst case.

But was there anyone else with any prospect of commanding black allegiance?

White South Africans nodded knowingly. There certainly was: Bishop Muzorewa.

Bishop who? I'm not surprised that you had to ask. He wasn't around long enough to make much of an impression.

In April 1979, Bishop Abel T. Muzorewa became prime minister of a transitional government. An advocate of independence but not of the guerrilla strategy that won it, he was acceptable to whites.

But in elections the following February, open to all blacks for the first time, Mugabe's party won a clear majority. Nkomo was runner-up. The bishop was out.

The worst had happened. White-ruled Rhodesia was now black-ruled Zimbabwe. Mugabe moved rapidly to consolidate power, turning on his erstwhile ally Nkomo.

I think of Zimbabwe now that the talk in South Africa has finally come around to black leadership there. The Botha government refuses to deal with imprisoned Nelson Mandela or anyone else in his African National Congress, the dominant but outlawed black organization.

The government says it will discuss the country's future only with "responsible" black leaders and keeps calling on them to come forward. Of course, some such leaders have always been available in the persons of Bishop Desmond Tutu and others. Botha and company prefer to ignore that.

But even if blacks the government considers "right" could be found, it would do no good. When South Africa's white leaders say "responsible," they mean "acceptable." And acceptability to white leadership is not the same as leadership among blacks.

The Botha government may not find Mandela and the ANC acceptable but they cannot wish them away. If a deal is to be cut that has any chance of heading off a war of reciprocal genocide, it must include them.

The situation in Zimbabwe, where whites a trickling back, is summarized by a front-page headline in the Wall Street Journal of a few months ago: "They Lost the Civil War, but White Farmers Prosper in Zimbabwe / Those Who Didn't Flee Say Life Is Better Than Ever...."

The article makes clear there are numerous qualifications to the post-independence good life. There is still great uncertainty as to Mugabe's long-term intentions. But as of now, the worst in Zimbabwe has turned out to be not all that bad.

South Africa is not, of course, simply a replay of Zimbabwe. The scale of the contest is much greater, and so are the stakes. Still, Zimbabwe does suggest that the worst need not be nearly so bad as Botha and company expect — unless they themselves insist upon making it so.

While waiting for their Muzorewa, they might think about that a bit.

Special permit ordered

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A recent Land Court decision against the city will pave the way for a six-unit condominium development in Auburndale.

Land Court Judge Robert Cauchon has ordered the city to issue a special permit to Newton Equity Partners for the construction of six units at 175 Auburn St., the number requested by the developers in their inital petition.

According to Mark White, the attorney representing the developers, Cauchon decided the Board of Aldermen failed to act within 90 days, the statutory period between a public hearing and final board action.

Under state law, if a municipal legislative body fails to act within 90 days, a developer is allowed to build the number of units requested in the original petition.

The aldermanic Land Use Committee held the public hearing on White's petition May 13, 1985. The board voted to deny the petition 12:15 a.m. Aug. 13 and the decision was not logged by City Clerk Edward English until 2:41 a.m. Cauchon ruled the board's action went beyond the 90-day period, expiring Aug. 12.

White said he hopes Newton Equity Partners will begin construction of the six units in the near future.

"We were willing to compromise at five units," White said. "But the aldermen wanted to give us only four, which is what was allowed by right. They didn't act on time and now we have the right to build six."

According to City Solicitor Daniel Funk, both aldermen and the Law Department have been more aware of deadlines since White's suit.

"The judge followed a narrow line of time in this case," he said. "Ever since it was first introduced, we have tried to be cognizant of the fact that deadlines do exist. While there has been a heightened awareness, it is not something that has happened too often."

Two aldermen present during the August board meeting last night said Cauchon's decision was an experience to learn from.

"Shame on us," Alderman Arthur Reilly said. "When you goof, you goof. The clerk's office handles thousands of pieces of paper and if this is the only mistake that is made, is does not mean the demise of the quality of life in Newton."

"We'll watch him more carefully," Alderman Matthew Jefferson said of White. "He won it on a technicality, and if you don't watch yourself, that's what a technicality can do to you."

When White filed suit, a number of aldermen reacted angrily. Last night, White said he does not think there will be any lasting bitterness.

Sparks over alleged "secret" meetings

ecutive Department staff can lose their objectivity.

"You guys don't realize you're incestuous. You guys talk to each other all the time," Bullwinkle said. "I represent 6,000 to 8,000 (voters) in West Newton. I should hear about it."

Malec held two meetings to seek advice on how to handle the situation, Coletti said. Some of those who attended the second meeting are committee chairman, he said.

Coletti said it was his understanding that Malec and English have agreed to a "standard of performance" document and a 6-month delay in reviewing the clerk's work for a raise.

But late Monday night, the FinCom voted 3 to 2 to recommend the full board grant English the 5 percent raise. Aldermen Wendell Bauckman joined McGrath and Bullwinkle as Coletti and Alderman Elaine Gentile dissented.

"I should say the solution of excluding a guy from a raise to reproduce documents instead of relying exclusively on the print shop.

Stephen Cirillo, the city's chief budget officer, said the Executive Department has no intention of using the new machinery to increase the workload of the clerk's office. "We've been trying to help them get equipment," he said.

But McGrath alleged there were "other things tagged onto the copying machine" and said Malec and Coletti should have cut off sessions with executive department representatives when those issues were raised.

He and Bullwinkle accused Malec of arranging secret meetings with some board members, most notably aldermanic committee chairmen, to discuss English's contract.

"I'm as much a leader of the Board of Aldermen as other members," McGrath said. "I judge leadership by the willingness to participate, not because Mike Malec annointed them."

Bullwinkle said aldermen who hold private discussions with Executive Department staff can lose their objectivity.

In a furious debate at times laced with expletives, McGrath and Bullwinkle traded verbal uppercuts with Coletti over whether other board members should have been informed of those meetings and asked to attend.

The argument smoldered at first as aldermen debated the merits of purchasing for the city clerk's office a new photocopier capable of automatic collating into 50 bins. But it flared as the topic changed to English's contract.

McGrath said Mayor Theodore D. Mann may use the equipment to increase his department's demand on the clerk's office at the very time he is seeking to eliminate a vacant position in what is now a one-man print shop.

At its height the print shop had four employees, printer John Proia said. The city and City Hall Associates Union are now discussing the elimination of a now vacant position there, said Proia, who is president of the union.

The new photocopier would give the clerk's office the ability everyone else gets is insensitive," McGrath said.

After the meeting, Coletti defended the "standard of performance" document Malec negotiated, saying it could eventually be required of all department heads.

Coletti accused McGrath of being "paranoid" about Executive Department meddling in aldermanic affairs. "In many situations, the mayor draws on the talents of board members to make decisions," Coletti said.

Mann almost entirely divorced himself from the city clerk situation, Coletti added.

He described his argument with McGrath and Bullwinkle as "unfortunate."

"Yes, I was put in an awkward position," Coletti said, adding, "I will not be intimidated by either of them."

But Bullwinkle said all aldermen should be involved when there is action affecting one of the board's employees. No one should be singled out for special contractual treatment, he said. "Why do it to one and not to others?" he asked.

Library has special needs materials

NEWTON — The Social Services Department of the Newton Free Library offers numerous services and materials to those with special needs.

The TDD/TTY machine is used by those with hearing impairments; the Kurzweil Reading Machine is available for those people with visual impairments.

There are magnifiers that can be borrowed as well as used in the library. The magnifier, in the form of a large, light wieght disc, is suspended from the user's neck, leaving one's hands free to hold a boook, sew, or write.

Other materials for those with special needs include books and magazines in braille and large print; talking book cassettes and a talking book machine for in-house use; special games; a Perkins Brailler and a large print typewriter.

The Social Services Department has a resource file of community organzations, services, and information for those with special needs.

For more information call Barbara Moskow, the Social Services Librarian, at 552-7145.

Baptist Church plans Bible school

NEWTON — The Second Baptist Church of Newton is sponsoring its 40th annual Vacation Bible School for children 3-13. The first classes were held on July 22 and the second one is scheduled for Thursday, July 31, from 9-11:45 a.m. There will be fun through crafts, stories, songs, games, and world-wide travel through our visiting missionaries: Brian and Nancy Hoffman with Africa Inland Mission. Brian is a jungle pilot.

The staff includes teachers from Newton, Natick, Dover, Needham, and Wellesley. The host pastor is Rev. Francis F. Crisci and the school is directed by his wife, Elizabeth.

Public beach planned say, if you swim, swim where it's supervised," Baron said.

The association started a "real push" to open a public beach a year ago, she said.

"To us, it's very exciting," she said. "We hear all the arguments against it" — including liability, vandalism, parking and traffic problems.

To liability, "my response is people also get hurt in the streets," and vandalism can be avoided with good management. As for parking and traffic problems, Baron said the beaches are small and can not handle too many people.

"If each beach can be available to local residents, they shouldn't have to get in their cars and drive" to the ocean or to other available swimming areas.

"I think we're going to make (public) swimming this year if it takes until Thanksgiving and we have to snowshoe (to the river)," she said.

Mini-building boom begins at BC

The university has demolished McHugh Forum and will replace it with 171,000 square foot, $17 million sports center that will hold 8,500 basketball and 7,600 hockey fans. Construction could be complete by January 1988, Barton said.

The school's Big East basketball team now plays its games in tiny Roberts Center, reserving 2,000 of the 4,000 seats for students.

But BC hopes to reduce the traffic impact of the new hockey/basketball facility by doubling the amount of tickets reserved for students and the added parking.

The university is making a solid effort to improve relations with the neighborhood and throughout Newton, he said. Over two years, BC met 58 times with community groups and Newton officials to discuss the 10-year program, Barton said.

He noted that BC is the largest employer in Newton. Of its 2,000 employees, 705 are Garden City residents. There are also 2,559 alumni living in Newton.

"I think we have a lot of support in Newton, just among the general population," Barton said. "I don't sense a lot of animosity ... I think we're making headway in convincing our hardest critics."

The 10-year program may also bring improved science and fine arts facilities.

The university is now studying the feasibility of a new "state of the art" science building that could be located on the middle campus in Newton. Science classes are now scattered in three buildings.

"We've had several major science departments - chemisty, biology, physics - since the 1950s," Barton said. "Science itself has taken a quantum leap, but we have facilities built in the 1950s."

Fine arts students could benefit by a new 30,000 square foot facility on the main campus, that would have classrooms, a gallery, lecture space and offices.

Students now have to travel all the way to the Newton Centre campus for fine arts. The trustees will probably decide on the new building in the next two years, Barton said.

A 60,000 square foot addition to the McElroy building - which the Newton aldermen would have to approve - is also being contemplated. Increased dining room capacity, a larger bookstore, more space for student organizations would result.

"The proposal came to us from students," Barton said. "It is very overcrowded (in McElroy). "We have 66 student organizations and two-thirds are run out of dorms. It's unbelievable."

Three reasons to get your contacts from an eye doctor.
SAVE ON Ray-Ban's Now!
In the first place, we offer something eyeglass supermarkets can't offer – professional fitting by an eye doctor. It costs just $25 to $30, depending on the type of contacts you need. And the fitting price includes a 15 day refund privilege.
Second, there's our Vision Care Plus program for follow-up care. It gives you unlimited visits with our eye doctor for about what most individual eye doctors charge for a single visit.
Third, when the eye doctor is Cambridge Eye Associates, you'll probably save money. As New England's largest family of eye doctors, our contact lens prices are usually as low or lower than the eyeglass supermarkets.
So get the contacts you want – daily wear, extended wear, tinted or astigmatic. Choose from name-brands like Bausch & Lomb, Permaflex, Ciba, American Hydron and Wesley Jessen. But for peace of mind, get them from The Eye Doctors – Cambridge Eye Associates.
10% Discount to Senior Citizens on prescription eyewear
$29.95 & up Single vision eyeglasses. Frames & lenses complete. Add $20 for flat-top bifocal lenses & frames complete.
$25 Comprehensive eye examination. Includes glaucoma test, cataract check and slit lamp evaluation.
$39.95 Single vision, daily wear soft contact lenses. By B & L, Ciba, American Hydron. Fitting by eye doctor & instructions available – $25
High plus and high minus prescriptions available at comparably low prices

Dangerous crossroad improved

The sign reads, with two misspelled words: "Tempoaray Mediam Closing Beginning July 28." Resident Albie Walton, who launched the petition drive in Newton Highlands, said the message on the sign is "a little unnerving."

"I hope this isn't an indication of how carefully the state is going to handle the problem at our intersection," he said. "Let's hope they take a little more care than they did with the sign. One thing in their favor though is that they have acted quickly which I really didn't expect."

Walton said he is not surprised people are supporting the median closing. People are tired of risking their lives every time they have to cross Route 9 at that intersection, he said.

"I think most people, after having a chance to think it over, are willing to test this out to see if it will make things better," Walton said. "I don't know what the next step will be, but at least we have the state listening to us."

Some residents are a little skeptical about the median closing, but safety has taken priority over convenience, they said.

"Sure it will be a little inconvenient, but something has to be done to make the intersection safer," Nancy Serrell said. "If there is no other way to make the intersection safer, then I would have to agree that the change will be worth it."

Joy Benjamin, whose father was seriously injured in a car accident at that intersection several years ago, said she wishes another solution could be found.

"I'd prefer if the intersection remained open, but if there is nothing else they can do, I guess I can live with it," she said. "I see people running the red light there all the time. I just wish the police could enforce the light more. That's the core of the problem."

Maurice Billage said the state should have closed the intersection years ago. While he thinks the median needs to be closed, he said the state is missing the cause of the problem.

"The real problem is people running that light on Route 9. Closing the median isn't the whole solution. We need more enforcement," he said. "If I had it my way I would close Woodcliff Road's access to Route 9 completely. That would be terrific, but there's not much chance of them doing that I'm afraid."

According to Billage, cars will still be making right turns onto Route 9 from Woodcliff Road after the median is closed, which still poses a danger.

"Now instead of hitting cars crossing Route 9, cars will be hit making right turns," he said "The state is missing the point."

Estimated assessments to be mailed to homes

By Les Orsini
Staff Writer

NEWTON — If the state Department of Revenue permits, the city's Assessing Department will begin mailing out preliminary, estimated home values in late August.

The department will take at least three months to complete the mailing, which will also give residents statistical data that helps to determine the value of their property, according to Chief Assessor Robert Palmer.

Within the next week he will ask the state department for permission to send out the preliminary estimates, Palmer said. This would be the first time assessors have ever mailed preliminary values.

The mailings will give residents an opportunity to question their listed home values and request hearings with the Board of Assessors.

"We want to get it out as quickly as possible," Palmer said. "We don't want to have a month to react to taxpayer inquiry."

The city is now in the midst of a property revaluation, which each municipality must do every three years. Palmer said Newton assessors have completed around 75 percent of the process.

The department has been preparing the revaluation for over two years. Work will not be officially completed until next March.

If the state approves the preliminary mailings, assessors could begin hearings is September or October, Palmer said. Otherwise, the hearings will begin in January after the state has approved the city's revaluation.

Since revaluation began, the Assessing Department has viewed the exterior of each Newton property, Palmer said. Since the 1982 revaluation, the city has examined the interior of 12,000 of its roughly 20,000 single-, two- and three-family homes.

The department has also looked at the interiors of most homes that have sold since the last revaluation. Assessors use the selling price of homes as a "benchmark" to judge the value of properties that have not changed hands, Palmer said.

Assessors are right now doing what they call "revaluation testing," Palmer said.

They develop charts to calculate the value of land and buildings in Newton, using the cost of newly constructed homes as one guide.

They will also statistically break down the variables — such as a home's amount of living space and its general condition — which help determine a property's value.

Over the next three months, assessors, assistant assessors and appraisers with an estimated "value in hand" will once again look at the exterior of every Newton property, Palmer said.

"It's a common sense check and a consistency check," he said.

The new assessments will determine a property's value as of Jan. 1, 1986.

Newton students, teachers prepare for China

Exchange offers new ways of thinking

By Lauren McFalls
Assistant News Editor

When teenager Wang Hua, of China, found out he could sit and read in his Newton host family's living room as well as in his own bedroom, for the first time during his four month visit, he smiled.

Before that, Hua's expression had been blank, said Helene Bailen, his host family Mom. "The boy had lived in two rooms with his mother, father, brother, and grandfather.

"If we gave him something to read, he'd go to his own bedroom. Finally after four days of doing this, we explained to him this is his sofa and his chair (in the living room)."

For Hua, one of three Chinese exchange students who attended Newton high schools last fall, "Having his own room and the house was a big adjustment," said Bailen.

But, in September, when the exchange program's Newton contingent arrives in Beijing, China, four American students and two teachers will have to contend with their own form of culture shock.

They will ride bicycles to school every day, and, like Hua did with the Bailen family, they will each stay with a Chinese family. Mary Doolin, one of the teachers involved in the exchange, will be living in a home similar to Hua's in China.

"Mine," says Doolin, "has two rooms plus a tiny kitchen — we would call it a closet — and a bathroom. Ordinarily, three people in the family live there — the parents and their daughter, a school teacher. But the parents will be away while I'm there."

In preparation for their adventure, Doolin, an English as a Second Language teacher at Newton North, and her compatriots, are now enrolled in an eight-week Chinese culture and language course at Harvard University. The class meets four mornings a week and involves learning vocabulary and sentence patterns, Doolin says.

In addition, the Harvard teacher, a former Beijing resident, is coaching the group on "the do's and don'ts" of dress and on the sorts of meals that are served.

Each Friday morning, the exchange students and teachers meet with Jan Hagman, a teacher of Chinese at Newton North and South high schools, to review language and conversation.

Although Hagman does not think the group will experience "too much" culture shock during their four-month stay, he says they will, nonetheless, have a lot to get used to.

"Coming from the United States, they are used to spacious apartments and modern conveniences," he says. "There, they won't have their own privacy. And they can't go to the freezer and take out ice cream . . . They may have a freezer, but they won't have ice cream."

Wang Hua at American desk in his host families home.

Wendy Meltzer — a student from Newton South whose family hosted another Chinese exchange student, Cao Yu Zin — found out on the first day of the girl's visit that the Chinese care little for sweet foods.

"She brought a bunch of strange food," Meltzer recalls, and she had the whole family chewing on a "salty candy."

Nor do many Chinese families have running hot water in their homes. Hua would not use the hot water spout in the Bailen's kitchen "for a long time" until the family explained how it worked, says Helene. "Where he's from, there's only cold running water."

And, if romantic interests develop during their visit, Newton exchange students will have to adjust to another difference between the two countries.

According to Bailen, "(Hua) came home from school one day and said he saw something strange at South. He saw a boy kissing a girl in the hallway. In China, they're not allowed to have a relationship until they are in their early 20s."

Chinese exchange visitors last fall were, from left, teacher Su Ji Yu, teacher Liu Nai Wen, student Wang Hua, student Cao Yu Xian and student Lui Meng.

Shocking truths of traveling in foreign cultures

By Lauren McFalls
Assistant News Editor

NEWTON — In Bolivia, warns the South American Handbook, watch out for the Chuca Beetle. Residing in thatched or leaf-protected roofs, the insect carries Chagas disease which can lead to heart failure — without warning.

In Japan, American visitors can become annoyed with the way the Japanese cram into subway cars.

And in Costa Rica, male travelers should be aware of the customary form of greeting a woman. Whether she is a longtime friend or a complete stranger — kiss her on the cheek to say hello.

These are only a few in an exhaustive list of cultural differences with which travelers must cope on their worldly excursions. Indeed, whether traveling to Africa or just to an ethnically different section of Boston, Newton residents Stephen Sadow and Holly Carter, team teachers for a Northeastern University course on living in foreign cultures, caution travelers to prepare for culture shock.

Says Sadow, culture shock is the anxiety that results from losing all our familiar signs and symbols of social intercourse — when to take statements, words, facial expressions, customs, or norms seriously.

People go through stages, says Carter. First, they will think "this is different — ick." Then, the visitor will "feel out of place and want to be like them," she says.

Finally, she continues, anger sets in. They think, "I don't want to be a part of this culture. I can't stand people in France."

Despite frequent excursions to the country, every time Carter goes to Japan, "I get culture shock." And even though she is "used to" Japan's subways, "I think, 'The Japanese . . . why do they crowd into subways?' I know they're going to do it, but I have to gear up for it. Then I begin to get angry because people make you feel different."

Symptoms of culture shock include depression, lack of appetite and fatigue. But length of stay and personality will determine the shock's intensity.

While attending graduate school in Argentina, Sadow "had to scream every fourth day to get out of my system" all the frustrations of living in a foreign place.

Matt Cappofreddi, a senior at Newton South High School, who spent three weeks in Costa Rica as an exchange student, said he had to adjust to the food and to the custom of greeting women by kissing them on the cheek.

Further, he was surprised by the way women were treated. During a tour through a farm, "One guy literally snapped his fingers at his wife and demanded dinner. She immediately did it. I was shocked. I thought, 'What are they doing that for?' My mother would throw the food in my Dad's face."

These incidents aside, Cappofreddi says, "They had McDonalds there, so it wasn't major culture shock."

One of the "classic signs" of cultural fatigue, Carter continues, is wanting to totally integrate oneself into the society by dressing, eating and walking like the natives.

Instead, "What you have to try to do is find your own place in the society," she said. "All the Chinese want is respect for themselves." When visitors act like themselves, the country's people "will respect you for you."

Sometimes, however, acting like yourself may cause discomfort. Anna Romer, of the Youth for Understanding student exchange program, which places students in Newton schools each year, remembers when a host mother asked her exchange student to put on a clean pair of pants. According to Romer, he had been wearing the same pair everyday, which is normal in his northern European culture.

When the mother suggested at the kitchen table the student change, the youth stood up in front of the family, pulled his pants down and said "I can't take any more of this culture shock."

In addition to acting yourself, Carter suggests travelers keep an open mind when dealing with different customs, read about the culture to be visited, and realize a certain amount of culture shock will occur anyway.

Police, court briefs

Mailman assaulted for undelivered letter

NEWTON HIGHLANDS - A mailman on his rounds was assaulted by a man who followed him on his route from Wells to Columbia avenues July 22 afternoon, police said. The assailant blamed the mailman for his girlfriend not receiving a letter he had written to her a while back, police said. The suspect shoved the mailman on the ground causing his bag of mail to scatter all over the sidewalk, according to reports.

The suspect is described as a white male in his 20's with brown hair in a crew cut style. He was last seen driving away in what the mailman believes was a silver Dodge Omni, police said.

Woman kidnapped while driving to work

WEST NEWTON - A 21-year-old Bolton woman was kidnapped by a man at knife point while she was stopped at a red light at the intersection of Washington and Elm street July 22, police said. While she was on her way to work, the suspect jumped into the victim's unlocked car and pointed a knife at her side and ordered her to drive to Route 128 which she did, police said.

The suspect told her to drive to the Dedham off ramp on Route 128 where he got out of the car, police said. The victim did not report the incident to police. She apparently told her father about her experience and he ended up reporting it to police late Tuesday night, according to police. Detectives are investigating the kidnapping.

14 windows broken at Newton South

NEWTON — Police received a report Monday that 14 windows in Newton South High School had been smashed and graffiti had been sprayed on the school walls during the weekend.

Pedestrian saves puppy but hit by car

NEWTON CENTRE — A pedestrian was hit by a 1985 Chevrolet on Jackson Street while saving her puppy from getting run over by a car, police said. Martha Roth, 33, of Newton, suffered multiple cuts and abrasions and is listed in good condition at Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

A Watertown woman who was driving the vehicle reportedly told police she saw the puppy run out in the street with the victim chasing it, but there was not time enough to stop.

Man pleads not guilty to drunk driving

NEWTON - Kevin E. Quinn, 23, of Newton Upper Falls, pleaded not guilty in district court to a second offense charge of driving while under the influence of alcohol, according to records. Judge Monte G. Basbas released the defendant on personal recognizance. The case was continued to Aug. 25. Quinn had a prior conviction in Marlboro District Court in August 1983, according to court records.

8-foot bass fishing boat stolen from yard

AUBURNDALE - An eight-foot Bass fishing boat, valued at $1,500 was stolen from the back yard of a Kingswood Road home over the weekend, police said.

Car burglarized, radar detector stolen

NEWTON — A Waltham man stopped in at Marty's Liquors on Washington Street for a few minutes Saturday afternoon. When he came out of the store, he found the right side window of his Toyota smashed. A thief stole a radar detector worth $300, said police.

Car windows smashed in parking lot

NEWTON — Windows were smashed out of two cars parked in the lower lot of the Brae Burn Country Club Saturday, said police. One of the cars was a 1986 BMW. The other was a 1985 Jaguar. Nothing was taken out of the cars, said police.

Bike theft reported stolen outside store

NEWTON — A Motobecane 10-speed bicycle was reported stolen from outside the Star Market in Newtonville Saturday night. A woman told police she left the bike unlocked outside the store for about 20 minutes.

Bike taken from Langdon Road garage

NEWTON — A Raleigh Super Course 10-speed bicycle was stolen Thursday night out of a garage on Langdon Road, according to a report received by police.

Man dies near white powder

NEWTON — A Hunnewell Avenue man was found dead in his bedroom Friday around noon. On a dresser two feet away from him were a packet of white powder, a syringe, a spoon and some matches.

The body of John F. Carty, a 38-year-old employee of the U.S. Postal Service in Boston, was found sitting on the edge of his bed, slumped over a chair, said police. His father, Thomas Carty, found the body after taking a phone call from one of Carty's friends.

Medical Examiner Dr. Sami Daoud estimated that Carty died about 10 hours before he was found. Daoud performed an autopsy on the body Saturday, but said he could not be certain what caused the death until he receives results of toxicology tests. He said it could take a couple weeks for the results get back to him.

Thomas Carty told police he last saw his son alive around 7 p.m. Thursday. At that time John Carty said he was going to Brighton to buy gas for his car.

Crack turns up in suburbs

By David Weber
Staff Writer

Crack, the extremely addictive new form of cocaine that has been turning up in Boston recently, may now be making its way into the western suburbs.

Detective Sgt. Arthur T. Fryar, head of the Newton Police drug task force, said that, within the last two months, police have received information that the drug has been in Newton.

"I'm sure it's here. I know it's here. It's just beginning," said Fryar.

Police in Waltham and Watertown said they have not yet heard of any crack reaching their localities, but because of their proximity to Boston, they are preparing for the drug's arrival.

Middlesex County District Attorney Scott Harshbarger recently sent letters to the 54 cities and towns in the county asking that any information received about the drug by local police be quickly passed on to his office.

Tom Samoluk, a spokesman for the office, said law enforcement believed much of the crack originally came to the Boston area from New York, where it has become the top-priority drug problem. Police there were blaming the drug for an 18 percent increase in robberies earlier this year.

But because the drug is so easily converted from cocaine into the crack form, police say crack is now being manufactured in the Boston area.

Baking soda and household bleach are all that are needed to convert the cocaine, according to a recent article in Newsweek magazine. The chemicals are used to cook out all the "cut," which is used to stretch cocaine out, leaving only the essence of the drug. It's ready-to-use free-based coke.

Crack is an off-white color with a texture like chunks of soap of coconut. It is usually sold on the street in small plastic vials. A "hit," or enough for one high, about 1/10 of a gram, would cost $10, said police.

A user would typically pop a small chunk of the powerful drug into a pipe and smoke it. The immediate, intense high lasts anywhere from two to twenty minutes.

When the high is over, users are stricken with an immediate craving for more of the drug. They can become addicted after using the drug for two weeks.

A spokesman for the Boston Police said that six months ago, no one on the drug control unit had even seen crack. Within the last couple months, however, numerous arrests for the drug have been made.

Post 440 finishes season with two weekend wins

NEWTON — After Friday's 9-2 loss in Reading, the weekend wasn't shaping up to be much at all for the Newton Post 440 American Legion diamondeers.

They had lost 10 of their last 11 games and still had to face Natick on Saturday and Sudbury on Sunday. With both teams still fighting for the Zone 5 title, Newton would be lucky to escape the weekend alive.

Newton escaped alive all right, but you had better check on Natick and Sudbury. Post 440 shocked both contenders with come-from-behind victories, basking in the role of the spoilers to end the season with a two-game win streak.

What led to Newton's 9-8 shocker over Natick and 8-7 nipping of Sudbury?

Post 440 Coach George Sherman attributes the recent success to a team meeting. A team meeting he wasn't even invited to.

"I didn't know it, but after the loss to Reading on Friday, the senior members of the team called a meeting and decided that they wanted to go out with something to remember. They said 'let's win no matter what happens.'"

Senior players Chuck Proia, Tom Casey, Alex DeNucci, and Jeff Sherman took the group aside and let it be known that the losing had to stop.

It's one thing to voice a feeling, but it's another to go out and make it happen. Proia made it happen, winning both games in relief.

After pitching and losing a marathon against Arlington, a game which was suspened after seven innings and continued the next day — only to have it go seven more innings — Proia finally received his rewards.

"Chucky pitched 13 and a third innings in Arlington and he pitched well enough to win," Coach Sherman said. "It's sweet justice that he comes up with two wins in less than 24 hours."

Sunday against Sudbury at Ferguson Field, Proia dove into a 7-4 deficit and came out a winner. The righthander shut off a Sudbury attack that had bruised Newton starter Andy Lyons for three runs in the second and two in the third to build the lead.

The troops rallied behind Proia, scoring three runs in the fifth to tie the game before winning it in the sixth.

Ed Veiking did the leg work for Newton's game-winner in the sixth. His one-out double to the gap in right-center put the heat on Sudbury ace Robert Karwin and, when catcher Dave Batchelder couldn't handle a Karwin offering, the Sudbury bubble burst.

Veiking raced to third on a short passed ball by Batchelder and, when the catcher overthrew third base on the attempt to nail the Newton runner, Veiking took home also.

Batchelder's throw had sailed into left field and Sherman said that, had outfielder Andy Cotto scooped the ball up cleanly, Veiking was a dead duck at the plate. Cotto did not field the ball cleanly, and the only dead duck was the Sudbury pitcher.

Frank Battista had kept Newton in the game with a three-run homer, his team-leading fourth of the season, in the third inning.

Newton's luck had started to change on Saturday when Post 440 stunned Natick with seven runs in the bottom of the seventh to take the last-minute decision.

Newton's hero was another senior member — Jeff Sherman, the coach's son. After bouncing a one-hopper to first base to open the seventh, Sherman waited patiently for a chance to redeem himself, which ordinarily doesn't happen in the same inning.

But it did on Saturday, thanks to a Newton rally that saw 10 men come to the plate. Sherman stepped in for his second at-bat of the inning, this time with two outs, the tie scored, and Dave Grant representing the winning run.

Natick hurler Nick Delvechio put Sherman on the defense, running up an 0-2 count before watching the Newton batter foul off four straight pitches.

Sherman then screamed a liner to right-center to score Grant easily and to win the game on the spot.

"It feels great to know that my kids didn't give up," Sherman, the coach, said.

Two-run singles by Jim Giddon and Grant brought Post 440 up from the dead. Pete Noone and Proia set the tables, combining on successive singles after Sherman's bounce out, and Casey walked to load the bases.

DeNucci then dropped a single to left field that scored one, and Battista walked with the bags full to force in another.

The only drawback to Saturday's win was 10 Newton errors, which kept Newton starter Tom Casey in hot water throughout his five-inning appearance.

Casey had not pitched in three weeks due to soreness in his arm, and the last thing the veteran righty needed was 10 errors to compound his game. Casey did his job, two-hitting Natick over those five innings while not allowing a single earned run.

"All along I've been saying that we don't have pitching, but what we don't don't have is support," Sherman said of Newton's poor defense, which had been a major factor in the losing streak. "Ten errors bother me because the kids are inconsistent. They'll make the good plays on Monday, but on Tuesday they don;t know if they're on foot or horseback."

Newton's two-game win streak pushes the final record to 7-14.

Winkler remembers Agganis as football, baseball BU teammate

LYNN — George Winkler remembers his junior year at Boston University when the Terriers had a hot-shot recruit from Lynn named Agganis coming in. The veterans on the club were intent on giving the rookie the once-over.

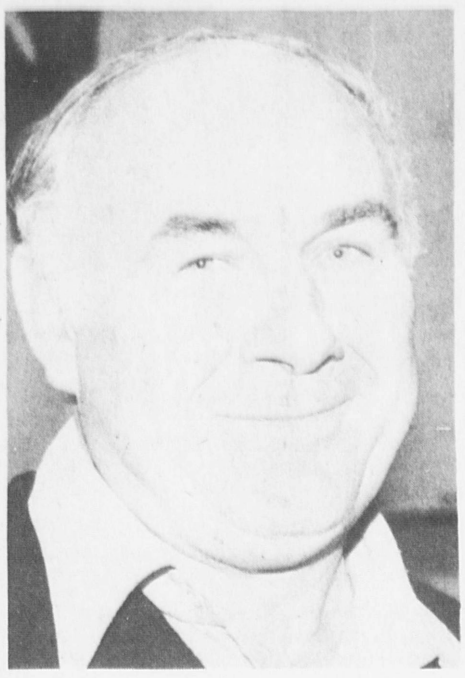
"We said, 'here's a freshman, we'll fix him'," said Winkler, who was a junior at the time. "We figured we'd let him know what college football is all about."

Before long, the Terriers realized that Harry Agganis would someday show them a thing or two. Since freshmen weren't allowed to play on the varsity at the time, Agganis ran the the scout team's offense in practice and almost immediately turned heads with his performance. "It didn't take long," Winkler noted. "You could tell he had a lot of ablity. He could play defense and offense, kick extra points and punt. We all learned to respect him."

Twenty-eight years later, Winkler, who recently retired as director of athletics at Newton South High School, is serving on the committee for the 25th annual Harry Agganis All-Star Game. He took some time out one night recently to reflect on what it was like to play with the Golden Greek.

"Harry was the type of guy who made you play better," said Winkler, an end who received many an Agganis aerial. "And he was an outstanding leader on and off the field. My first impression was that he could throw the ball. He knew when to throw it hard or soft and he could do both well. He took complete command of the huddle. Even as a sophomore he was in complete charge."

The Terriers achieved tremendous success during Agganis' first year on the varsity, carrying a 7-0 record into the Maryland game at Fenway Park. At stake was a berth in the Orange Bowl. After leading at one point, BU fell behind a point and stalled on downs inside the Maryland 5-yard line late in the game, losing 14-13.



George Winkler involved in grid classic

Winkler also played baseball at BU with Agganis, who opted for a Red Sox over a pro football career, playing next to him in the outfield and batting behind him in the order. He said football was where Harry excelled the most, however. "As outstandinga baseball player Harry was, I thought he was a great football player," Winkler said.

Asked to relate his favorite Harry Agganis story, Winkler spoke of the time during Harry's freshman year that he brought Winkler and a few of the BU players to Manning Bowl for the annual high school football jamboree.

"We asked him how much it was going to cost and he said not to worry," Winkler stated. "We walked into the stands and everyone started saying hello to Harry. We got hot dogs, cokes, the whole works. Everybody knew him. I never saw anybody so popular."

Which led to several comments on Agganis, the man. "I admired Harry not only because of his athletic ability," Winkler said, "but because he was a great guy. He was just as nice to the kids that didn't play as he was to the starters. He had time to listen to you. I don't think there was anybody on the team who didn't love him. He could have had an ego as big as all outdoors, but he didn't. He was just very confident, self-assured and mature for his age."

For years, as the football coach and athletic director at Newton South, Winkler knew that the Agganis game was a yearly ritual, but he never really got involved. Upon hs retirement, however, he moved to Magnolia and eventually inquired about getting involved in the planning of the game.

"I talked to Bill Tighe (Lexington, last year's West coach) and he said the committee was always looking for help," Winkler noted. "I missed my association with football, and here I am."

Having played with Agganis, Winkler is understandably excited about helping to put together this game which will be a tribute to him. "A lot of people derived pleasure from watching Harry play," said Winkler. "I was one of the fortunate ones to play with Harry."

The 25th game will be played in Harry's memory next Friday evening, at 7 p.m., at Manning Bowl.

National League

Giddon bats Auburndale 2nd

NEWTON — Jim Giddon's two-run double keyed a five-run third inning as the Auburndale Warriors clinched second place in the National League with a 6-2 victory Thursday over the Knights of Columbus at Ferguson Field.

The teams were tied at one apiece going into the big frame, which started with a Mike Dezotell single to right. After Stu Meltzer walked, Dave LeConti broke the tie with a single to right. Then came Giddon's shot to center for two pad runs.

Just to make sure, the Warriors added a couple of more markers when Stu O'Brien walked and Steve Collela and Rob Ingham followed with RBI singles.

The winners had taken a 1-0 lead in the first when LeConti singled to right, moved up on a walk to Giddon and an error, and tallied on Jim Rizza's hit.

The Knights matched that in the second when Pat Annese singled to center and eventually came around on Garrett Flynn's two-bagger to right.

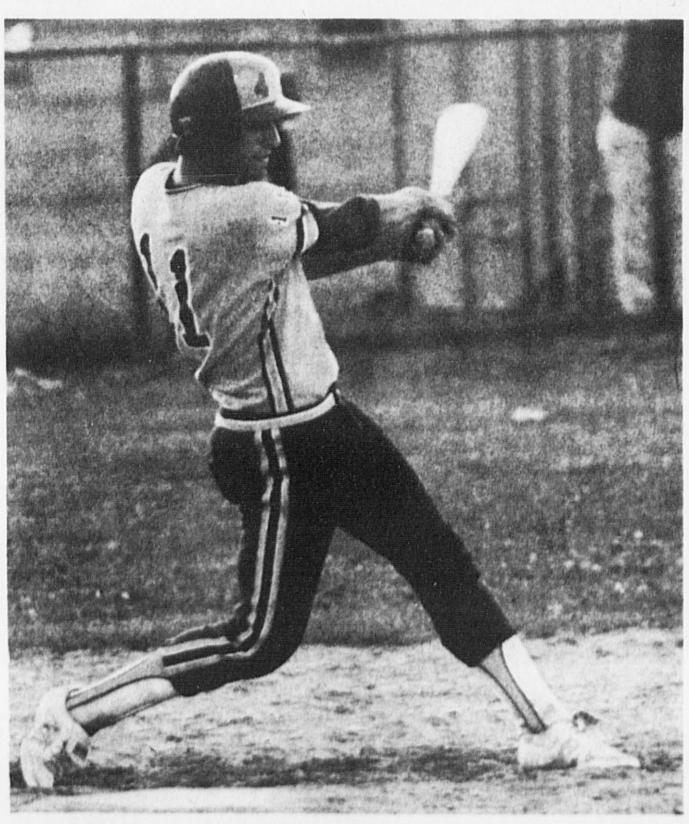
Dino Leone closed out the scoring with a solo homer to left in the third for Auburndale.

Meltzer went three innings for the victory in the darkness-shortened game. He struck out five. Sid Queler fanned two as he pitched the last inning. Neither Meltzer or Queler issued a walk.

Dan Deverix had two of the five Knight hits.

Clinching second place was important to the Warriors, because it means they will not face league-champion Mosca until the playoff finals, if they get that far.

Mosca wins



Jim Giddon's two-run double put Warriors in second place

When you're in first place and have been for quite some time, everything seems to go just right, and it continued to go right for Mosca Club, which beat Our Lady's, 5-4, at Albemarle Field.

The combination of the Our Lady's loss and St. Bernard's win forces a one-game playoff to determine fourth place and the final playoff spot. The clubs will battle on Monday at Albemarle at a yet-to-be-decided time.

Even though the Mosca troup managed just one hit off Our Lady's lefty Ken Kazarosian, they found other ways to score. Kazarosian supplied the base runners with 10 walks, and Mosca Club brought them home.

The lone hit of Kazarosian was a John Doherty two-run bloop single that tied the game in the fourth run. His hit scored Pillan Thirumalaisamy (walk) and Steve Stoller (fielder's choice).

The front-runners took advantage of five Our Lady errors and scored three runs off double steals. Kazarosian did not walk in a run.

Our Lady's hit Mosca starter Jon Glick early, with three straight singles in the first inning. Aldo Calcagni and Paul Kearney both singled, and Chris Bercury brought them home with a two-run double. Bercury then stole second and scored on a passed ball to put Our Lady's up, 3-0.

Glick got tough, keeping the Our Lady's bats silent until the seventh, when Sean McClellan laced a one-out triple and scored on a sacrifice fly by Andy Lyons. Before that, the right-handed curveballer was on fire, striking out a season-high 11 strikeouts.

Dan Monbouquette scored twice on Mosca Club double steals. His run in the first inning cut the Our Lady's deficit, and his marker in the fifth gave Mosca the 4-3 edge.

Thirumalaisamy scored an insurance run in the fifth off a third double steal.

Newton's Kornitzer at Olympic camp in N.Y.

WALTHAM — Newton's Magda Kornitzer was among six Waltham Track Club athletes who ventured to Lake Placid, N.Y. last week to participate in the five-day Women's Olympic Developmental Camp sponsored by the U.S. Olympic Committee.

Kornitzer joined Precious Hill, Judith Linnehan, Lisa Giovanetti, Jody Higgins, and Amy St. Pierre at the camp, designed to "assess potential and ability," according to Waltham Track Club coach Joe Tranchita.

"Basically, it's a developmental camp," Tranchita said. "It's giving the athletes a chance to become familiar with top flight college and national coaches."

All athletes, about 85 from the northeastern part of the country, had to either meet U.S. Olympic Committee standards or had to finish in the top six in their respective state finals.

"It will provide a sound basis of training and coaching with the emphasis being placed on mechanics and physiology," Tranchita said. "It's going to be a great experience for them. It's a chance to get some exposure to top flight coaching in addition to mixing around with some real top talent."

Kornitzer, from Newton North High, and Linnehan, from Waltham, will train for the mile, both qualifying because of their Massachusetts state finishes.

Hill, a member of the Waltham High track team, will train with the race-walking team after qualifying recently in the Junior Women's National Championship. In the two-mile, Beverly's St. Pierre, a new addition to the club, will join Waltham's Giovanetti, who is coming off her best track season ever. Higgins, a New Hampshire state champion, will train in the 880.

Except for St. Pierre, all were members of this fall's national championship team.

Steve Vaitones, the track club's men's coach, will join the girls in Lake Placid.

Newton forfeits Musial finale

NEWTON — The Newton Post 440 Stan Musial squad made the trek to Worcester Saturday for a doubleheader against the Warriors, but Newton was forced to forfeit the twin-bill because it could not field nine players.

The forfeit was the second of the season for Newton and, under Bay State League rules, if a team forfeits two games during the year without "extenuating circumstances", the entire schedule must be forfeited.

Earlier in the year, Newton had forfeited a game against Acton, and with the doubleheader-forfeit Saturday, Post 440 is through for the season. Newton was scheduled to play first-place Natick on Sunday in its final game.

"What can you do?" Post 440 assistant coach Ed Murray said Sunday night. Murray said umpires for Sunday's noon doubleheader waited "10 to 15 minutes" before awarding the game to Worcester. Newton had only six players at the time.

Diatchenko, Rutan to play in Agganis

LYNN — Two Newton gridsters have been selected to play in the 25th Annual Harry Agganis All-Star Football Game to be played at the Manning Bowl on Friday, Aug. 1, starting at 8 p.m.

The rosters of the Agganis West and Agganis East squads were announced recently by head coaches Bud Kelley and Bill Adams.

Chosen to play for Agganis West were linebacker Dimitri Diatchenko and running back Chris Rutan of Newton North. Newton was in the Suburban League title fight going into the last game of the year. The game benefits the Agganis Foundation, a perpetual fund that has provided some $500,000 in scholarship since its inception in 1955.

On the eve of the game, the traditional banquet will be held at the Caruso Diplomat on Rte. 1 in Saugus.

Tickets for both the game and the banquet are now on sale at various outlets throughout Eastern Mass.

North 3-1 Parkway victim

WEST ROXBURY — A pair of delayed squeeze bunts in the top of the 10th crossed two runs, and when Michael O'Leary stabbed a Joe Blanchard line drive in the bottom of the 10th, Parkway National claimed the the District 17 Little League Championship, 3-1, from Newton North at Praught Field.

In a thriller of a contest, Parkway National and Newton North squared off in a one-game showdown with the winner heading on to face District 11 champion Walpole. Someone had to lose, but it was not going to be in six innings.

Matt McCue made sure of that. The Newton lefty started the contest, and except for an unearned run in the second inning, pitched scoreless ball for nine innings.

By that time, Parkway starter Rob Koenig was long gone. Eric Hanefin was working on shutout ball of his own, and he and McCue took it to the limit — and beyond.

McCue left the game after nine, having walked two and struck out 11 in his bid for a third straight playoff victory.

Doug Gentile took the hill in the top of the 10th for Newton, and after walking Brian Donegan to lead off, he overthrew a bunt attempt by Bill Kinney to put runners at second and third with no outs.

Two straight bunts by Greg Morrow and Koenig did Newton in. On both occasions, Newton looked the runner at third back and, as soon as the infielder threw the ball to first, the runner on third broke home. Newton was unable to make the plays at home.

Koenig continued in shutout fashion in the bottom of the 10th, setting Newton down 1-2-3. He fanned Gentile and Jamie Keefe before Blanchard lined a shot that O'Leary, Parkway's second baseman, dove to his right to stab, ending the game.

McCue had been bruised for an unearned run in the second frame. Morrow singled to lead off the inning and stole second base. John McCarthy then knocked a grounder, and when Newton made the play at third, Morrow slid into third baseman Chris Ford's glove and kicked the ball loose.

Morrow then scored on Chris Arthmann sacrifice fly for a 1-0 lead.

McCue struck out the side in the third inning and held Parkway off the board until Newton could tie the contest in the fifth.

Jim DeLucca singled with two outs and moved across the paths when Gentile was hit by a pitch and Keefe walked. Blanchard then walked with the bases jammed to force in DeLucca.

Newton North coach Frank Gentile said of the series: "the kids had a great time. This is the furthest we've gone in a number of years, and we're very proud of these kids. They all played well."

Newton Rec swimmers post 100th victory

NEWTON — The magic century mark was passed recently when the Newton Recreation Swim team won its 100th meet since Scott and Mary Pohlman started coaching the club. The victim of the landmark triumph was Norwood, by a score of 233-163.

Since the Pohlmans took over in 1981, Newton is now 100-17. That record includes three winter championships, one summer crown, and three undefeated seasons.

In other action, Newton lost to host Needham, 213-184. A strong performance by Newton's younger swimmers was not enough as Needham captured six of the nine relays.

Newton did pick up a triumph over Westwood, 229-172, by taking control during the freestyle events. Bo Levin sparked that turn of events with a first in the 9-and-under boys freestyle, which was followed by a first by Miriam Kornitzer in the 11-12 girls. Doug Taylor rung up a win in the 11-12 boys.

A sweep in the 13-14 girls by Jenny Hager and Kristen Chappelle put Newton ahead to stay.

Tigers seem on the way up

NEWTON — For Newton North baseball coach Dick Walker, the superstructure is up but the house is not quite complete.

Having struggled through a 7-13 rebuilding year this past season, Walker is still looking at a rebuilding chore, but in a different sort of way.

Instead of fielding a senior group with little or no varsity experience, Walker will try his luck next spring with a young but worldly squad. The coach doesn't use the word "rebuilding," but instead refers to next season as "transitional."

Walker says, "It will be a young club, but we have a quantity of potentially good ball players in the younger grades. We're still going into next year with a sophomore and junior nucleus, but with a number of individuals back at key positions. It could make next year interesting."

Catcher Evan Galanis should be a stabilizing force on defense and will help ease the growing pains of a young pitching staff. The senior-to-be was platooned early this past year but won the job outright later in the season. And, considering the shoes Galanis had to fill, he did an admirable job.

Galanis replaced the graduated Colin Ryan, one of the finest defensive backstops in the area, and Walker admitted that his new catcher "had some pressure on him this year."

As the season progressed and Galanis won himself the starting job, Walker said the catcher's skills began to show.

"The strength and consistency of his throwing improved immensely," said Walker, who added that next year should be Galanis' year. "I think he'll really blossom. It will be a maturing process that will be very positive."

Galanis will have to mature, because the Tiger pitchers are a year or so away from becoming the class of the Suburban League. Freshmen Steve Leonard heads the list of potential pitching stars.

Walker said the right-hander "showed good control and poise" and "in two years he'll be one of the premier pitchers in the league."

In those two years, all Leonard has to do is develop. And Mother Nature takes care of most of that.

"He's got to stay hungry and continue to work hard," said Walker, "but physically he'll develop quite a bit. The velocity of his fastball and the consistency of his curve will improve with age. He'll only get better."

Leonard played second fiddle to seniors Andy Lyons, Sid Queler, and Bryan Scales this past season, but next year could be different for the soon-to-be sophomore.

Freshman Jason DeGeorge and sophomore Paul Fay both saw mound work, but in a limited fashion, leaving Leonard as the nominal ace.

DeGeorge's strong arm make him a candidate not only for a pitching spot but an infield or outfield assignment as well. Walker may not have a set spot for him yet, but says "Jason will project himself into a starting position somewhere. He's a good-sized kid and he's probably one of the quickest players we have."

Incoming freshmen Sam Lookner and Bruce Anderson will challenge for pitching spots.

George Maxcey should lead North with his bat. A .275 hitter this past season as a freshman, Maxcey has only touched his potential. The team's leadoff hitter and right fielder could find himself in a different spot next fall.

Walker said Maxcey could possibly be moved back in the lineup — maybe to number three — to provide a little more offense.

Defensively, with the graduation of senior co-captains Aldo Calcagni and Ron Coppola from the outfield, Maxcey could move from right to left field.

Mark Markunas will be a junior next season, one of only two 11th-graders on the team, and will add experience to the infield.

Walker mentioned several junior varsity players ready to make the jump. Scott Devore could play center field, Ken Kazarosian could play first, Jay Capello has the potential to become a solid catcher or infielder, and Joe Proia and Rob Kelly will be assets.

"With some luck next year, we could be in the tournament," Walker says, "and in two or three years we'll be very good."

Tempesta leads Warriors into 2nd

NEWTON — A Dan Tempesta two-run double in the second inning sent the Auburndale Warriors on the way to their ninth straight victory, 9-5, over Post 440 Thursday in Newton International League played at West Newton Common.

The Warriors, 10-6, move into a second-place tie with Oak Hill and pull to within one game of first-place Troubadour. Troubadour took a forfeit victory over St. Bernard's Thursday.

Tempesta's two-bagger scored Scott Popsuj and Matt Scales to put the Warriors up 2-0 and, when Mike Armstrong singled home Tempesta, Auburndale had a quick 3-0 lead it would not relinquish.

Adam Cedrone keyed a fourth-inning attack with his third homer of the year, a two-run shot to center field scoring Andy Hayes, and the Warriors led 8-0.

A Dave Sgarzi two-run triple and a Joe LaRoche RBI-double sparked a five-run post 440 fifth inning. In that frame, winning pitcher John Salemme allowed five of the nine hits against him.

The 15-year-old Salemme scattered four other safeties in posting the win. The righthander walked four and struck out eight.

Colin Casey, 14, pitched the complete game for the loss.

Albemarle wins

It wasn't exactly the miracle that the United States' Olympic Hockey team pulled off in 1980, but Albemarle Club's 2-1 victory over the Boys' Club at Cabot Park was indeed an upset.

The 6-11 Albemarle group topped the 9-5-1 Boys' Club on a Stephen Frail double in the sixth inning, with winning pitcher Peter Kochansky going the distance for the win.

Kochansky limited the Boys' Club to three hits, one a Joe DeNucci leadoff home run in the first inning. The righthander walked one and struck out seven.

In the sixth, Geoff Engler tripled to lead off for Albemarle, but he was thrown out at the plate on a double steal later in the inning. Mike Bower had walked with one out before connecting with Engler on the double steal. Bower was safe at second, but Engler wasn't so lucky.

Boys' Club shortstop Don MacDougall returned catcher George Maxcey's throw, and Maxcey laid the tag on Engler for the out.

Bower made up for the blunder, stealing third, before Frail came through in the clutch with his run-scoring double to center field.

Jason Chin reached on an error, moved to second on a Sam Wilson single, then scored on Pike's safety to right field.

Mike O'Connell went the distance for the Boys' Club, striking out eight while walking just one.

DeNucci had put the Boys' Club out in front with his homer to right-center in the first, but Jeff Pike evened the score with an RBI single in the Albemarle third.

East hurlers deliver in tournament

NEWTON — Andy Gregory and Chris Mensoian combined on a two-hitter and David Winickoff plated a pair of runs as Newton East beat Dorchester, Cedar Grove, 6-3, Thursday in Southeast Massachusetts Baseball Tournament competition played at Lyons Field.

Gregory allowed a run-scoring double in the second inning while Mensoian gave up a single in the sixth. Both 12-year-old righthanders posted two strikeouts each while walking three.

Winickoff singled home Dan Hausmann in the first inning, then scored on a wild pitch for a 2-0 Newton East lead.

Finklestein fired a three-hitter and O'Toole poked a double and two singles as Newton East breezed by Braintree National, 9-2, Wednesday at Newton Centre.

Finklestein struck out six Braintree batters while walking two. The 12-year-old righty limited Braintree to two runs off a third-inning home run.

Sunday, Newton dropped a 5-4 tourney game to Canton on a sixth-inning wild pitch by Elliott, the losing pitcher. Elliott had just been barrelled over at first base while covering on a bunt single.

That single pushed a Canton runner to third base and Elliott crossed him with a wild pitch.

Hausmann had a single and a double for Newton in the game.

Newton improves its overall tourney record stands to 4-2, and remain undefeated in Division II with a 2-0 mark.

John Salemme fanned eight in victory

Copp Stars explode for 16-7 victory

NEWTON — They were swinging freely in Saturday night's International League All-Star game under the lights at Burke Field.

But what else could you expect when the best hitters from the Copp Division (Boys' Club, Carson Post, Post 440, C&K and Abruzzi Club) and and Murphy Division (Oak Hill Cubs Troubadour, Albemarle Club St.Bernard's and the Auburndale Warriors) square off in this annual event?

Oh, perhaps a little closer game, as the Copp crew took an early, 7-0, lead and never looked back, winning convincingly, 16-7 over Murphy in the nine-inning slugfest.

Copp didn't waste too much time either in making its presence felt on the Murphy pitching staff.

After an out in the bottom of the first, Don MacDougall of the Boys' Club walked and stole second to start the rally.

Then George Maxcey, also of the Boys' Club, singled to center to drive in his teammate and give Copp a 1-0 edge.

Maxcey stole second, and one out later, scored on Steve Leonard's (Post 440) single to left.

In the bottom of the third, MacDougall got things started again this time with a triple. He would score when Paul Fay (C&K Components) came through with a single up the middle.

Consecutive walks to Leonard and David Strassburger (Abruzzi) loaded the bases for Rob Wilkinson (Carson Post), who blasted a triple over the center-fielder's head to score all three runners, and then scored himself on a wild pitch to make it a 7-0

Born in Holliston, he had been resident of Waltham for 10 years prior to moving to West Newton, where he had been a resident for the past eight years.

Mr. Reeves had been a machinist with Fab-Braze Corp. of Waltham until his illness.

He leaves his wife, Christine May (Demko) Reeves; his children, Roger Michael Reeves of West Newton; his sisters and his brothers, Eleanor Lester of St. John, N. B., Jenny McCarville of Kensingington, P. E. I., Dorothy Harrington of Framingham, Norman Reeves, Lorne Reeves, Lloyd Reeves and Seaman Reeves, all of Prince Edward Island.

Arrangements by the Brasco and Son Memorial, 773 Moody St., Waltham, and by the C. C. Moase and Sons Funeral Home, 150 Summer St., Summerside, Prince Edward Island.

Eileen M. Kerns, 72

Was registered nurse

WEST NEWTON — The funeral of Eileen M. (Fitzpatrick) Kerns, 72, of West Newton, was held Wednesday at 9 a.m. from the Lyons and Hayes Funeral Home, 1479 Washington St., West Newton, followed by a funeral mass in St. Bernard's Church at 10 a.m. Interment was in Calvary Cemetery, Waltham.

Mrs. Kerns died Friday evening at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Brighton, after a long illness.

Born in Newton, she attended local schools and graduated from St. Elizabeth's School of Nursing as a registered nurse with the Class of 1931. Mrs. Kerns had been employed at St. Elizabeth's Hospital for 14 years.

She leaves her husband, Paul J. Kerns; her children, Paul J., Jr. of Waltham, Francis B. Kerns of Newton, Mary Ellen Jeppesen of North Hampton, N. H. and five grandchildren.

Sidney S. Gelles, 70

Pres. and Chairman of Charles S. Gelles, Inc.

NEWTON CENTRE — A funeral service for Sidney S. Gelles, 70, of Newton Centre, was held Thursday afternoon in the Stanetsky Memorial Chapel, Brookline. Burial was in Beth El Cemetery, West Roxbury.

Mr. Gelles died Tuesday at New England Sinai Hospital, Stoughton, after a brief illness.

Born in Boston, he was raised in Mattapan and had been a resident of Newton for 40 years. He was graduate of Dorchester High School, Class of 1932 and attended Tufts College.

Mr. Gelles was president and chairman of Charles S. Gelles, Inc., of Canton, a neckware manufacturing company. Mr. Gelles started as a lining cutter with the firm.

He was a member of the Mens Apparel Club of New England, the Mens College Club, the United Lodge, AF and AM and Temple Emanuel, Newton.

During World War II, he served in the Army.

The husband of the late Clara G. Gelles and the son of the late Pauline and Charles Gelles, he leaves his wife, Evelyn (Kleinman) Gelles; his children, Dr. Richard Gelles of R. I., Robert of Newton, James and Jane Garfield, both of Swampscott; his sister, Bernice Bunny Meyers; his grandchildren, Jason, David, Andrew and Alexandra Gelles and Jared and Lindsay Garfield.

Brother J. Fontanari, CSS

WALTHAM — A mass of Christian burial for Brother Joseph Fontanari, CSS, 74, a member of the Stigmatine Fathers and Brothers of the Province of the Holy Espousals of the Blessed Virgin Mary and St. Joseph, was concelebrated Tuesday at 11 a.m. in Sacred Heart Church, Waltham. Burial was in Sacred Heart Cemetery, Milford at 2 p.m.

Brother Fontanari died Saturday at WalthamWeston Hospital, following a lengthy illness.

Born in Pergine, Italy, Brother Fontanari entered the Stigmatine Congregation on May 10, 1928, in Verona, Italy. He professed his First Vows on May 4, 1930, and shortly thereafter, came to the U. S.

He was first assigned to the student house in Waltham, where he remained for many years. Other assignments included, Our Lady of Mt. Carmel Church, Springfield; Sacred Heart Church, Vancouver, British Columbia; Our Lady of Mt. Carmel Church, White Plains, N. Y. and the Stigmatine Major Seminary, Wellesley.

After serving in the student house in Newton, he retired in 1973 due to failing health and spent his retirement years at Stigmatine residences in West Yarmouth, Newton and Waltham.

Newsmakers

Judith Feldman, Margot Fanger, Ellen Offner and Andrew Epstein of Newton were honored at a dinner for the Harvard Community Health Plan. Thomas O. Pyle presented the awards. The honor is given to individual staff members for excellence, commitment, and extraordinary effort on behalf of the Harvard Plan and its members.

Ann Gough of Newtonville and Evelyn Makarewich of Chestnut Hill were honored by the New England Deaconess Hospital for more than 100 hours of volunteer service. Gough volunteered over 300 hours making knitted and other craft items for the Holiday Bazaar; Makarewich volunteered 280 hours in the hospital thrift shop.

The following Newton residents are participating in the Charles River Creative Arts Program's Festival: Matt Laufer, Jerome Chou, Lee Rosenblum, David Travis, Rebecca Robbins, and Erika Johnson, who will be performing in the premiere of "Handle With Care"; Tracy Northup, assistant to the Deputy Mayor of Boston and a programmer in the Mayor's Office of Program Development.

Nancy Swidler, a teacher at the Angier School in Newton and a Framingham resident, has been awarded a $250 prize by the John F. Kennedy Library for her work in teaching state and local government politics for kindergarten students. Students learned about the roles and responsibilities of state legislators, discussed and formed opinions about current issues, and talked about why we have laws and how citizens can bring about change. As part of this unit, students recorded their ideas for new laws in journals. They met with state rep. Barbara Gray both at their school and at the State House.

Joan Chaisson, an attorney who lives in Auburndale, and Mimi Roberto of Newton each won $1000 in a raffle sponsored by the Support Committee for Battered Women, which celebrated its fifth anniversary.

Myer Shockett, of Newton, was named outstanding volunteer by the American Red Cross Blood Services — Northeast Region during its annual meeting June 17.

Schockett was cited for his excellent service as chairman of the Massachusetts Employee Blood Program Executive Board. Through his leadership all state agencies strive to achieve participation in the Blood Services program by 25 percent of all employees.

Paula J. Waters has been appointed vice president for finance and business management of Andover Newton Theological School in Newton Centre. Her appointment is effective July 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Lt. Robert M. McClure

Susanna Stone is wed to Lt. Robert M. McClure

EAST HAMPTON, N.Y. — Susanna Stone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Stone of East Hampton, New York, and Lieutenant Robert Michael McClure were married on June 21 at the First Presbyterian Church in East Hampton, New York with the Rev. Frederick Schulz officiating.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. McClure of Newton.

A reception following the ceremony was held at the Devon Yacht Club in Amagansett, New York.

The matron of honor was the bride's aunt, Mrs. George C. Harris of Prescott, Arizona. Attending as bridesmaids were: Lisa Schulte, Wendy Scheerer, and Debbie Conklin of East Hampton and Kim Hanlon of Natick.

The bride wore a Victorian style gown of ivory satin. At the neckline she wore a family heirloom cameo brooch bearing the image of her great-grandfather. She carried a cascade of roses, stephanotis and baby's breaths.

David McClure served as his twin brother's best man. Performing the duties of usher were Steven Beaudet, James Murphy, Scott St. Coeur and Thornton W. Burgess V.

The bride graduated from East Hampton High School, attended Wheaton College and graduated from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst with a degree in psychology.

The bridegroom is a 1982 graduate of Newton North High School and graduated in May 1986 from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst with a degree in geology and a commission in the U.S. Air Force.

After a trip to New Hampshire, they are making their home in East Hampton. The couple will move to Sacramento, Calif. where the bridegroom will begin navigator training as an officer in the U.S. Air Force.

Graphics seminar held at the Marriott Hotel

NEWTON — Sherman Howe Computer Centers recently presented a one-day seminar on Desktop Publishing at the Marriott Hotel in Newton. The aim of the seminar, entitled "Make a Graphic Impact on Your Business," was to show how anyone could use desktop publishing to revolutionize the professional standards and image of every document produced by a company. The seminar was attended by over 500 of the area's leading business people.

Bill Campbell, U.S. Vice President of Sales for Apple Computer, Inc., was the keynote speaker at both the breakfast and luncheon sessions of the seminar. Campbell spoke of Apple's commitment to the business environment and a dedication to working on Apple connectivity and desktop publishing.

Representatives of the industry's leading equipment and software suppliers, including were assembled to demonstrate their products and give presentations on the latest developments in desktop publishing. Workshops were given by General Computer of Cambridge, Aldus Corp., and Forethought Inc.

Sherman Howe Computer Centers, with locations in Boston and Newton, is a major independent computer sales and service organization. The company has developed a reputation in the area for its expertise in desktop publishing.

For more information contact Karen Davis at 965-8970.

Senior Citizen Services

Nonantum Multi-Service Center in Nonantum offers health screening clinics, chess, dancing, exercise, cermanics, bowling, crocheting, films, bingo and other activities. The center is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. For more information call 965-6390.

Diane Patten, Newton's outreach worker, is available to help seniors with their problems. She will help assess problems and arrange for social services and/or financial benefits if necessary. She can be reached at the Department of Human Services, 552-7170.

Free weekly discussions groups are held at the Porter House for the Elderly each Wednesday afternoon. The meetings, led by a psychiatric nurse, are open to the public yet are limited in size. For details and a registration form mail your name and address to the Porter House, 44 Winthrop St., West Newton 02165 or call 964-3533.

Newton Rider for seniors provides convenient shopping bus service on Wednesdays and Thursdays directly from a passengers home to the Star Market's in Newton. The fare is $1 for a round trip. Call 552-7280 or 552-7100.

Newton Free Library's Social Services Department offers services for the hearing and visually impaired.

The library recently acquired a TDD/TTY, a telecommunications device that enables deaf and hearing-impaired people to communicate by telephone with each other as well as with non-hearing impaired people. Messages are typed on a keyboard, transmitted by telephone, and are then displayed on a screen and/or on paper. Both the sender and the receiver must have a TDD. For information call Anna Hartogh at 552-7145.

Na'amat USA Task Force sends alerts on abortion amendments

In addition to raising funds to help Israeli families, Na'amat USA champions the passage of legislation in the United States that will protect the rights of women and children and supports full funding for the U.S. aid programs to Israel.

The Na'amat USA Task Force in Washington, D.C. sends "alerts" to each council in the country when legislation concerning these matters are in consideration in congress.

Alert: The national family planning program, established through the Public Service Act needs to be reauthorized. Na'amat USA wants to prevent any attempt to attach anti-abortion amendments to this reauthorizing legislation which would cut off funds to agencies which provide counseling and referrals for abortion, and require parental notification before minors can receive contraceptives.

Action: The reauthorization will come up for consideration this summer in the senate.

Contact your senate by phone or mail and express Na'amat's concern about anti-abortion amendments being made to the reauthorization.

8th annual Elvis Presley Day August 17

NEWTON — The Eighth Annual Elvis Presley Day will be held Aug. 17, Sunday, from 2 to 7 p.m. at Hawthorn Park, Newton, on Watertown Street, Rt. 16, behind Clay Chevrolet.

Monk Pelly and The Legends will be the main event in concert at 5:30 p.m. "The King of Elvis Tributes" will be performing a 90-minute live power-packed Las Vegas act, limousine entrance and bodyguards.

The undercard at 4 p.m. will be comedians from the Comedy Connection. Kevin Meaney (Star Search) and Tony V. (Showtime T.V.)

Elvis Day will also include a large Elvis memorabilia display, personally owned by Monk Pelly, and videos of Elvis.

T-shirts, buttons, bumperstickers and food will be on sale. Three Elvis prizes will be raffled. The first place winner will have his picture taken with Monk Pelly (autographed) and a ride in the limousine.

Elvis Day started in 1979 and has become the biggest Elvis tribute and best around (a major outdoor event, one of a kind).

Monk Pelly and The Legends perform for free every year and all the participants and helpers render their services for free also.

Monk Pelly and The Legends perform all over New England and draw a larger crowd each year.

Raindate for the event is Sunday, Aug. 24.

Young Composers invited to enter works in competition

NEWTON — Young composers will have an opportunity to have their work presented in a major concert next year highlighting Judaic music.

The Leventhal-Sidman Jewish Community Center announces the Young Composers Jewish Choral Music Competition. The competition, open to all composers under the age of 31, will culminate in a public performance of the winning composition on the Concerts on the Campus series at the Leventhal-Sidman Jewish Community Center, 333 Nahanton Street, Newton Center, on the Gosman Jewish Community Campus.

The concert, performed by the Zamir Chorale of Boston, will be held on Feb. 28, 1987.

The Concerts on the Campus series, dedicated to presenting quality Jewish performing arts, through this competition, hopes to stimulate the creative individual, encourage the development of new artistic talent and to bring Jewish arts to the attention of the greater Boston community. Two works will be selected to receive cash awards. The first prize winner will receive $500, runner-up will receive $250.

The composition should be scored for performance by the Zamir Chorale, a community chorus of 40 voices under the musical direction of Joshua Jacobson. The text must have Jewish content and may be written in English, Hebrew, Yiddish or Ladino, a cappella or with piano accompaniment and may not exceed 10 minutes in duration.

The deadline for receiving entries is Dec. 1. The Zamir Chorale of Boston is the resident chorus of the Leventhal-Sidman J.C.C.

For further information call Linda Hiltz, performing arts director, 965-7410.

Bikers pedal for world peace

By John Ombelets
Staff Writer

WATERTOWN — The scarlet-and-gold Soviet flag floated lazily in the early morning breeze at Arsenal Park, suspended from a softball backstop side by side with banners from the US, Canada and Czechoslovakia.

The hammer-and-sickle emblem was a startling sight in this manicured, half-empty park adjacent to the US Army's materials research lab, and you had to look up there every so often to make sure what you saw was really there.

There were strange sounds too—jokes told in Russian and Slovak, young men in shorts and T-shirts looking like they stepped out of a Miller beer commercial—you know, "Miller's made the American way"—but somehow speaking the language of President Reagan's own Evil Empire.

But there was nothing fearful about these strangers. They were not interested in world domination in Arsenal Park yesterday, but rather, breakfast, and a little socializing with a new group of Americans.

The dozen or so Soviets visiting here were part of a contingent that included Czechs, Canadians and Americans who have ridden bicycles more than 1,000 miles to promote what the Russians call "mir"—"peace."

Soviet and Czech cyclists started in Kiev on June 22 and joined up with a contingent of American and Canadian riders at the Czech border on July 1.

From there, they rode to Prague, flew to Montreal on July 10, and have been cycling down through New England since. Their destination is the United Nations complex in New York, where, after 1,400 miles on bicycles, they will help mark the UN's International Year of Peace.

In the waning days of what has been an exhausting trip, the riders have had to help each other get their tired muscles jump started each morning.

Yesterday, however, was a day off, so everyone piled into a big yellow school bus outside the Harvard University dormitory where they were billeted, and headed to Watertown for a breakfast sponsored by the First Parish Church.

The event drew a smattering of local bicycling enthusiasts, peace enthusiasts, Watertown officials, curious residents and the ever-present news media.

Speeches were served up with the sweet rolls, juice and coffee.

Barbara Farrell, a church member who led the organizing committee, told the crowd of about 75 "maybe we can build a bridge in our hearts" between East and West.

First Parish minister Mark Salkin noted the irony of congregating in the name of peace on land that was once the site of a munitions factory.

But most eloquent were the riders themselves.

Peter, a Czech cyclist from Slovakia, said, "when two people together don't have the same thinking, they must find some common solution. It is the same between nations."

"This bicycling is one way to do this," he said, thumbing a dog-eared Czech-English dictionary. "I think we are building a heavy bridge."

Susan Farrington, who traveled from Newtonville to Presov, Czechoslovakia to make the ride, said the people in the Czech villages all along the route asked her to "tell the people in the United States we want to have peace."

"This ride won't make the two governments any closer, but it can't but help," Farrington said. "I met literally thousands of people, and we all found out that they are people just like us.

"One woman came up to me in a village and said with a smile, 'So you don't have horns and a tail like I thought you would.' "

Mikhail Nakovyakov, a reporter with the Novokist news service, said "it is a slow process. As more people from the two countries meet they will understand each other better."

The former Canadian correspondent with Novokist said he likes the Americans he has met so far but is anxious to get back to Moscow. "I miss my wife," Nakovyakov said.

It should come as no great revelation that citizens of countries at odds with each other can still get along so well, said Steve Woodbury, a New Hampshire rider who was on the host committee.

"I didn't learn anything that I hadn't already suspected," he said. "I always felt that we could be friends with the Soviet people, and how many of our goals and wishes are the same; I just feel it stronger now."

By the time the breakfast broke up and the bikers for peace got back on the bus, Russians, Czechs and Americans had exchanged names and addresses, and perhaps, a little more understanding.

Getting ready for the long ride.

Back rubs loosen up participants prior to biking.

Barbecue, proclamation welcome bikers

By Stephanie Simon
Correspondent

NEWTONVILLE — English mingled with Russian and Czech. Mayor Theodore Mann offered drinks to people from four countries. People talked in small groups, shared experiences, and pointed to battle scars.

The scene was Eleanor Rosenblum's house at 15 Bemis St. last night. The people were cyclists in the Bike for Peace project who had gathered at Rosenblum's home along with friends and relatives for a barbecue.

As soon as the bikers arrived, Mann presented a proclamation and the key to the city to one of the group leaders from the Soviet Union.

"Bike for Peace is a very important effort ... it's a colorful, non-political appeal for peace," Mann said. "We call upon the people of Newton to welcome the bikers and support their endeavor. We proclaim Tuesday, July 22, Bike for Peace Day in Newton."

Mann went on to comment about the many ethnic and religious groups represented in Newton. "We have a mixed heritage here," he said, "and the Bike for Peace program gives us impetus to move forward and try to understand eachother."

When presenting the key to the city, Mann explained, "This represents the good wishes of our people. We want to relay our strong affection to you (the bikers)."

Along their 1400 mile journey, the bikers have been greeted by many local residents and by several town officials and dignitaries. In Eastern Europe, says Soviet Union biker Peter Gradlov, "hundreds of people lined the streets" when the group went through each town. Last night's party was different because it took place in a home.

Eleanor Rosenblum, whose daughter Kathryn is one of the 11 United States bikers, has been working as a member of the host committee which plans the group's stopovers and coordinates living arrangements.

"I wanted them to get away from the institutional settings of churches and schools and get them to someone's house. I have a big backyard, so I decided to have a barbecue here," she says. With a little planning and a lot of cooking, she organized the reception for the 45 people involved with Bike for Peace.

Most of the bikers were eager to share their experiences with curious friends and neighbors who attended the barbecue.

"It's great to see the new, excited faces in every town," says Kathryn Rosenblum. "Towns bring out their local dignitaries, and everyone supports us."

Susan Farrington of Newtonville agrees: "The best part was meeting all the people involved. I've been surprised at how many people wanted to help us. It's wonderful to know that so many people will join for a common goal of peace."

How to plan a home computer center

By Better Homes and Gardens
A Meredith Magazine

Planning to streamline your life with a home computer? Here's what you need to consider for a well thought-out area, reports Better Homes and Gardens Decorating magazine.

Best location

How you'll use your computer largely determines its best location. For business use during the day, your computer should be in a roomy, private space. If the whole family will use the computer, however, chose a location like the kitchen or family room.

Task lighting

You'll need task lighting for your work surface and keyboard, and low general lighting to reduce eye fatigue that high contrasts between light and dark areas sometimes cause. The key is in positioning the fixtures so that the light sources aren't reflected on the screen.

For general lighting, choose a fixture with baffles that shade the light source. A hanging pendent lamp that can be raised or lowered is a good choice. For task lighting, consider a goose-necked lamp that can be adjusted to light your paperwork.

Glare screens

Windows and objects in the room cause glare when they're reflected in the monitor screen. If sunlight is a problem, consider repositioning your monitor so the screen isn't opposite the windows. Another option is to cover your windows with a treatment that directs the sunlight away from the screen. Fabric vertical blinds that can be rotated to follow the sun's movement as well as absorb and refract the sunlight are a good choice.

Reflections caused by objects in the room usually can be corrected easily, once they're identified. To find problem areas, place a mirror in front of the screen. Any objects that are reflected should be removed or replaced with darker, nonreflective items.

Some systems have special features that help reduce reflections. Filters built into the screen minimize reflections with impairing the sharpness of the image, and keyboards made with matte-finish keys reduce glare.

Color use

Finally, sharply contrasting colors can tire your eyes, so it's best to use soft and subdued colors in the immediate area around your computer monitor. A work surface with a matte finish also will help reduce glare.

Static causes problems for some systems with magnetic memories. Hard-surfaced floors are one way to avoid the problem. In a carpeted room, place an antistatic mat under the chair and desk or treat the carpet with an antistatic aerosol spray.

Blankets that have a brain

Little is more jarring in a happy relationship than to have your mate's icy feet jolting you awake. While you may not be able to do anything about cold feet, some new electric blankets tested recently by Consumer Reports' engineers may help. They're designed to adjust the heating rate to your body's — and presumably your mate's — own needs.

If your shoulders get warm, that part of the blanket should cool down; if your toes get cold, the blanket covering them should heat up and warm them.

Sold under the Sunbeam Omni and Slumber Rest Genesis labels, these so-called "blankets with a brain" cost about the same as conventional deluxe electric blankets. Queen-size models were priced at about $93.

The new brainy models are different from traditional electric blankets. Traditional blankets contain wires through which electricity flows, generating heat. Some of that heat, along with your own body heat, is trapped by the blanket.

Sprinkled throughout traditional blankets are thermostats (the small bumps that are the most noticeable part of the hardware in an electric blanket). They sense the heat and keep the wires — and the blanket — from overheating.

The newly designed blankets don't have the lumpy thermostats. Parallel conducting wires separated by a special electrically conductive plastic make thermostats unnecessary. Current passes through the plastic from one wire to another. As the plastic gets hotter, it becomes more resistant to electrical current and, in effect, turns down the heat at any hot spots.

Because the plastic between the wires resists current as it gets hotter, the current will be reduced at the hot spot. Therefore, overheating — and a possible fire — should not occur.

The engineers confirmed the blankets' safety by folding one on itself six times, then allowing it to cycle on and off for seven weeks. The tested blanket became hot, but it never showed signs of smoldering.

Consumer Reports' engineers invited 11 staff members to try the new blankets at home. Overall, the new blankets were judged satisfactory. Most of the staff members who tried them said they felt just the right amount of warmth. Only one staffer reported noticing a "spot-heating" effect. One major drawback with the brainy blankets is the clicking sound made by their controls. The engineers say that for about the same price as these new models, you can buy a conventional electric blanket that has a quiet, solid-state control.

Office is home away from home

By Science Digest
A Hearst magazine

The office "family" of father-boss and sibling co-workers is replacing traditional family ties for some people for whom the office has become an emotional home away from home.

Many business concerns promote this family feeling, according to an article in the April issue of Science Digest, but this is not always healthy.

Jane Griffith, a psychologist at the Americas Institute of Adlerian Studies in Chicago, explained the reasons, saying that "with the breakdown of the neighborhood, religious life and the extended family, people are naturally turning to their jobs for a sense of connection."

Psychologists and personnel managers, however, are discovering that the merger of family and corporation does not always work for the best.

Saul Pavlin, a New York psychologist who specializes in group counseling for corporate employees, said some people acted out family roles on the job — often unconsciously and with disastrous results.

People with an unresolved need for a caring parent, for instance, sometimes see the boss as a father. They idealize him — even if he does not deserve it — and are disappointed when he fails to take care of them.

Employees also may engage in sibling rivalries with co-workers, competing for the attention of their "boss-daddy."

Employees sometimes use their commitment to a job as an excuse for ignoring their real home life.

"It's all too easy to have your first priority be your work and not the persons you love," said Jacqueline Plumez, author of "Divorcing a Corporation." "Relationships are hard work, and unlike a job, they sometimes do not have clear-cut reinforcers. At your job, at least you get a paycheck."

Dan O'Keefe, corporate manager for staffing and development at Helene Curtis Industries, said when he was personnel manager at another corporation he noticed some people were spending too much time at work.

"The comfort level was obviously higher at the office than it was at home," he said.

One danger for the individual is that when he is laid off or he retires or his job lets him down, he has nothing to fall back on.

Some people are so emotionally tied to their work they cannot quit, even when it would be in their best interest to do so.

Pat Heanue, co-owner of the recruiting firm of Vantage Careers, said one of the biggest problems she now faced was getting people to overcome the separation anxiety and guilt that attacked them when they switched jobs.

"Getting a divorce from your corporate marriage can be every bit as wrenching as getting a real divorce," Plumez said.

Many corporations foster office family feeling as a way to encourage loyalty, and their efforts range from holding picnics to offering "cradle to grave" benefits packages.

The tactic apparently works. International Business Machines employees refer to "Mother IBM." Delta Air Lines workers not only speak of "Delta famiy feeling," but during an airline industry slump several years ago they chipped in to buy the company a Boeing 767.

These feelings of belonging and loyalty to a company are not bad, as long as they are kept in perspective.

By Wood
A Meredith Magazine

Pioneers learned to harvest the fruit of America's only ebony, persimmon, after fall's first frost. Before then, the small pinkish-red "possum apples" possess enough tannic acid to pucker impatient pickers until Christmas.

According to WOOD, of the more than 200 species of trees and shrubs that claim membership in the ebony family, persimmon (Diospyros virginiana) and Texas persimmon (Diospyros texana) are the only two you'll find in North America.

The Texas species confines itself there, while the other is far-ranging. Often called possumwood because of this animal's attraction to the fruit, the common persimmon grows all the way from southern New York to Florida, west to Texas, and ventures into northern Missouri.

As in the pioneer past, folks still gather and use persimmons. The year's first frigid snap sends the trees' leaves tumbling, but sweetens the remaining small, globular fruit. Semi-sweet and edible right off the tree, persimmons become the fruity ingredient in jams, jellies, breads and cookies.

Normally a small- to medium-sized tree no higher than 60-75 feet, the persimmon has wood much like its dark, tropical cousins. The small core of heartwood varies from black to dark brown with a nearly white sapwood that is close-grained and strong. The sapwood takes a high polish and is a favorite for treenware made locally where it grows, as well as long-lasting shuttles for looms in the textile industry.

It's on the golf course, however, that persimmon really shines. Here, pros and divoters alike praise premium drivers' heads made from persimmon sapwood, which neither splits nor splinters upon impact.

Consulting retail store design departments

By Barbara Mayer
AP Newsfeatures

You're thinking about redecorating the living room, but need help integrating what you already have with what you need to buy. It's a standard reason for engaging the services of an interior designer.

Recently, however, more people have been consulting the design department of their favorite local store. A number of department and furniture stores are reporting increased design department business. One reason may be that many are willing to work with customers' existing furnishings and even to shop for special pieces in the wholesale marketplace, provided some purchases are made through the store.

Advantages of retail design departments include access to the resources of a large store, ability to charge all purchases, which are often billed at delivery rather than at time of order, the store's guarantee that the merchandise will arrive in good condition and possible time savings in job completion.

The Chicago department store Marshall Field is one of those enjoying what Robert J. Wetterer, director of the interior design studio, says is an unbroken growth pattern.

The store is an example of how far some stores are willing to go to get lucrative decorating business. There is no charge for the service, provided a sufficient amount of merchandise is purchased. Although no dollar amounts are set, Wetterer said, it is not atypical for a client to spend many thousands of dollars for each room.

Approximately 24 Marshall Field designers shop decorating sources for items not carried in stock, draw floor plans and make working drawings. They also can and will design custom furniture, work with contractors and architects, maintain their own list of skilled craftsmen, even do kitchens and baths right down to the fixtures. They also help clients select linens, dinnerware and accessories from other store departments.

At Bloomingdale's, there is a $500 charge for the decorating service, but this is applied to the first $2,500 of merchandise.

While Bloomingdale's designers will go into the market for "special pieces," they anticipate that most of the items purchased will come from their stock, according to William Florio, director of the Stamford, Conn., branch's design department.

Typically, a client may spend a minimum of $15,000 per room and much higher expenditures are common. Florio says that once the client OKs the selections made by the designer, a job can be completed within three months.

Even the large national chains with catalogs, such as J.C. Penney, Sears and Spiegel, have begun providing some decorating guidance. Both Penney and Sears offer shop-at-home services which put company-trained individuals in the customer's home to give advice on and sell window treatments, as well as decorative fabrics. Sears also offers a reupholstery service and Penney's offers carpeting.

Sears shop-at-home service is found in 80 percent of its 800 full-line stores, according to Wood Caldwell, group style coordinator for Sears Home Fashions. Decorators help customers choose window coverings, bedspreads, reupholstery, table covers and placemats and shower curtains. Penney's offers a similar service, and sells carpeting in the home, but rarely reupholstery, according to a company spokesman. In both chains the service is free, regardless of whether any merchandise is ordered. Prices includes installation.

Spiegel, which has no stores, uses specialty catalogues and trained telephone sales reps to sell a wide variety of home furnishings. However, a full-scale interior design service is being planned for introduction in 1987, according to Bette Rosenberg, home fashions coordinator.

"We are hoping to introduce a book in December with a planning kit and after that, in about a year or so, to offer a service where a customer will be able to send a rough sketch of a room and get a scheme with suggested colors, room arrangements and furnishings from the catalogue," she said.

Since decorating service policies are varied, it's important to comparison shop to find out what services are offered.

Ask specifically if decorators make home visits, if they will recommend, confer with or supervise artisans and contractors, if they are capable and willing to design built-ins, if they will shop outside the store for merchandise (and under what conditions), and if they have access to commercial furnishings. Ask to see examples of work by your decorator and check credentials.

Mini-vacuum lacks power

"Think small" seems to be the focus of some firms that manufacture hi-tech equipment. Mini-TV sets enable you to watch "instant replays" while attending major sports events; small beepers let you know that you have an important call — and some even display the caller's number on a tiny LED screen.

Joining the ranks are two mini-vacuum cleaners sold primarily by mail order — the Mini-Vac, $29.95 plus shipping, and a lookalike called the Little Vac, $18.50 plus shipping.

Ads for the tiny, handheld battery-powered vacuum cleaners promise lots of power in the small packages. They're touted as ideal for cleaning computer keyboards, camera lenses and other small, hard-to-reach places. Both come with small cleaning wands and brush nozzles.

Consumer Reports' engineers put both of the gadgets to the test on a variety of cleaning chores: dusting the deck of a model ship; picking up talcum powder, sawdust and fine sand from a tabletop and a low-pile rug; removing grit and dust from inaccessible corners inside a car; and cleaning an LP record.

The engineers found that the claims were more powerful than the gadgets. Neither vacuum had suction strong enough to pick up all of the dust and debris. (In some cases, hardly any was removed.)

Both the Mini-Vac and the Little Vac tended to choke on gritty materials such as sand, salt and sugar. If the gadgets were held so that their small collecting bags were pointed upward, some grit would fall into the fan chamber and jam the fan blades. (You usually hold the vacuums so that the bag is aimed down or to one side.)

You can disassemble the Mini-Vac to remove the grit, but the Little Vac doesn't come apart. You have to prod and tap the gadget to dislodge specks of dirt.

In their favor, the little vacuums were able to handle some jobs satisfactorily. For instance, they could clean the keyboard of a typewriter or a typewriter-style computer keyboard. And they could pull the little ball of dust from the needle of a record player's cartridge.

"The Single Persons Answer"

Published Thursdays in The Daily Transcript and the News Tribune and in the Transcript Weekly Newspaper

This page is the perfect place for the unmarried, widowed, divorced or separated to meet that "special someone." It's a way to take charge of your own life in a dignified, confidential manner. Best of all, it will be someone who lives fairly close to you.

Do personal ads get results?

Dear Ray,
For the past four or five months I have been reading the personal ads in "Relationships". I've thought about running my own ad, but several issues have made me hesitate. First of all, I wonder if they really work for people. Secondly, I'm not quite sure what I should say about myself and about the person whom I would like to meet. And, I suppose, I'm also concerned that my friends would recognize from my ad that it was me advertising and I wonder how they would react to it.

I'm a 44-year-old guy who has been divorced for two years. I was married for over 20 years and my son and daughter are grown and on their own now. I've been somewhat active in the singles scene and I have met some interesting women, but I'm still unattached and looking to establish a relationship that might lead to marriage or a living together arrangement. If you publish my letter, please don't mention my name or where I live.

A Man Who Is Wondering

Dear Wondering,
The questions that you pose are probably the most universal questions concerning personal ads. Let me address them one at a time.

Personal ads do work for some people, but not for everyone. There are basic reasons for each result. Usually the ads that are most successful are those that provide specific information about the writer and the type of person that he or she is looking for. An ad that states that the writer is looking for someone who is "nice, sincere and has agood sense of humor" may get a lot of responses, but most of the people will be unsuitable. After all, most people believe that they have these qualities. Additionally, no one is going to advertise for a person who is "bad, insincere and has a poor sense of humor." Our strenghths and weaknesses are what make us who we are as individuals. It helps to share these qualities. By the same token, there are certain preferences that we have in others and certain characteristics that are definitely unacceptable. Share these as well.

You're really reaching out to an individual when you place a personal ad. Be honest with yourself and the other person. For instance, are you really sure that distance is no object? If someone lives 50 miles away, are you willing to make a 100 mile round trip each time you get together? Your children are now grown. Are you really willing to get involved with someone who has young children? If you are a college graduate, are you compatible with someone who has a high school diploma? The list can be endless when you pare away generailties. And of course, you are the only one who knows what you really like or dislike. Sharing this information is simply being honest.

It is important that your friends approve of what you do with your personal life? Supposing a friend were able to recognize you from your personal ad? I think a "true" friend would wish you well in our endeavor. If the friend is married, he or she amy not have an in depth understanding of the issues and conerns of the previosly married. You might ask how the plan to meet someone new after being divorced or widowed. If the friend is single or previously married, you might ask how active his or her social life is and what he or she is doing to meet others. Finally, what have you got to lose by running a personal ad? It may work for you and the gain will be well worth the effort. If it doesn't work for you, at least you know that you were willing to take another step in taking control of your own social life.

Do you have a question about dating and relating or learning to function as a single adult? Send it to the Singles Advisor co/Transcript Newspapers, 18 Pine St., P.O. Box 69, Waltham, MA 02154.

They came to celebrate motorcycle's 85th birthday

By Trudy Tynan
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD,(AP) — United by the growl of hundreds of kick-started engines, tatooed bikers, old motorcycle cops and white-haired retirees gathered at the Indian Motocycle Museum to celebrate the 85th birthday of American's first motorcycle recently.

More than 30 years after the teepee-shaped brick factory here turned out its last Indian, thousands of the big bikes, that for decades were the staple of law enforcement officers, outlaws and motorcycle couriers are still on the road.

"They were built with quality," said Esta Manthos, a retired insurance underwriter, who runs the museum with her husband, Charles. Some riders came from as far away as Oakland, Calif., for Sunday's annual rally, she said.

"There's just something about them," said Tim Marsh of Vernon, N.Y., who proclaimed his loyalty with an Indian head tatoo and a leather patch reading "Chief" riveted onto his denim vest.

"It's part of America and they're an extinct specis," Marsh said beside his lovingly restored, bright-red 1936 Indian Chief. "Saving them is just as important as saving a wild animal and, God, are they fun to ride."

His half-century-old bike can still hit 80 miles an hour, Marsh said.

Down at one end of the long rows of scores of restored Indians, Louise Scherbyn, 83, the founder and still president of the Women's International Motorcycle Club, her grey corksorew curls fluttering in the breeze of parading bikes, held court surrounded by a black-leather and frayed-denim vest crowd of tattooed bikers.

They listening respectfully, very respectfully, as she held forth on the vagaries and care of oil pumps built long before most of her audience was born.

She donated her white Scout cycle and the fancy white leathers she wore as a trick rider in the 1920s to the museum when she quit riding in her seventies.

"I wouldn't miss Indian Day for anything," said Mrs. Scherbyn as she passed out some of her literature to a young woman in denim with a Harley-Davidson tatoo peaking out of her decolletage.

A short way away George Murphy, a retired New Jersey state trooper, eagerly snapped pictures of restored 1942 Chief painted in the colors of the Massachusetts State Police. "Remember, Mary," he said turning to his wife. "It was like riding the wind."

"On Indian Day everyone is mellow," said Marsh said muching on a chicken leg. "It kind of bridges the generation gap. The bike gives me something to talk about when I meet a man in his 70s. Without it I wouldn't have anything to say."

One-way rentals encourage more motor home traveling

By Tom Fegely
The Allentown Morning Call

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — This summer my family and I plan to fulfill a long-awaited dream — to drive across the United States in a motor home. Our itinerary includes some of the typical stops — Mt. Rushmore, Yellowstone, Mesa Verde and the Grand Canyon — with a scattering of out-of-the-way visits.

I've traveled the West several times; the first time in a 1964 Ford Falcon full of clothes, pots, pans, lanterns and a tent. This time we'll be going in luxury — in a rented Winnebago Chieftain motor home.

I won't be the only one steering an RV rental of one sort or another across the country this summer. According to Bill Powers, general manager of Motor Camping America (MCA), domestic RV rentals increased 300 percent over 1985. MCA rents motor homes throughout the United States and Canada.

Powers said that 1986 also has seen the initial acceptance of a "one-way rental" option in which, like auto rentals, the units are picked up at one place and dropped off at another.

Another national rental firm, Cruise America, also indicates a rise in rentals for 1986 as well as its "fly-drive" program, which didn't get off the ground in previous years, but this year has taken wing. The fly-drive plan allows a vacationer to cut out the driving time to the area in which most of the vacation will be spent.

This year, as in most, the most popular region will be the West.

Vacationers could fly to Denver or San Francisco, for example, and be picked up at the airport by a dealer, who has a motor home waiting for them. They can tour the West and either bring the vehicle back to the original point or drop it off elsewhere.

"Our summer business is definitely skewed toward the western U.S.," said Bob Caldarone, Cruise America marketing director, "and is largely influenced by Expo '86 in Vancouver."

Caldarone said the Canadian Expo will be "the motor home rental event of the century." The Vancouver region is rich in outdoor attractions and has many commercial and provincial campgrounds.

U-Haul International also has gotten into the RV rental business and also shows rental reservations to be up 300 percent over last year's figures. U-Haul rents motor homes and folding camping trailers at more than 450 outlets nationwide.

Like U-Haul, a number of new and established businesses have entered the RV rental market. The list has grown to more than 300 companies for day, weekend, week long or monthly rentals.

Although round-trip rentals are the most economical and the most popular, one-way coast-to-coast options also are gaining acceptance. These only can be arranged through national agencies with scattered outlets, and the cost is higher than round-trip rentals.

Travel agents, too, are getting into the act. Some now work with rental dealers to satisfy their clients' needs. The better travel agencies also will book campsite reservations at national parks, resorts and private campgrounds much as they handle reservations at hotels.

Slowing down for wildlife a good idea

By Richard Harris

When I wrote about the speed limit in "Keeping Your Car Alive," I never expected that it would get me in trouble with my girlfriend.

I was commenting on the renewed controversy over the federal 55-mile-per-hour speed limit. I cited statistics on fuel efficiency and highway safety suggesting (a.) that there's no compelling reason to limit speed limits to 55 miles per hour in the wide open spaces of our Western states; and (b.) that the average driver exceeds that speed limit anyway.

"But what about animals?" Rita exclaimed when she read the column.

"Animals? Uh ... what about them?"

"The faster people drive, the more animals get run over! You just watch the next time you drive down the highway! Defenseless little skunks and possums and raccoons, beautiful deer, people's beloved pet dogs and cats — all lying dead on the roadside because they've been hit by cars! And endangered species — Congress says they want to protect endangered species, but do they care if a mountain lion gets run over on the interstate? And little birds that crash into windshields because they can't get out of the way in time...."

I stared open-mouthed and speechless. She was right — or at least, I couldn't think of a sound counter-argument.

When you're driving at night with your headlights on "bright," you can see about 500 feet ahead of your car. At 55 miles per hour, you can see an animal a little more than 6 seconds before you reach it; at 65 miles per hour, that time is cut to about 5 seconds, and at 70 miles per hour to 4½ seconds.

Your reaction time — how long it takes your brain to recognize an object and send a message to your foot to step on the brake pedal — takes the first two seconds, and the higher your speed, the longer it takes to slow or swerve the car to avoid an obstacle. So it's true — a nighttime driver stands twice the chance of avoiding animals on the road at 55 miles per hour as at 65.

When she'd calmed down a bit, Rita (who never drives a car at all because of environmental concerns) produced some statistics of her own. According to the Humane Society of the United States, 1 million animals and birds die on the nation's highways every day. That's about 12 animals per second, day and night, and the death toll rises annually! Possums, skunks and other slow-moving wildlife aren't the only victims. The Pennsylvania Game Commission, which compiles the most complete data on "road kills," reported that 25,788 deer and 116 bears were killed by cars in 1984 in that state alone.

"Why don't you write that in your column?" she demanded. "I'll bet nobody even thinks about wildlife safety when they drive."

If you won't read these 7 signals of cancer... You probably have the 8th.

1. Change in bowel or bladder habits.
2. A sore that does not heal.
3. Unusual bleeding or discharge.
4. Thickening or lump in breast or elsewhere.
5. Indigestion or difficulty in swallowing.
6. Obvious change in wart or mole.
7. Nagging cough or hoarseness.
8. A fear of cancer that can prevent you from detecting cancer at an early stage. A stage when it is highly curable. Everyone's afraid of cancer, but don't let it scare you to death.

CABLE TV INSTALLERS

Adams Russell Co. Inc., a major provider of cable television to over 63,000 homes in the Eastern Massachusetts area has a challenging position available at our Norwood, MA office.

This is an excellent opportunity for someone with a good general electronics background to enter the high growth field of cable television. In this entry level position, you will be responsible for installing cable into new customers' homes, checking signal strength and making sure all connections are grounded and the picture is clear. The first position in a strong career path, an installer can grow into positions in field service and line maintenance. You should possess either prior work experience in electronics or some formal training in the area, a desire to work outdoors and an interest in dealing with people. We will provide you with training, tools and a vehicle.

Adams-Russell Co. Inc. is a leader in cable television with cable operations nationwide and a consistent growth rate of 15–20% per year. We offer a competitive salary, an excellent benefits package and superior growth potential. For prompt consideration, please forward a resume or a listing of prior work experience to Tom Garcia, Chief Technician, Adams-Russell Co. Inc., 375 Vanderbilt Avenue, Norwood, MA 02062. We are an equal opportunity employer.

Vancouver may steal the show from its own world's fair

By SUSAN R. POLLACK
The Detroit News

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — Just 100 years after its founding, the city once called the Village-on-the-Edge-of-the-Rain Forest is about to take its place in the sun.

All eyes were on Vancouver May 2, when the ribbon was cut to officially open Expo '86, the $1.5 billion extravaganza whose early promise suggests it could redeem the image of world fairs sullied in recent years by Knoxville and New Orleans.

But while Canada's man-made exposition will take center stage, the natural attractions of this scenic city may just steal the show.

Vancouver is among the most beautifully situated cities in the world, ranking with Rio de Janeiro and Hong Kong. Wedged on an outcrop of land between Burrard Inlet and the Fraser River, it is cradled by majestic coastal mountains and cooled by Pacific breezes.

When not shrouded in clouds, the snowcapped peaks form a stunning backdrop for the city's gleaming downtown skyscrapers, acres of emerald green urban parks and waterfronts studded with an armada of ferries, freighters, cruise ships, sailboats and yachts. Add to this superb public transporation, a cosmopolitan ambience and a mild year-round climate moderated by the Japan Current, Kuroshio, and you've got a destination that most tourism publicists can only dream about.

The only glitch in the scenario (there's always something) is rain. Vancouver gets buckets of it, averaging 60 inches in the downtown area per year, though most of it falls between the non-Expo months of November and March.

First impressions can tell a lot about a place. Mine came aboard a Hustle Bus ($5.75 Canadian) which practically greeted our plane at Vancouver International Airport and whisked its weary load of passengers downtown in 20 minutes. On airport-adjoining roads usually given over to industry, we passed tidy little houses and yards brimming with a rainbow profusion of flowers; bushes and shrubs were neatly sculpted into mushroom, gumdrop and cone shapes, lending an overall impression of Candyland.

The Expo Center in Vancouver, British Columbia marks the spot of Expo '86 which opened May 2. AP photo

Yet Vancouver's private plots are only a prelude to all the areas set aside as public gardens and nature preserves. Foremost among them is Stanley Park, a 1,000-acre tract of Douglas firs, red cedars and wilderness trails just five minutes west of downtown. Here, visitors tired of the tourist shuffle may pause to watch a rollicking game of cricket or rugby, snap photos by the totem poles near Hallelujah Point or join the joggers, cyclists and roller-skaters on the seven-mile-long seawall promendade.

Stanley Park is also a good vantage point for mountain and ocean views, followed by a stop for Sunday brunch at Ferguson Point Teahouse overlooking English Bay; reservations are advised. Kids will enjoy the kangaroos and the killer and Beluga whales at the newly expanded ocean acquarium, Canada's largest.

Leading into the park along Robson Street is Robsonstrasse, a strand of charming European-strle cafes, shops, bakeries and delis that now share space with upscale boutiques and sushi bars. Join the literary crowd lunching on Golden Mantle oysters at Binky's Oyster Bar, 784 Thurlow, or on raw fish at Kamei Sushi, 811 Thurlow.

These days, as "Expo Fever" grips the city, Vancouverities are outdoing themselves festooning their homes with flowers and sprucing up their parks, buidings and shops to greet the estimated 15 million visitors expected to descend on the fair. Besides the Expo pavilions rising on the False Creek fairgrounds, several new attractions have added to the cityscape in recent months.

Perhaps the most eyecatching is Canada Place, the national host pavilion that will serve as Vancouver's permanent convention center and cruiseship terminal after the fair. Jutting out over Burrard Inlet, it's shaped like a giant ocean liner, with five billowing white Teflon-coated fiberglass sails soaring above. The futureistic complex is anchored by the Japanese-built Pan Pacific, an elegant new luxury hotel (one of several built in time for Expo) where suites rent up to $1,000 per day.

Canada Place is linked to the fairgrounds a mile away by the new SkyTrain, an elevated monorail that made its debut in January. The high-tech rapid transit system, with cruising speeds of up to 50 miles per hour, follows a 13.5-mile route from Vancouver's waterfront through the suburbs.

Also new is the Dr. Sun Yat-Sen Garden, behind the Chinese Cultural Center at 50 East Pender. Constructed by artisans from the People's Republic, it's a classical walled Ming Dynasty garden, said to be the only one of its kind built since 1492. With bridges, temples, framed views and intimate spaces, it's modeled after the 15th-century garden compound of Suzhou, China's leading "garden" city, which sent a representative to serve as chief architect of the project. Touted as "refreshment for the heart," the garden may be a welcome respite from the glitz and bustle of the fair.

On your way to the new garden, soak up the sights and sounds of Vancouver's Chinatown, the second largest in North America (10 percent of the city's 1.2 million population is Chinese). You'll pass pagoda-topped phone booths, wrinkled Chinese grandmothers clad in black pajamas, herbalist shops and barbecued ducks hanging feet side up. Look for No. 8 Pender, a five-foot wide bulding that is reputed to be the world's narrowest, and try the custard tarts at Maxim's Chinese Bakery. 257 Keefer.

Just north of Chinatown is historic Gastown, where Vancouver began in the late 1860s when "Gassy" Jack Deighton canoed in with a couple of barrels of whisky to open a saloon. A few years later, Vancouver's future was assured when the growing logging community was selected as the western terminus of the Trans-Canada railroad. This year, both the city (Canada's third largest) and the Canadian Pacific Railway are marking their centennials with special events coinciding with Expo.

Gastown, after bottoming out during the 1960s as a notorious Skid Row, is today a revitalized district of red-brick sidewalks, antique street lamps, restored Victorian buildings, Indian art galleries and cafes catering to the tourist trade. Its landmark is a steam-powered clock, circa 1875, that plays the opening notes of London's Westminster chimes on the quarter hour.

Stop by Umberto Al Porto to sample homemade pasta and other quality Italian fare of one of Vancouver's premier chefs, Umberto Menghi, who also operates three higher-priced restaurants (specializing in game, seafood and northern Italian) across town on Hornby Street.

Umberto's Gastown Restaurant offers a great view of the harbor in this decidedly water-oriented city, which boasts the largest seaport on the Pacific Coast and handles more grain and other dry tonnage than all other West Coast ports — Los Angeles, Seattle, San Francisco and San Diego — combined.

Vancouverites, with more than 100 miles of waterfront, know how to take advantage of their settings. Many commuters zip to work via SeaBus, transferring from regular busses and cars to the aluminum catamaran-like vessels that are designed with two front ends so they don't have to turn around. And an estimated one in four residents owns a boat — some even live on them in an upsacle community of houseboats moored at Granville Island, a former industrial park transformed into a bright urban playground of shops, cafes and marinas on False Creek.

Reserve at least a half day for the island, starting off with blueberry crumpets at the colorful Granville Island Public Market. Work up an appetite browsing among pyramids of fist-sized strawberries, jumbo artichokes, glistening pastas, and ducks and rabbits so fresh-looking you'd swear you almost saw them blink.

Wash down your snacks with Granville Island beer, an unpasteurized lager made on the island, and try to catch a tour of the small brewery. You could spend hours studying the avant garde works displayed at the Emily Carr College of Art and exploring such boutiques as Kids Only with its innovative toys, clothing and coloring books. Take home a souvenir from Circle craft, a cooperative featuring the works of two dozen British Columbia artists.

Just across the bridge leading to Granville Island is Jade World, 1696 W. 1st Ave., a factory where workers carve objects from jade mined in mountains 800 miles north of Vancouver, in areas where snow can fall every month of the year. The firm also ships 100 tons of jade annually to the Orient, where it's carved and reshipped back to Vancouver giftshops. British Columbia, famous for its jade, accounts for 60 to 70 percent of the world's supply.

From Granville Island, it's not far to the University of British Columbia campus, with its fine gardens and Museum of Anthropology, respected for its architecture and fine displays of Northwest Indian culture. Near campus is Wreck beach, were nude sunbathers vie for sightseeing interest with Vancouver's mountains and other natural attractions.

Games amuse traveling kids

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

As summer vacations come into full swing, so too comes a challenge to parents — keeping the kids amused on those long car trips.

To help solve the problem, the editors at Penny Power magazine, a Consumer Reports publication for young people, enlisted the aid of elementary school kids in Sterling Heights, Mich., and Wareham, Mass. The kids were asked to evaluate 15 games especially designed for travel.

Each game was tested by at least eight youngsters — and one was tried by 32. The testers were looking for more than fun — they were also seeking convenience. A good travel game should be easy to carry and playable in a small space. It should also sit well on a bumpy car seat or a tippy airline tray.

Judged very good by the young testers was Mad Libs, a fill-in-the-blanks word game. One person asks others to call out a noun, a verb and so on. Then a story is read out loud, using those words. Said one tester, "It was different each time we played and it was usually hilarious."

Mad Libs can be played alone or with any number of people, including the driver. After finishing the 20 stories in the pad, you can erase the fill-ins or buy another book with different stories. The only problem kids noted was that it might be hard to write on the pad on a bumpy trip. Priced at about $2, it was one of only two travel games that tickled everyone who tried them.

Also rated very good was Hi-Q, a strategy game for one person. To begin, you place pegs in the 32 holes on the small, plastic playing board, leaving the center hole empty. Then you jump one peg over another, like checkers. The goal is to end up with one peg left, smack dab in the center.

The players found Hi-Q challenging and fun. They didn't get bored either, since each try took only a few minutes. "You could play it forever," said several testers.

The pegs may be stored inside the board. Since the little pieces are easy to lose, the game comes with several extra pegs. A few testers suggested playing Hi-Q only on smooth roads. One said, "The pieces go flying if you go over a hard bump." Hi-Q sells for about $4.

Rated good and pleasing most of the kids who tested them were five smaller, travel versions of familiar games: Scrabble, Connect Four, Battleship, Yahtzee, and Checkers. Played much like the original games, the travel editions are specially designed so that the game pieces won't jiggle around during play. They also have places to store loose pieces. But the testers warned that the pieces could still easily be lost.

Also rated good were four card games: Mad Magazine, Giant Fish, Crazy Eights and Uno. The testers like playing cards on trips because the games are short and take up very little room. Some of the kids complained, though, that it was hard to shuffle and hold the slippery cards of the Uno and Mad Magazine games.

Two games rated OK were generally liked but had problems. Spellbound, a word game in which players try to make words from a column of letters, demanded too much writing — a difficult task in a moving car. Trivia, Jr.'s questions were criticized. Some testers thought they were too hard, some said too easy.

At the bottom of the list was Car Bingo. Most of the kids found the game too easy and boring. Also rated poor was Pocket Scrabble. It had too many alphabet pieces and they were too small for most players. "It was so boring to set up that we just quit," said one.

Buying a bike?

Different spokes different folks

By Randolph E. Schmid
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The city trails and country roads are beckoning millions of Americans to the bike paths for fun and exercise, with many who haven't cycled since childhood buying new two-wheelers.

Would-be riders may be bewildered by the variety of bikes and options on sale, but picking the most suitable one needn't be complex.

There are different spokes for different folks — so to speak — so the answer is to analyze ahead of time how and where the bike will be used, the budget available and the types of equipment, such as seat and handlebars, desired.

Thinking about those things in advance will make it a lot easier to sort through the options at the bike shop.

If cost is a consideration, and it is for most people, the range is pretty wide. Bikes can be had from less than $100 to $2,000 or more, the Bicycle Manufacturers Association observes.

The simple, old fashioned single-speed bike is usually the cheapest, with the price rising through the three-speed numbers to the lightweight many-speed racers.

So, the Bicycle Federation says, think about what kind of terrain the bike will be used on, and how long the rides will be.

People living in a relatively flat area like New York or Los Angeles, using bikes mostly for short trips on weekends, could be well satisfied with inexpensive single-speed or three-speed models.

On the other hand, riders in San Francisco or West Virginia or other spots with lots of steep roads are more likely to be happy with a 10-speed to help ease the strain of the hills.

An occasional recreational ride or trip to the convenience store, of course, requires a less sophisticated bike than longer rides over varied terrain.

The bike federation notes that riders can always trade up if their riding needs grow and they decide a more costly and complicated bike is in order.

Another factor to consider before making a purchase is maintenance — the more complicated the bike, the more effort required to keep it in good operating condition. And more complicated machinery means more possibilities for malfunctions.

Folks who aren't handy with tools will want to keep their bikes and equipment as simple as possible.

Arrival at a bike shop may still come as a shock to folks who haven't ridden in a while. The bikes don't look quite the same as in years past, what with narrow seats (they call them saddles now) and upside-down handlebars.

The so-called Maes-bend handlebars help cyclists lower their heads, increasing efficiency by reducing wind resistance. The narrow, hard seats are preferred by racers.

Both of these developments are only uncomfortable at first; riders get used to them, the Bicycle Federation insists.

Be that as it may, they also concede that riders who only want to take a spin around the neighborhood may be happier with old-fashioned touring handlebars and wider seats.

Don't be put off by salespeople spouting the perils of the "derailleur." That's just the device that allows a multi-speed bike to shift. Derailleur means gearshift, in this case.

Shifting gears allows more efficient use of human-power in different situations — but whether the bike is one-speed, 3-speed, 10-speed or more, it only has the speed its rider can give it.

The term lightweight can also have a variety of meanings.

The bike manufacturers report that most lightweight bikes are between 25 and 30 pounds. Using extremely light alloys can cut this to 20 pounds or so, but that raises the price.

Brakes are another consideration — with pedal-operated coaster, or hand brakes, the two common options.

Coaster brakes are generally reliable and long-wearing. Hand-operated caliper brakes, usually found on the multi-speed models, can be too, although they may take a little getting used to.

Finally, accessories must be considered and those depend on the desires of the biker.

A light biking helmet is very desirable from a safety standpoint, as well as a light and reflectors. Other options will vary by need, such as a child carrier, carrying rack and so forth. People who want these items need to make sure the bike they buy is suitable for the attachments.

Finally, the League of American Wheelmen urges bikers to take along a basic emergency kit on their travels. The league says this should contain a tire pump, patch kit, spare tube, tire levers, small screwdriver, adjustable wrench and, just in case, bus fare.

Planning makes summer car renting easier and cheaper

NEW YORK (AP) — City dwellers who want to rent a car for a summer getaway should plan ahead, suggests the president of an automobile rental organization. These tips will make the transaction more pleasant and economical, according to George Badcock, president of Budget Rent A Car of Manhattan:

— Always reserve your car early — for summer weekends make your reservation by Wednesday. When making a reservation ask for a confirmation number and the name of the person taking your reservation.

— Know your needs. If you're planning a weekend or weeklong vacation with the family, which requires a lot of luggage, a sedan may not provide sufficient space. Most rental companies offer station wagons or passenger vans and the convenience might be worth the extra cost.

— Avoid rush hours. Rental counters are normally heavily congested on Fridays from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. and Saturdays from 8 a.m. to noon. If possible, avoid these times.

— If you plan on renting a car every weekend, inquire about monthly rates. You may find this to be the least expensive way to rent, in addition to the fact that you have the car available if needed midweek.

— Check to see if parking is available for your rental car. Some companies have arrangements with parking lots where cutomers are given a substantial discount on parking.

— If you have small children, be sure to ask when making your reservation about the availability and cost of renting a child's seat.

— Check for damages. Before accepting any rental car, be sure the car is either damage free or that any damages on the car are noted on the contract. Otherwise, you could be held liable for those damages.

— Know who you're dealing with. If you plan on renting a car regularly from one location, introduce yourself to the manager of that location. After that, you can usually be assured that the car you request will be put aside for you.

GROW SOMETHING BEAUTIFUL IN YOUR BACKYARD THIS SUMMER. A FRESH AIR FRIENDSHIP.
For over 109 years, The Fresh Air Fund has been bringing city children to Friendly Towns like yours.
Special towns where a city child can discover the coolness of a stream, the warm smile of a friendly face, a hometown parade on Main Street, or just the green grass of your backyard.
Caring towns where people like you share two weeks of their lives with a city child. And in return share in the joy of a lifetime.
So start a beautiful friendship in your backyard this summer by becoming a Friendly Town Host. Or if you can't host, help with a contribution. Either way a city child will never forget how friendly you and your town can be.
Open up your heart. Open up your home.

Tips on cleaning the grill

From Better Homes and Gardens
A Meredith Magazine

Do you get burned up over cleaning your grill.

To avoid flare-ups — of your temper, that is — Better Homes and Gardens offers these tips to make a necessary chore easier, faster, and less messy.

Get a head start:

— Line the inside of the firebox with heavy foil. Why heavy foil? Because when you've finished the grilling and the ashes have cooled, you can bundle up the foil and throw it away — ashes and all. The heavy foil is stronger and less likely to tear and make a mess.

— An ounce of prevention is worth a lot of scrubbing. Spray the cold grill rack with a nonstick vegetable spray coating before cooking.

Tricks for the cleanup crew:

— Remove the rack from over the coals as soon as you're done cooking. Cover both sides of the rack with wet paper towels or newspapers and let stand while you eat. Later, the burned-on food will usually wash right off. Or, fill a large tub with hot, sudsy water and put the rack in the water to soak while you eat.

— To remove stubborn burned-on food from your grill, sprinkle dry baking soda on a damp sponge and lightly scour the grill rack. Or, scrub the grill rack with an abrasive-type cleaning pad, crumpled foil or a stiff grill brush. Read the cleaning and care directions that are supplied with your barbecue equipment before you use any cleaning products or abrasives to clean your grill rack.

Gas grill gimmicks:

— Clean the inside of your gas grill by turning the gas burners to the high setting. Close the hood and let the grill self-clean about 15 minutes. Let the grill cool, then wipe off the burned food particles.

Theme parks foresee boom

By Steve Baker
Associated Press Writer

PIGEON FORGE, Tenn. (AP) — There's Big Surf and there's Dogpatch, Magic Mountain and Six Flags, Carowinds and Hersheypark, and of course Sea World, Disney World and Worlds of Fun. If you need another escape from the Real World, now there's also Dollywood.

The latest addition to the nation's theme parks is the brainchild of entertainer Dolly Parton.

The park, which opened here May 3, boasts 100 acres of rides and a recreation of the Smoky Mountain lore the singer remembers from her childhood.

More and more, travel agents say, people are looking for an all-in-one stop for their vacation trip, and amusement parks built around a theme are filling the order.

"That way they don't have to travel all over. It's right there," said Columbus, Ohio, travel agent Susan Fixter.

At Dollywood, a $5.5 million expansion of Silver Dollar City, an 1880s historical theme park with rides, mountain craft demonstrations and music performances, the theme now is Dolly. Tourism officials estimate the park may attract 1 million visitors a year, double Silver Dollar City's draw.

"Dolly speaks the same language as people here," said Billy Baker, the park's publicist who works nightly in the show hall as a comedian. "She's like a local girl who hit it big, but hasn't forgotten that she was brought into this world by a doctor who was paid only a bag of corn meal for his work."

Dollywood includes a museum with Miss Parton's souvenirs and mementos, including costumes from her movies. Daily performances are held at Parton's Back Porch Theater.

At other theme parks, attractions vary from Arizona's manmade beach at Big Surf and the gunfights of Old Tucson to the kissing tower with candy-kiss-shaped windows at Hersheypark in Pennsylvania.

Massachusetts' Old Sturbridge Village depicts life in the 1830s with tours of a 200-acre re-created rural community. Another re-creation, the ersatz Bavarian Village in Frankenmuth, Mich., is expecting "a boom year," said Chamber of Commerce director Jon Kreucher.

So are Dogpatch, the Li'l Abner theme park in Harrison, Ark., and Worlds of Fun and Oceans of Fun, outside Kansas City.

Who's attracted to theme parks?

"A lot of older people are doing Alaska. ... Young people are doing Jamaica; families still like Walt Disney World," said travel agent Michelle Whitfield in Columbia, S.C.

But Ms. Fixter said young married couples and retirees also seek bookings to Disney World near Orlando, Fla.

Who's not attracted to theme parks?

The writer Calvin Trillin, in an article for The Miami Herald's Tropic magazine in March, visualized "RodeoLand USA," a fictional theme park substitute for actually attending a rodeo. It has a display of stuffed bulls, maybe a mechanical bronco ride, a multimedia exhibit of rodeo history and a modern grandstand from which families take in "two or three representative rodeo events." Snack bars and souvenir shops keep to the rodeo theme.

"The entire visit will be over in 45 minutes," Trillin wrote. "Cowboys will have been seen. Albuquerque will be reached by dark."

It's not just cowboys who make the Six Flags Over Texas theme park that state's most popular single tourist stop. With visitors from all over, the Dallas attraction expects attendance to remain steady at 2.5 million this year, said spokesman Bruce Neal.

More than 21 million people traveled to Disney World last year, and officials say there'll be nothing Mickey-Mouse about 1986 attendance figures. The evolving park's latest lure is a pavilion called The Living Seas.

Disneyland, which competes for the Southern California tourist's dollar with such theme parks as Sea World and Magic Mountain, opens a live animal exhibit in July.

What's new at Kings Dominion, north of Richmond, Va., is a stand-up thrill ride called Shockwave. Officials there and at other parks such as Busch Gardens got a helping hand from the Virginia General Assembly, which passed a bill requiring that public school classes start after Labor Day, thus allowing student workers to stay on through summer's last holiday.

An impediment to some amusement parks is liability insurance trouble. Some attractions have protested rising costs, and the operators of the Cyclone rollercoaster at New York's Coney Island complain the $5 million policy that the city requires is unavailable.

Rides based on biblical stories are planned for Heritage USA, which bills itself as a Christian theme park, but now visitors partake of boat rides, horse stables and dinner theater. Spokesman Neil Eskelin says the 500-room hotel at park in Fort Mill, S.C., is sold out for the summer.

Not far away, near Charlotte, N.C., the Carowinds amusement park is gearing up for a "gangbusters" summer, said spokeswoman Claire Lang. "The phones are ringing off the hook."

FINALLY, WE'RE GIVING A KILLER DISEASE SOME OF ITS OWN MEDICINE.

A disease that once put an end to its victims, may soon be put to an end itself.

The disease, carnitine deficiency, destroys the body's ability to produce carnitine, a muscle-fueling substance. Until recently, carnitine deficiency meant certain disability. Often, it meant death.

In the past year, though, carnitine replacement therapy—developed with funding from the Muscular Dystrophy Association—has allowed fully half the patients treated to resume normal lives.

Carnitine replacement therapy is one of the most encouraging developments in MDA's fight against 40 neuromuscular diseases. And for one of those dread diseases, it could be the beginning of the end.
